

City's Executive

As city manager Wilbur Purcell heads the team that administers local government in Belleville. He's the man who must advise council and put its instructions to work.

Active Organization

Summer Brings Dollars

Marmora does not have any local manufacturing industry and relies upon a solid farming community for year-round support of its business community as well as local residents. Summer is when business swells and the economy is boosted. Jack Reynolds, pictured here looking over the downtown area, has been reeve for five years and on council since 1967.

Ex Poster Made By Local Student

When people read the advertising posters publicizing this year's Quinte Exhibition, they will recognize the work of a talented artist but by age 11. Deirdre Ashton, a student at Queen Elizabeth Elementary School in Trenton.

Kim LaFleur, daughter of Lois and Ross LaFleur of 21 West St. in Trenton, won a $25 first prize recently when her poster was selected as the pick of seven to eleven others in a poster contest sponsored by the Quinte Exhibition and organized by the junior advertising class at Loyalist College.

The contest was devised to enable area elementary school students to display their artistic talents and draw a public poster which could be used in exhibition advertising.

Co-ordinator and manager of the project was Dave Bell, a Grade 7 student at Prince Charles.

Second prize winner was Jennifer Pile of Picton, a Grade 7 student at Athol Central and the third place finisher was Karen Mair, a Grade 3 student at Prince Charles in Trenton.

Receiving honorable mention were Barb Perry, Grade 7, Athol Central; Sandra McDonald, Grade 7, Prince Charles in Trenton; Dave Hill, Grade 7, Sir Mackenzie Bowell in Belleville; Karen Harris, Grade 3, Prince Charles in Trenton; Karen Wilson, Grade 7, Sir Mackenzie Bowell; Kimberlee Avery, Grade 8, Queen Elizabeth in Trenton; Rusty Quinn, Grade 4, Kente; Dana Walker, Grade 4, Prince of Charles in Trenton; and Lynn Ann Wilkinson, Athol Central in Cherry Valley.

Hastings Warden Speaks On County's Future

Hastings County of course has many unique characteristics, varying from most counties in Ontario. When we think of our County being over 100 miles in length, running from the shores of Lake Ontario to north of Maynooth, we realize that we have a considerable variation in climatic conditions alone.

Most people understand that when the fields are bare in the south part of Hastings, there is often plenty of snow in the north to accommodate all types of winter sports. Coupled with our variation in climate, we have of course extreme variations in topography. The northern townships are mainly suited to agriculture, with industrial development around Belleville and Trenton.

The further north we go the more changes in grade rock with many wooded areas and beautiful lakes and streams. This are is naturally suited to lumbering, mining and tourism.

I feel that the County of Hastings has a great potential for growth. Situated as we are, midway between the proposed Pickering airport and the proposed industrial part at Prescott, we are bound to feel the full-off effects of these two huge developments. It would appear that secondary industry would be interested in locating in this area.

In connection with these two large developments, there will no doubt be a large influx of people into those areas. These people must have some place for recreation and where would there be a better place for them to enjoy themselves than beautiful Hastings County where we have so much to offer. The Highlands of Hastings Tourist Council is a very active group and recently presented a plan for a 300,000 acres Charlotsville park in several Cabinet ministers at a meeting in Belleville. This brief was well received by the Cabinet ministers, and it pointed out that there were an estimated 40 million people within an easy day's drive of the area.

The recent announcement of the re-opening of Faraday uranium mine is a prime example of the potential of Hastings. With fossil fuels becoming scarce in the world it make uranium a valuable asset. Mr. Del Wilson, manager of Faraday mine recently announced that 200 employees would be needed at the mine by 1976 and also predicted that other mines would be opened as we are on the eve of a uranium boom.

Agriculture is the main industry in seven of the southern townships with other areas of good farmland scattered throughout the county. Dairying continues to be the backbone of the industry, and Hastings is famous for it's cheddar cheese which is very popular with tourists. Beef cattle numbers have increased considerably in the past several years, due mainly to more strict regulations and the lack of adequate help in the dairy industry. Farms will continue to grow in size mainly from consolidation, and as world food supplies become more scarce, agriculture will play an even more important role than it has in the past.

In closing, I feel sure that this area will continue to grow and prosper, and hopefully we can direct that growth to the benefit of the citizens of the County of Hastings.

William H. McCrea,
Warden,
County of Hastings.

IN ORBIT 10 YEARS

The giant winged satellite Pegasus was put in orbit around the earth 10 years ago to measure potential hazards of meteorites to astronauts and spacecraft.

Toy Lending Library

Susan McConnell, project supervisor, is seen here tidying up the shelves in the basement room at Queen Mary Public School where the Toy Lending Library opened its doors in January, sponsored by a Local Initiatives Project grant. The library is stocked with toys, dolls, games and books that appeal to its pre-school clientele, who may become members simply by coming along with an adult or two in tow.

Placement Record Good

If the student placement record at Loyalist College is any indication, Ontarios community colleges are far outstripping universities in finding related employment for graduates.

Charley Benson of Loyalist's student service department says the colleges are 90 per cent successful across the province in that facet. "The universities can't come near that," he notes.

Of 37 student who continued to higher studies, 30 returned to Loyalist.

Belleville Gets $26,000 For Home Improvements

Belleville has received $26,000 in its first application for funds under the Ontario Home Renewal Program (OHRP).

The availability of OHRP loans for qualifying homeowners through city hall now will be advertised.

City council earlier this year sent in its formal application for OHRP funds to which it was entitled during the 1974 provincial fiscal year. The request was for the full allotment of $26,000.

However, the request apparently came too late for the city to benefit from the full amount.

City manager Wilbur Purcell explained the reason in a memo to council recently: "I understand the full amount is not being approved as the fiscal year was ending and the full amount would not likely be utilized."

However, in the present 1975 fiscal year council may apply for more OHRP funds as "the need ... cannot exceed $26,000."

Mayor Robin Jeffery said after Monday's meeting the city would be seeking more OHRP funding.

The prime objective of the program, reported Mr. Purcell, is to assist with repairs of faulty structural and sanitary conditions, and upgrade plumbing, heating and electrical systems in homes. Details will be available from city hall.

City council will approve the loans after processing through city hall administrators.

Brown's Ornamental Iron Works . . . Progressing with the Times

Vivian and Dean Brown started Brown's Ornamental Iron Works in the garage of their Main Street West home some 14 years ago.

Since that time, they have never looked back.

The Brown's are a very ambitious couple; they worked together developing only the very highest standard in the manufacturing and production of wrought iron works and miscellaneous steel.

The industry at that time was just branching out into a very lucrative field with the construction of new housing developments and industrial expansions in the Belleville area.

Wrought iron railings for homes and steel stair structures being in demand at the time, it afforded the Brown's opportunity of expanding from their garage to a co-operate company in 1970 and purchased the building at 39 College Street West.

Dean Brown is a highly-skilled craftsman in the iron works trade, and this skill is certainly very evident in his creations.

The trade demands imagination and excellence in creating unique wrought iron designs for Commercial, Industrial and Residential contracts.

Dean not only designs very unusual and complicated orders, but he also manufacturers them and installs them with the assistance of his very capable staff.

Skilled men are difficult to find in this trade very few young men are willing to devote the necessary time and energies learning this very demanding trade.

Long hours and patience must be exerted at all times to truly achieve the goal as a wrought iron and steel craftsman. Spend is also very essential contracts must be filled promptly so that the entire project isn't held up and the construction company is kept satisfied and happy.

Dean Brown is very optimistic toward the start of young men be employes today He feels they are really contributing a great deal to the success of the business and is very hopeful they will continue to be part of his operation and devotion into expert craftsmen, thus relieving him from the bulk of the operation's workload.

Brown's Ornamental Iron Works is a smoothly run operation. Mrs. Brown supervises the plant when Dean is out on the site and works right along with the men in the plant.

Since she started in the business from square one, she knows exactly what has to be produced during the day and knows every phase of the operation, having performed every one of them herself at one time or another. Knowing the importance of deadlines to the company, Mrs. Brown organizes her staff to perform their tasks in a rigid and precision-like fashion.

Her favorite phase of the operation is in the painting room; a separate room from the plant which contains the paint and varnish which Mr. Dean designed and constructed himself.

The vats stretch 16 feet long and are five feet deep and will hold some 300 gallons of paint at one time.

A modern and unique spraying system is in operation and Mrs. Brown exercises this tedious and time consuming operation with the utmost care and a high degree of skill.

A great deal of satisfaction is expressed on her face after she has completed a piece of work; and here again, speed is of great importance.

It is difficult to train a person for the painting operation, according to Mrs. Brown, to achieve the degree of workmanship Brown's Ornamental Iron Works demands in their finished products.

Dedication to the job is the key if one is to be successful.

Brown's Ornamental Iron Works is the most modernly equipped plant in Eastern Ontario. Brown's have been through many operations in Ontario to gain new ideas and inspect the equipment of other companies in the trade. They are satisfied that their operation is second to none, compared to others in the industry.

Large investments have been continuously made to upgrade the standards of their operation. A unique welding machine was just recently purchased, making the job less time-consuming and adding to the efficient operation.

A larger tractor trailer has just been constructed to move the large steel structures and balconies from the plant to the construction sites.

During the steel crisis of last year, Dean Brown had to investigate every possible source of supply to maintain a steel inventory to meet the growing demands of the construction industry. Over $20,000 loss of sales is used in the company's yearly production; and steel rose to an amazingly high percentage in cost over the past year.

Brown's Ornamental Iron Works have contributed many Commercial and Industrial jobs during the past year: The Applewood Building by Harwood Developments where they installed the steel stair casing and iron work; Leslies Shoe Store; Belmont Restaurant; O'Brien's Funeral Home and the wrought iron design at Modern Cafe.

Most of their operation involves the Commercial and Industrial trade and Brown's are sub-contractors for Rollins Construction and Lambert Construction for new industrial and commercial buildings.

The company is active in custom fabricating iron and sign to the finished job. This includes railings, steel stairs, fire escapes, miscellaneous metals and sliding factory partitions.

This leaves very little time to fill the constant stream of private resident orders which flow into their plant day after day. Reluctantly, Mr. Brown is forced to turn them down. Due to the increased demands with the Industrial Parks, Brown's Ornamental don't have the time to fill them.

Brown's Ornamental Iron works has come a long way since 1961. A success story in Reel . . . from humble beginings, a company developed their company through untiring efforts and demand for precision and high quality workmanship.

Brown's Ornamental Iron Works are noted for their quality craftsmanship . . . after all, that's what they built their business on!

The Hi/Re/Li Heat Pump

If you are building a new home, or planning on putting in a new furnace with a central air conditioning system it might be a good idea to consider a unit called a heat pump.

This is essentially a central air conditioner with added features to reverse itself automatically to heating. This means, that in winter, you use the outside air to heat your home, the same as you cool your home in summer, by removing the warm inside air. These units now are efficient to an outside temperature of -20 degrees F. Although auxiliary heat is required at low temperatures this is provided by electric heating elements incorporated in the heat pump. Even when the temperature drops to -20 degrees a certain amount of low cost heat is still supplied by the heat pump and the total fuel saving for the year is substantial.

Because a heat pump only moves heat and does not have to produce it, it operates with remarkable efficiency, you actually get more heat energy out of it than you put into it, as high as 3 to 1 compared to something like .7 to 1 for oil or gas and 1 to 1 for electricity.

Police To Take Pulpits

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

Two of Belleville's finest will take to the pulpits next week in two city churches to preach on law and order as part of celebrations marking Law Enforcement Week (May 11-17).

City Police Chief Douglas Crosbie will talk on "Law and order in society today" to the congregation of St. Thomas' Anglican Church on Sunday in the parish hall on East Bridge St.

Chief Crosbie is a member of St. Thomas'. The Sunday 11 a.m. services are being held in the parish hall on an interim basis following last week's church fire.

Inspector Ralph Blatchford of city police will speak at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on May 18. He says he will decide on his subject later.

Both sermons will take the place of the regular sermons by the church ministers.

Boy Slain, Suspect Hit by Car

TORONTO (CP) — Ronald Steven Ryan, 20, of Toronto was under guard in hospital today after being struck in a hit-and-run mail parking lot Tuesday night by police investigating the slaying of a 15-year-old boy.

Police said Ryan has been charged with murder punishable by life imprisonment in the death of Michael Habbib of Toronto.

Ryan was struck by three or four police bullets during a gun battle at the Scarborough Town Centre mall an hour after Habbib was shot to death at the Fairview Mall parking lot, about five miles away.

A witness to the first shooting said Habbib was shot at close range by two men who approached him in a stolen car in the mall parking lot.

The car later was put under police surveillance.

A witness to the second shooting said a man got out of a car and started walking away when an unmarked police cruiser approached and struck him.

The man got up and started to run and two police officers chased him and a number of shots were fired, the witness said.

Bell Cuts Number Of New Directories

HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Bell Canada will distribute fewer telephone directories this year.

The number of copies is down more than 8,000 in the Belleville exchange area.

The move, says the company, is "in the interests of conservation" and will see only one directory delivered to each household.

However, says George Thompson, Bell's Belleville manager, subscribers wishing a second directory need only phone the company to obtain one.

The new conservation policy does not apply to business offices.

"We've taken surveys which show that most residential subscribers want only one directory," said Mr. Thompson.

As a result, 92,600 copies of the new directory will be delivered — 8,170 fewer than in 1974.

"Bell's change in policy reflects the company's concern for cutting down on pollution and for the need to conserve our natural resources," said Mr. Thompson.

Business offices have been canvassed to "identify as closely as possible their specific requirements".

Bell plans to start distributing the 1975 directory in the Belleville area July 16, and distribution should be completed in 10 days. Telephone number for householders to call for a second directory is 968-5720.

The new directory has some changes.

Its introductory information pages have a new format.

"A new type face and new arrangement of the information makes these pages easier to read . . . It's easier to pick out the information you want," said Mr. Thompson.

The directory is enclosed in cover with a lavender blue-green pattern depicting the "dynamics of telecommunications" in Canada. Color scheme of the 1974 directory covers was brown and yellow.

Other details: The Belleville-area directories consumed 125 gallons of ink and 811 of special glue which distributors have recycled or disposed of as garbage.

Silicosis Sufferers Assisted

TORONTO (CP) — Uranium miners in Ontario suffering job-caused silicosis will be paid 75 per cent of lost wages to encourage them to seek less hazardous work, Labor Minister John MacBeth said Tuesday.

The announcement followed release of a health ministry report which showed 187 workers at the Elliot Lake and Bancroft mines had developed permanent scarring of the lungs which might lead to tuberculosis and another 29 with exposure to uranium mining conditions had developed pre-silicotic conditions.

Mr. MacBeth said miners with silicosis will be encouraged to find work elsewhere through job-retraining and compensation for moving expenses, where necessary. In addition, they will be paid 75 per cent of the difference in lost earnings to a maximum level of $15,000.

Cliche Reports

Criminals Found In Labor Unions

QUEBEC (CP)—Opposition critics for the resignation of Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer greeted tabling in the national assembly Tuesday of the Cliche Commission report urging a major clean-up of the Quebec construction industry.

Employers, union leaders and government personnel shared the blame for rampant lawlessness and confusion in the industry, the 400-page report said.

The commission declined to rule on the role played by Mr. Cournoyer in the industry's deterioration. The report suggested it be up to the electorate to pass judgment on

Northern And NDP Chief Spar

OTTAWA (CP) — Ed Broadbent, parliamentary leader of the New Democratic Party, said today he intends to press for more information about the movement of equipment from Microsystems International Ltd., despite company complaints that earlier questions cast "an aspersion against the management. . . ."

Microsystems, 88-per-cent owned by Northern Electric Ltd., was given almost $30 million in federal grants and $6.7 million in federal loans, before its Ottawa plant closed March 4, putting 602 employees out of work.

Mr. Broadbent asked in the Commons Monday whether industry Minister Alastair Gillespie had been informed "that a substantial amount of the capital equipment, originally financed by the federal government to a substantial extent, is in fact missing." The minister said he had no such information.

In a letter to Mr. Broadbent dated Tuesday, Northern Electric President W. F. Light said the NDP parliamentary leader must have been "misinformed and misled or misguided."

"I say categorically there is no equipment missing . . . and there never has been."

charges of employers and unions that the labor minister failed to demand respect for the law and gave preferential treatment to the Quebec Federation of Labor (QFL) over Quebec's two other labor groups.

Among the main changes proposed in the report by commission chairman Judge Robert Cliche and his two fellow commissioners are:

—Establishment of three-year trusteeships on the Montreal locals of electricians', plumbers' and heavy equipment operators' unions affiliated to the QFL, also on the Montreal-based Local 99 of the International Union of Elevator Constructors.

—Creation of a regulatory "construction agency to replace the corruption-riddled Construction Industry Commission (CIC) in administering wages and welfare conditions in the industry.

—Abolition of union hiring halls and putting responsibility for job placement of all construction workers in the hands of the proposed construction agency.

—Institution of five year plans for construction projects, aimed at stabilizing the industry, and the introduction of job security and guaranteed income for construction workers.

— Licensing by the department of financial institutions of all contractors to guarantee their solvency and competence. Site Ransacked

The three main bosses were established by the Liberal government in March, 1974, after the main job site of the James Bay hydroelectric power project in northwestern Quebec was ransacked.

Many of the industry's problems stemmed from the infiltration of leadership positions of three QFL affiliated construction unions by criminal elements during the last five years, the report says.

These unions—Local 791 of the International Union of Operating Engineers, Local 144 of the United Association of Journeymen and Apprentices of the Plumbing and Pipe Fitting Trades of the United States and Canada and Local 1077 of the Interprovincial Brotherhood of Electrical Workers — should be placed in the hands of three man boards of trustees, the commission urges.

The report says trusteeship is the only way to eliminate corrupt elements from the unions and to prevent the come back of Andre Desjardins, former leader of the QFL's 25 union construction wing.

The report describes Desjardins as an "unscrupulous demagogue who tolerated criminal activities in the unions and who opened the door to underworld infiltration."

To guard against abuses by employers and government officers, the report recommends a tighter government and rank-and-file scrutiny of union affairs. It also urges codification of all construction laws with stiffer penalties for employers or workers who offer, give or receive payoffs.

Those with criminal records would be barred from holding union office for five years following their admission to the union.

A special section of the judge's report recommends lay all charges for industry violations before a proposed construction tribunal.

Unions should be incorporated and be required to submit yearly financial statements to the department of financial institutions.

CLC Says Curbs Must Cover All

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian Labor Congress leaders said Wednesday they will only agree to a federal government call for voluntary wage restraint if the government introduces a program to provide more equitable distribution of income and restraints on rents, dividends, profits, professional fees, land speculation and housing.

Leaders of the 1.9 million-member labor organization made a statement on wage restraint proposals advanced by Finance Minister John Turner, after a morning meeting of the heads of 80 unions.

"The labor movement is willing to do its part in the fight against inflation, but it will never accept discriminatory treatment against wage earners, pensioners and those who have no means to protect themselves," the congress position paper said.

Labor officials at the executive council meeting are said to have pointed out that oil prices and increasing food prices—far-

Viet Cong Promises Leniency To Opponents at Saigon Rally

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"A sea of people" gathered at South Vietnam's Independence Presidential palace today and heard the commanding general of the Saigon area promise leniency for former opponents of the Viet Cong, Saigon radio reported.

The mass rally, to introduce the new administration for the Saigon area, marked the regime's first week in power.

Gen. Tran Van-Tra, who led the attack on the capital city in the 1968 Tet offensive and later represented the Viet Cong on the Joint Military Commission, promised no punishment for anyone who "serve as henchmen for foreign countries."

But he offered leniency and understanding for soldiers and officials of the old government who "want for the lives and property of foreign residents "providing they earn an honest living through clean business" and obey laws and orders.

Meanwhile, two freighters jammed with about 15,000 refugees docked at Guam after more than a week's voyage. Among the passengers were 8 prominent Vietnamese, including Tran Van Lam, former president of the South Vietnamese Senate.

The captain of one vessel said at least 50,000 persons had been

Trenton Not Exempt From Share Of Budget

By AL SABAS
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — A resolution passed by Trenton council this week may signal an end to land purchases along the southern stretch of the town greenbelt project, but it is unlikely to exempt Trenton from paying $28,388 as its share of the greenbelt costs.

The assessment came Tuesday in letters with officials in town hall and Lower Trent Region Conservation Authority offices.

Authority secretary-treasurer Bill Lawson said Tuesday Trenton is obligated by law to pay its share of the $177,400 set aside for the greenbelt in the authority's 1975 budget.

He interpreted council's action as a signal to the authority for a reassessment of the greenbelt project in light of two major factors.

Firstly, council's resolution asked the authority to indefinitely curtail further land purchases south along Front St. from roughly opposite the IGA supermarket.

Inside that southern stretch are four properties council feels are priced too high. The land has been valued at a total of $600,000 by its owners, $52,000 above its value as appraised by the authority.

Mr. Lawson said his information leads him to believe council would prefer to leave their purchase to the future when today's inflation-influenced costs fall.

Also behind the resolution, said Mayor Bob Patrick, is the town's desire to review the future of the project in light of possible involvement in land purchases by the CORTS committee.

CORTS (Canada - Ontario Rideau Trent-Severn) has indicated it will become more deeply involved in development of the Trent River valley. The indication prompted the town to consider a review of its own purchases of land through the authority for the greenbelt project.

"It is unlikely that any major purchases will be made this year."

Aubrey Sharp, town clerk, said Tuesday council's intention was to prevent land acquisitions in favor of possible development of land already owned by the authority. He said it is not the intent of council to see the authority budget in 1976 cut by the province.

Such a possibility exists should Trenton decide not to withhold its 1975 special levy for the greenbelt project.

Mr. Lawson said such withdrawal of payment would in 1976 see the province cut the authority's supplementary grants of 20 per cent in half. As a result, the $28,000 levy would have the affect of raising levies in all 17 member municipalities next year to make up the deficit.

It happened in 1974 he said. In 1972, the authority's total spent its budget and the province cut back on the supplementary grant it gave the authority.

Provincial supplementary grants are geared to spending of the authority — the higher the spending, the higher the grant.

Both Mr. Lawson and Mr. Sharp agreed council's resolution cannot effectively prohibit the authority from spending money on the greenbelt.

A bylaw governing the town to spend $25,388 for the project in 1975 would have to be rescinded before the resolution's intent could be fulfilled.

However, the bylaw has already been invalidated by the Ontario Municipal Board which killed the greenbelt expenditure as part of an approximate half-million-dollar cut in Trenton's capital budget.

Mr. Sharp said Tuesday the $25,388 expenditure will likely be among the items in the current budget, still to be struck by council. He said it was not approved by the OMB because it was included in a $97,000 sum, part of which was spent without OMB approval in the past two years.

Lock Fees Stem from Safety Needs

From The Ottawa Bureau of The Intelligencer.

OTTAWA — A Dominion fire Commissioner's report requiring installation of costly life-saving equipment at all locks on the Federal government's Rideau and Trent-Severn waterways preceded by three months the announcement of lockage tolls.

Tom Cosslit (PC-Leeds) charged Tuesday that the federal parks department under Indian and Northern Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan has concealed since Oct. 2, 1974, a report containing four specific recommendations to overcome hazards in the lockage systems of the two waterways.

The report, the result of an investigation into a July, 1974, boat explosion at Chaffeys locks on the Rideau Canal, was prepared by dominion fire commissioner R. A. Switzer. It was given to a senior parks Canada official last Oct. 2 but has not yet been released publicly, Mr. Cosslit said.

The Leeds MP claims the commissioner recommends the installation of a spray extinguisher system to dampen boat fires in the locks, the provision of nylon rope ladders to permit boaters to scale the sheer stone walls of the locks, a direct telephone link between each lock and its nearest fire department, and bailers to enable each lockmaster to control boaters in the area of a fire.

Mr. Switzer said that some of his recommendations are actually requirements.

Parks Canadas property management division chief J. C. Christakos said that some of the requirements of the accident report have already been acted on. The department, he said, has started to supply ladders and bailers at locks and has installed regular telephone lines at some.

The first water sprinkler system is being installed at a lock in Smiths Falls at a cost of $50,000.

When asked if the fire commissioner's demand for more equipment was a factor in the government's decision to institute a lockage toll for boaters, a senior official in Mr. Buchanan's office said it could have been. However, he said, the dominant reason for the toll was the government's conclusion that boaters should be required to shoulder a portion of the costs of canal operation without placing the entire burden on the taxpayer.

The lockage tolls which require boaters to purchase permits on a daily, monthly or seasonal basis before passing through the locks, were announced last March and became effective April 1.

Mr. Cosslit contends that charging fees will increase the governments liability in the case of accidents occurring within the locks.

Trustees Meet Ameliasburg Parents

BLOOMFIELD — The Prince Edward Board of Education will meet Friday night with representatives of a committee of concerned Ameliasburgh parents to review the board's decision to transfer Ernie Bright, school principal Eugene Bright.

David Shoots, BEd, Carrying Place, chairman of the committee said Wednesday Mr. Bright is also expected to attend the meeting.

"We are not grinding axes or worshipping Eugene Bright," he said.

"We represent ourselves . . . we are helping Mr. Bright only because he happens to be the principal being transferred on the basis of very inaccurate information, largely because it's so incomplete," he added.

Mr. Shoots said the report on Mr. Bright submitted to trustees by education director John McNeil indicated the principal lacked community support.

The parents have researched community backing for the principal and Mr. Shoots said a conservative estimate of about 90 per cent are generally satisfied with him.

He said Mr. McNeil's report stating reasons for the principals transfer is "generally a very poorly founded document."

"There is so much it leaves out," he added.

Mr. Shoots said the committee does not want to fight with trustees.

"We want no heads to roll . . . we want the board to look at all the information at all sides and reach a responsible decision," he said.

"We want to bring this information to the board. They have relied on a very careless hasty opinion-gathering by the director," he said.

He said Mr. Bright has not been able to give trustees additional first hand information and Friday's meeting should provide this opportunity.

No Shortage Of Vets

PICTON — Prince Edward County residents can rest assured there shall never be a shortage of veterinarians in the county.

Registration in this year's 4-H Veterinary Club has jumped almost 40 per cent from last year's enrolment of 29, says leaders Doctor David Grier and Dr. John Hancock of Picton's Animal Hospital.

Purpose of the club, says Dr. Hancock, is to give the member insight into disease prevention and how to recognize normal and abnormal behavior in animals.

The increase in interest has resulted in the club dividing into a Junior and Senior section.

Prince Won Friends

Prince Charles has come and gone, but he has left behind an unlikely enough champion in The Globe and Mail.

Still, if The Globe has been very much on the side of liberalism, and against the status quo in a variety of spheres, these past few years, it does seem to retain a soft spot for Royalay. Indeed, it would be a matter of concern if Canada's "national newspaper" were to side with the likes of Scots MP William Hamilton who has written a book that is highly critical of the Monarchy as an institution.

The Globe and Mail says Canadians "have discovered a new national resource: their Prince of Wales. . ."

Certainly we have seen an older, more mature prince this time around, and The Globe, noting his good humor and the rapport he established with the Arctic folk, suggested the North too, "has been showing itself to the Prince — in effect, because all that the Prince sees is watched and recorded . . . showing itself to the rest of us. . ."

Then, as if addressing itself to all the bleeding hearts and get-rid-of-the-Monarchy clique, the editorial adds: "That is one of the things a visit from monarchy does, mirror us to ourselves." And it even goes on to suggest the Prince be invited back to see "the urban Canada to the south, to see all of Canada and its people."

The Prince, incidentally, had shown he could be as gauche as the next man, but his essential good breeding too by apologizing for a remark in Ottawa at the start of the tour. "I suppose it was a bad joke, a bad cliche," he said of a remark in jest, that he would be careful with whom he rubbed noses in the north. This had drawn a protest from the Inuit people.

The Globe and Mail itself had come in for earlier criticism too, from a reader who said a footnote to a letter naming all the titles of the Prince of Wales smacks of deliberate rudeness. . ."

The reader noted that almost half a century ago, the eldest son of King George V was invariably called by "his proper title," the Prince Wales, in the newspaper of that day.

"But in those days," said S. G. Myrans of Oakville, in words that sum up much of the change in our society, "people in this country had manners, and that included Toronto's morning newspaper."

Indeed, a lot has happened in half a century of conflict and social upheaval. Behavior patterns have changed with events, and the world itself is having to adapt to an altogether new processes of evolution. And yet, don't they say, there is nothing new under the sun?

Fire at Church Raises Questions

The evidence of arson as a possible cause of the disastrous fire at St. Thomas' Anglican church is alarming indeed.

Yet it is an element, given the intensity of the blaze at its height, and the white-hot bursts of flame issuing from amid the red, that must have given rise to suspicion among even non-professional observers.

Missing articles from the church compounds the tragedy.

Society as a whole must help shoulder the responsibility, as well as help fine remedies in situations such as this where there is evidence of anti-social behavior.

Specifically, there will have to be remedies from the churches themselves, as well as from such organizations as the Salvation Army, the Children's services, Service Clubs, Big Brother groups, and Scouts and Guides, as well as from municipalities.

Township Recreation

In the rural parts the young — and adults too — have the benefit of spaciousness and the outdoors. There is an opportunity for a variety of activities from horseback riding in summer to the many facets of winter sport.

At the same time there can be a vacuum in country life for the young. It is not every village or township, for example, that has a ballpark or the kind of facilities found in a Zwick's Island-style activity.

Ameliasburg township is better off than many. For some time it has been working quietly to want establishing a good recreational base for its citizens. The results are documented in a circular from the township office.

It details facilities available at a three-acre park and athletic field in Rossmore. At Carrying Place nine acres are available and in addition to a ball diamond and other provisions, tennis courts are planned this year.

At Ameliasburg itself there are the beach and bathing facilities at Roblin Lake, senior and junior softball during the summer, and a tennis court. In addition the nearby museum affords a cultural dimension to complete the attractions of the township seat.

This is a good effort by the township and given this initiative it will not be surprising if further facilities are added as time passes. Making the programs known to township residents is also commendable.

A Peaceful Majority

One of the cliches of our day is the phrase, "the vast majority." Indeed, the word "vast" is superfluous' as is the word, "completely," in reference to a building being " completely' destroyed."

Nevertheless, it is the majority, "silent" for the most part, which is seldom heard from. By the same token, the media would have to acknowledge that it is the "bad news" that makes the greater impact, while the public for its part is receptive to it.

Probably everyone has had his full of bad news from Northern Ireland where Protestant hardliners reportedly have won the latest vote as to what should constitute the form of Government over there. Yet it is true to say that this is one place where the majority of people of all persuasions live at peace and in relative harmony.

The majority of Catholics and Protestants there are not gunning after each other and want nothing more than for the country to be at peace.

Again, some social and industrial developments there of late which give a rather different picture of events, as reported in Ulster Commentary: a five-year public works program involving 250 building projects at a cost of £720 million; participation in a campaign to preserve the character of old towns and villages as part of European Heritage Year; record tonnage of ships — more than 500,000 tons — from the shipyards of Harland and Wolff Ltd., in 1974; Irish ferry firm wins contract to build yachts for club-in Hong Kong; a £1.75 million contract to a Carryduff firm to carry out oil exploration work in the Shetland Islands.

But who ever hears of news such as this in the ordinary way?

Contrasting Memories of War That Ended 30 Years Ago

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

The Soviet Union, the really big loser in terms of human life and property destroyed in World War Two, is in the remembrance mood of late as the sole survivor of the four allies in the West.

This month of May when spring comes back to the land and Canada warms up again to remind us we live in a pleasant as well as environmentally harsh land, is the 30th anniversary month of that May in 1945 when the guns stopped and Nazism was shattered.

The veteran of that event who is still youthful, light in spirit and mind, can scarcely believe the year ended 30 years ago.

This month none of us with either a living memory or a textbook reminder will be allowed to forget the date already in Italy a delegation of Canadian veterans have been travelling the length of that country where so much Canadian blood was shed in 1943-44 in the struggle to unseat Nazism and Fascism in the central Mediterranean.

And the Americans will remember V-E Day with a special poignancy, that of the end of the struggle in Europe which began almost immediately on the conclusion of the World War and would soon involve the United States.

It is the Russians who remember the war with more gusto and more ritualistic propaganda than the rest of us. And the latest dose of Russian propaganda from the press office of the Soviet Embassy in Ottawa under the heading of a "News Bulletin." In effect it is another certificate cum blurb on "The Great Patriotic War" and "The Great Eyeplot of the Soviet People."

Again the old party line about where the Germans had most of their troops namely on the Russian front with scant reference to the Western Front and little heard in the important preliminary front in North Africa.

Nor is there any mention of all of Stalin's pleading with Churchill and Roosevelt to open the Western Front earlier than the West was prepared to do it take the strain from him.

Nothing is said of course about the shocking state of morale and leadership in the Red Army in the summer of 1941 when the Germans invaded, a result of the horrendous Stalin trials of the senior military.

And again official Soviet handouts on "The Great Patriotic War" simply refuse, even after 30 years, to say any mention at all to the vast amounts of British, U.S. and Canadian military equipment and war supplies sent into the Soviet Union at great cost via the Murmansk sea run or over the North Pole via Alaska to Siberian Russia.

Here can the Russians remain so thankless for so long? Why must they give the impression they did it single-handedly? Some of the places they "liberated" switching Nazi dictatorship for Soviet, as in Poland, we gave away to them at summit meetings in Quebec City and Yalta.

They can pump this stuff to their own beleaguered peoples and we can't stop them. But to peddle such a line as Soviet stypes propaganda in a free society where a columnist like myself is not permitted to ignore such distortions of military history, has to be a matter of everyone's time in the Soviet Embassy.

What I can't understand about the Russians and their harsh regimes is why they do not emphasize their staggering losses in Poland, Russia, that Nazi invasion and brutally repulsed in the death of 20 million Soviet citizens, a staggering number we in the West may never fully appreciate.

Way Open for Election

By DON O'HEARN

Queen's Park Bureau

Thomson News Service

TORONTO — Well at least now everything is ready.

Before there could be an election this spring two pieces of legislation had to go before the house.

One was the new Election Expenses Act, a statute which controls the amount parties and candidates can spend on electioneering.

The second was the Redistribution Act.

This sets new riding boundaries according to the 1971 census, and incidentally increases the number of seats in the house from 117 to 125.

Both measures are now been approved, and though we still don't know whether Premier Davis intends to go to the people in June or not at least the technical obstacles are out of the way.

He had pledged he wouldn't call a vote before both these acts were effective.

The Elections Act is a highly technical document.

It was argued for several days downstairs in committee, but still it is doubtful very many people as yet know its exact implications.

It appears as an instrument whose impact largely will have to be worked out in practice.

The Redistribution Act was carried through three drafts and altogether a year-and-a-half in processing.

But still it got through the process in less time than had been expected, at least in its final state.

There were two main objections to the bill.

One was that the public didn't have enough voice in its draft hearing.

But the Commission rather covered that by its initial draft when it received submissions both from local groups and from members, and altered boundaries according to them in a good number of cases.

The second objection was the traditional one—that rural members had much smaller ridings on a population basis and therefore really had a more equitable vote.

John Reid, the veteran PC member for Wellington-Dufferin gave, to me, one of the most unique and at the same time telling arguments as to why this should be.

He explained that in his riding the bulk of the telephones are party lines. And he was going to discuss confidential business over a party line.

Thus, he meant his constituents had to travel to him or he had to travel to them, which meant he had to spend a lot more time on constituency business than a city member.

Businessmen Facing a Bad Year

By VINCENT EGAN

Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

For Canadian and U.S. business, 1975 is turning out to be a tough year.

Profits so far are running well below 1974's levels—and the outlook for the balance of the year isn't encouraging.

After-tax earnings of 169 Canadian companies in the first three months of the year were 18 per cent lower than in January-March, 1974, according to a survey by Canadian Dow Jones.

In the United States, profits of 644 corporations in first-quarter 1975 were down 21 per cent from a year earlier, according to a tabulation by The Wall Street Journal, a Dow Jones publication.

In some industries, profits vanished altogether. The U.S. auto manufacturers, as a group, recorded a loss for the first time in any quarter since the Depression—despite the tracebiliion profits they made in January and February to sell more cars at reduced prices.

Other big losers were U.S. airlines (with their heavy fixed overhead and debt-servicing costs) and major retail outlets.

Here in Canada, some of the biggest losers were the manufacturers, forest companies, chemical and textile producers, and trust and loan firms.

Profits of the 18 manufacturing companies included in the sample of 169 Canadian firms were down 39 per cent from first-quarter 1974. Ford Motor Co. of Canada (the only Canadian company with any Canadian ownership) reported a big decline, as did Alcan Aluminum Ltd.

The 25 mining companies reported an overall profit decline of 30 per cent, which included Noranda Mines, Inco Limited, Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd. and Noranda Metals.

Over two years ago, mines were among the big profiteers because of Japan's export sales of Canadian minerals. But the worldwide economic slowdown has cut sharply into foreign demand for Canadian raw materials.

The first-quarter profit declines are in sharp contrast to 1974's full-year gains.

In the United States last year, profits of 4,155 major corporations rose an average 11 per cent, according to First National City Bank of New York.

Profits of Canadian corporations in 1974 rose by 22.7 per cent, according to a survey by Dominion Securities Corp.-Harris and Partners Ltd.

But that figure is cut almost in half—to 12 per cent—when "inventory profit" is taken into account. This is the portion of profit that is invested in inventory solely because of price inflation.

Such inventory profits are really illusory to businesses—they are real only in the sense that they are taxable (to the tune of about 1,250-million last year).

The erosion of "investable" corporate profits in Canada may please the critics of business, but it is a significant factor in the current slowdown in business spending on new plant and equipment, in economic activity, and in employment (not to mention the stock market).

Even if the decline in profitability had been less, and increased later this year, as some economic forecasts are predicting, unemployment may continue to grow.

In the recent past, improvement in the employment situation has lagged a year or two behind any upturn in business activity.

Construction of a new bacteriological station to the Avondale public school in Sidney township just west of the city and north of the Trent Road, has been started with the extension expected to be ready for occupancy by September 1. Plans for the school were drawn by Watson and Wiegand, local architects, while the general contract has been awarded to the Glagras Construction Company at the price of $22,500. The school addition will have modern fluorescent lighting and will also have linoleum floors to help deaden noise. Classrooms will have individual heat controls.

May 7, 1945

There was a portentous hush in the city shortly after ten o'clock today following the announcement that Germany had laid down her arms and surrendered unconditionally to the Allied Nations. The City Hall bell started to toll, policemen took up the "peace signal", and people poured into the streets. Crowds of students and adults from department stores to buy every available flag in the city. Flags and streamers appeared, were put into action—a hand-made one in County Court House lawn, prayers of thanks-giving by Rev. Grant Spurling and Rev. Beauchamp Payne and citizen participation in hymns choked the lawn portion of the official V.E. day celebrations.

40 YEARS AGO

Jubilee stamps have been eagerly bought at the vendor's office in the Belleville Post Office. The stamps are: one cent, green with the head of King Elizabeth; two cent, brown, the Duke of York; three cents, green, Windsor Castle; and thirteen cent, double blue, the royal yacht Britannia. Demand for silver dollars issued by the mint at Ottawa has also been great. Only a few were brought to Belleville. The silver dollars are issued to persons who wanted them for memento of the Jubilee. Because of the interest in the coins, more are going to be minted.

50 YEARS AGO

The Belleville Fair Board Directors have greatly increased the prize list for the agricultural exhibition which is to be revived this year, on the new park grounds on the west side. It is expected that over $12,000 will be expended in prizes, and the result should be a heavy showing of stock of the best quality. The race track will be one of the best in Canada. Crowds next summer for the prize list will be practically twice as large as last year.

Volunteers Aid Patients

Editor,
The Intelligencer;

The self-care home visitation volunteers are composed of 13 to 20 warm, sympathetic women. They give of themselves graciously to make each Monday afternoon a day of visiting homes with our residents, a happy occasion.

These residents originate from the Belleville and District Hospital. Some were there many years before modern medicine and modern drugs were used in the 60s. With many, their independence has been so effective for so long from regimentation and placing them in community homes seemed the only solution. This gives them back the security they needed, and also relieved pressure on the hospital.

The ladies visit each home once a month. The residents' pleasure at seeing them gives each volunteer a feeling of satisfaction. For our visit, we have a program of songs with small prizes, a craft the residents can use, short-cream stories, a visit with music, dancing, singing and activity programs. We visit with residents happily participate. About twice a year we have a tea party complete with refreshments and gifts.

Our volunteers work independently with the sanction of Dental Health Services Association. A local mental health worker is asked to help everyone understand good manners. The worker will also volunteer your services or donate money to the local Mental Health Week — May 4 to 10 — please contact us at 968-6888.

W. I. Deplores TV Adverts

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

In the edition of your paper of April 12 there was a letter to the Editor from Dorothy Squires wanting to know the views of others concerning the quality of television advertisements of today, especially the ones degrading women.

At a recent meeting of our Melrose Women's Institute this letter was discussed and the members have the feeling, as she does, that the "personal" types of commercials on television, as well as some others pertaining to women, are very offensive to us and we wish her and other women to know that we decided in the month of March to include this in one of our resolutions to be sent to the Government.

Politics and the Schools

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

For many years I have heard of the efforts of many professors to subvert their graduates to the media and teaching profession.

Never did I realize how true this was until I read a recent letter to The Intelligencer signed by seven Belleville high school teachers indicating some sympathy with Communism.

While these teachers have a right to their own beliefs, I don't believe they should be allowed to brainwash our young children to become "Viet Cong in Canada."

I would hope our School Board is alert to this situation in the schools.

Shriner Organizes Circus Trip

BANCROFT — The thrill of seeing all the delights under the Big Top will belong to several hundred North Hastings children who will attend the Shriner's Circus in Peterborough May 9.

The Circus, will be in Peterborough for one day only and the local school children will be bussed down in time to see the noon hour performance.

The trip of the local youngsters is being organized by Frank Sparling, who was voted Shriner of the year in the Kawartha Shrine.

Mr. Sparling, who lives in Bancroft has been active in Shrine work for a number of years.

"We operate the circus as one of the means we have to raise funds for the Shriners Orthopedic and Burn hospital for children," said Mr. Sparling.

Tickets for the circus are available to any other groups and interested persons.

There are three performances during the day and tickets are available from most local shriners.

Bancroft Told 'Tighten Belt'

By NAN WHITLAW
Staff Correspondent

BANCROFT — As with other small Ontario municipalities, Bancroft council has learned that new belt-tightening measures are being expounded by various provincial agencies for 1975, despite the rapidly increasing costs facing municipal government.

In a form letter to the local council, provincial treasurer Darcy McKeough urged that "you practice extreme caution in the spending of municipal funds and re-evaluate staffing requirements and capital expenditures."

Mr. McKeough also said the ministry of treasury, economics and inter-governmental affairs which is responsible for the conditional and unconditional grants to municipalities would be stepping up its grant program by two months by 1975.

However, because of the "inequity of the last sharing program with the federal government the grants would not be as large as the province would like," he added.

The Ontario Municipal Board (OMB) also got into the belt tightening act by informing the council that care must be taken with capital expenditures by Ontario municipalities.

According to the OMB, because of heavy taxation burdens and debt charges, only high priority projects such as sewers, water, hydro and transportation systems should be presented to the OMB.

If other projects are submitted to the OMB during 1975 they must be accompanied by information showing methods of repayment which would not increase the present taxation level.

Following the discussion of the two cautionary letters from the provincial agencies Bancroft council learned that the village's levy from the Hastings County Board of Education will be to $135,000 in 1975 from $120,000 in 1974.

Toll-free Zone Outlined

TWEED — George Thompson, Regional Manager of Bell Canada, has outlined for village council details of a proposed toll-free calling zone between the Northbrook and Tweed exchanges.

Earlier this year, the council and a local service club had explored the possibility a toll-free zone.

Mr. Thompson said Bell Canada will be sending out letters in May outlining the proposed project, including the increased costs that would be applicable.

Mr. Thompson told council that the costs of instituting such a program would be reflected in an increase of 25 cents per month for each private line; 19 cents per month for each party line; and approximately $1.00 per month for each business subscriber.

Mr. and Mrs. Eric Tugnette

Tugnette — Crain

St. Mark's United Church was the scene of the April wedding of Cheryle Eleanor Lorraine Crain and Eric Thomas Tugnette.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs Robert J. Crain, Belleville; the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Tugnette, Belleville.

Rev. Jack Morrison officiated at the afternoon ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a long gown with guipere lace and long sleeves. Her train was accented with lace appliques and her two tiered lace edged veil was caught in a headpiece of lace and seed pearls.

Maid of honor Sharlene Pulver was assisted by the groom's sister, Cindy Tugnette the bride's sisters Lori Ann Crain and Paula Crain, Debbie Wood all in nylon sheer over taffeta gowns in blue, yellow, green, mauve and pink.

Wendy Wood, flower girl, wore a flowered pink and white gown: Dale Woodcock was ring bearer.

Kenneth R. Vox was best man assisted by Tim Tugnette, the groom's brother, and the bride's brothers Robert, Gary and Brian Crain.

A reception was held at the Elk's Lodge.

ROBERT SHERATON WRIGHT B.A. graduated with the Master of Divinity degree from Huron College, University of Western Ontario in London at the recent convocation. In the autumn he plans on entering post graduate studies. He is the son of Canon R.R. DeBlois Wright and Mrs. Dorothy Wright of Belleville.

After the Ball, the Buffet

The Artillery Ball, sponsored by the Quinte Artillery Association took place Friday, May 2 at Branch 99 of the Royal Canadian Legion in Belleville. Association president Bob Patrick was among those welcoming members to the dance, which featured a large buffet meal late in the evening.

WI President Warns Members To Beware Women's Year Costs

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — The president of the Federated Women's Institute of Canada said recently reaction to International Women's Year is mixed and warned "there is a danger that thousands of taxpayers' dollars could be literally going down the drain."

Mrs. John A. McLean told an Ontario Women's Institute conference at the University of Waterloo, "we could wind up with an International Women's Year that is purely a public relations job with Why Not slogans and extensive advertising through the media."

Mrs. McLean said every year is women's year "or if it's not it should be."

She said while institute members have been urged to be conscious of their responsibilities as wives and mothers, they must also broaden their interests and involvements, move outside their homes, develop their capacities and take advantage of opportunities.

She said in its 78-year existance, women's institute has encouraged such participation but has not been successful.

"If we had there would be no need for International Women's Year.

Provincial agriculture Minister William Stewart asked institute members to submit their views of violence depicted on television programs and its effect on society.

He told delegates that the recently formed royal commission to study violence in the communications industry seeks to find whether there is any connection to the incidence of crime.

Mrs. Herbert Malouin, of Chatsworth, Ont., the new Ontario institute president, said the organization must continue to voice strong united opinions against man's inhumanity to man.

She cited the increasing use of profanity in the media and the display of violence and obscenity, alcoholism, drugs, abortion and rape on television.

Walking Best Exercise

A physical fitness expert tells me that walking is one of the best exercises. It can keep muscles in good tone and blood circulating the way it ought to be.

Carry your head up, chest up, look your tummy in and swing your legs from the hips to develop a free stride.

Of course, if you have the time and interest to join a swimming or dancing class you can include fun and sociability while getting your body in good shape.

Gradually our muscles become less elastic and we tend to slump, practice good posture all the time by first relaxing your shoulders completely and then lifting your head until your ears is level. Pull outward on the small of the back, at the same time allowing the back of the knees to give slightly. Then tuck your hips under.

When all this gets to feeling natural you'll be reaching for things the right way — like, for the mailbox or a chair or anything that calls for reaching.

Doris: You often get letters from lonely people. I'd like to tell my experience about being lonely.

Our family was very close. My sister and I did things together. Then she died at 23. My mother and dad were killed three years later.

I thought the world had fallen out from under me. I tried a lot, sat alone, didn't eat properly. I experienced loneliness as it is worst. Then it dawned on me that I should be doing something about myself, and I got into things again. Doings at the church and in our community. And I conquered loneliness.

Several years later I got married. But that wasn't meant to last either because my husband died after four years.

Well, I had coped with loneliness before, and knew how to take myself in hand. So I sought out people and projects which needed what I had to give.

Now I am adjusted. I get out a lot, and when I am home alone I enjoy my own company. I think the happiest person is the one who not only likes others but also likes herself. What do you think?

Dear No Longer Lonely: Right. Before we can really warm up to others we need a proper self-liking. Thank you for your story.

Dear Doris: J. E. M. asked about the old Royal Readers. I am not sure this information will be of any assistance but thought I would pass it along.

Approximately 30 years ago, my mother, who has since passed away, obtained new copies of the Readers which she gave to her grandchildren. I have three in my home: numbers 2, 4 and 5.

Since the copies are new, I presume she obtained them from the publisher, Thomas Nelson and Sons (Canada) Ltd., 91-93 Wellington Street West, Toronto 1, Ont., or Thomas Nelson and Sons, Ltd., 3 Henrietta St., London W.C.2, England. These addresses are taken from the books and may no longer be correct.

Enjoy Your Column.

Dear Enjoy: Thank you for the news and for the compliment. Readers will be grateful.

Ann Landers

Second Wife Worried About Brazen Women

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I have been married for nearly two years. He is four years my junior but no one would know it unless somebody told. I have a good figure and keep myself in shape. This is a second marriage for both of us.

The problem is that Jack is extremely handsome and has a way of attracting every female in the place—no matter where we are. It's amazing how brazen some women can be. Time after time I have stood at his side (or within hearing distance) and listened to some gush over Jack and tell him how good looking he is. Sometimes, how sexy—etc. You wouldn't believe some of the dumb things that come out of their mouths. (Most of these women are married.)

What should I say to them?—At A Loss For Words

Dear Loss: Nothing. They aren't talking to you.

Dear Ann Landers: Frequently you plead for compassion for the lonely people in the world. I realize you are trying to generate sympathy and understanding. And that there's a reason for everything. I wonder if you will have the courage to print this letter, which may do a lot more good than your sympathy.

Although this man has had a wife for 30 years (one) and three fine children, he is the loneliest person in town. He is sour, sullen and makes no effort whatever to extend himself. When someone reaches out to him, he's a million miles away. Everything bounces off.

I have yet do hear him give a compliment. He's always the first one with the bad news. Of course he is infallible, never made a mistake in his entire life. His only pleasure seems to be pointing out the mistakes of others. If he gets into an argument he will turn the library upside down to prove he is right. Of course he doesn't have a friend in the world. His children tolerate him but there is no love. As for me, I'm stuck.

So when people tell you how lonely they are, just remember, there's a reason for everything. Sign Ho—No Mystery Here.

Dear No: Too bad you two didn't get some counselling years ago. Your marriage sounds like a disaster, your home an armed camp, and I feel very sorry for all of you.

Dear Ann Landers: I just read the letter from the woman who thinks she has a problem because her husband doesn't put down the toilet seat. If this is the worst thing the poor girl has to contend with in her life, she should consider herself lucky.

I am 33, hitched for the second time, and couldn't be happier. When Lee and I married I became the instant mother of his three sons. Not one of the four pets down the toilet seat and I couldn't care less.

The reason there are so many sicker patients, migraine headaches, ulcers and just plain misery in the world is that people don't know what's important enough to get upset over. I learned and found—Peace.

Dear Peace: Isn't it beautiful?

CONFIDENTIAL to Money Talks: Sorry, I don't buy your approach. If money talks, it should be apologizing for being in short supply at a time when most people need it so desperately.

Sabia Criticizes Ad Stereotypes

WELLAND, Ont. (CP) — Unless women are given back decision-making on the question of abortion, the issue will never be solved, Laura Sabia, chairman of the Ontario Status of Women Council, said Saturday.

She told a women's conference that women have allowed the federal government, particularly Justice Minister Otto Lang, to mete out justice unjustly regarding abortions.

Mrs. Sabia was also critical of advertising which places women in stereotypes. She said in one advertisement, a woman needs her husband to read out the contents of a dog food can.

She said she will know stereotypes no longer apply only to women after she sees an advertisement for "cruss-your-heart socks."

'Low-cal' Meals Can Still Be Tasty!

It's that time of year again, when even the slimmest among us are noticing the odd winter bulge here and there! Exercise will play a large part in help us reduce to fit the skinny clothes of summer, but diet is also a vital part of any trimming program.

Here are a selection of calorie-cutting recipes that enable dieters to make full-palatifying meals while watching their daily food intake. Each of these main-course dishes is accompanied by its calorie content for a moderate individual serving.

Baked Marinated Fish

one tsp. butter
two tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
¼ tsp. garlic powder
two lbs. fish (lake trout, perch or bass)
two onions, thinly sliced
½ cup dry white wine (more if needed) one tsp. Worcestershire sauce one 8-oz. can tomato sauce one small green pepper, sliced

Start this dish the day before, or early in the day before serving so that the fish can marinate at least six hours.

Grease a baking dish with half butter. Sprinkle the salt, pepper and garlic powder on the fish. Arrange in the dish with the onions over it.

Mix the wine and Worcestershire sauce, and pour over the fish. Let marinate. Before baking, mix the tomato paste and green pepper, and pour over the fish. Bake 35 minutes at 350 degrees, basting frequently.

Serving six, this dish supplies 185 calories per serving.

Tomato Bouillon

two tsp. butter
one onion, chopped
six cups tomato juice
one bay leaf
½ cup chopped celery (with leaves)
½ tsp. oregano
½ tsp. celery salt
¼ tsp. coarse black pepper
six tsp. sour cream

Melt the butter in a saucepan, and saute the onion for five minutes. Add the juice, bay leaf, celery, oregano, celery salt and pepper; and cook over low heat for at least 15 minutes. Strain, taste for seasoning, and adjust accordingly. Serve hot or well chilled, with one spoonful of sour cream in the centre.

Calories? Only 40 for each of the six servings this recipe makes.

Stuffed Breast of Veal

one tbsp. butter
one onion, minced
two green peppers, diced
¼ lb. mushrooms
one cup shredded cabbage one slice bread, trimmed and cubed three tsp. salt
½ tsp. pepper
one tsp. paprika
one breast of veal (with pocket for stuffing)
½ cup canned tomato sauce

Melt the butter in a skillet. Saute the onions, green peppers, mushrooms and cabbage for ten minutes. Mix in the bread, one tsp. salt and tsp. pepper.

Combine remaining salt with pepper and paprika, and rub into the veal. Stuff the veal. Close the opening with skewers or toothpicks and place on a roasting pan. Roast for 30 minutes in a 375 degree oven, then lower the heat to 350 degrees, and add the tomato sauce and roast for two more hours, or until tender. Baste frequently and add a little water if pan becomes dry. Serve two ribs and four tablespoons of stuffing for six persons.

This veal dish has 300 calories in each serving.

Sweet and Sour Red Cabbage

four lbs. red cabbage
¼ cup water
six apple, peeled and cubed one tbsp. flour
¼ cup cider vinegar
one tsp. brown sugar one tsp. liquid artificial sweetener
one tsp. salt

Wash the cabbage thoroughly. Shred medium fine, and combine with the water and apple in a saucepan. Cover and cook over low heat for 10 minutes, mixing occasionally.

Mix the flour, sugar, sweetener and salt, and pour over the cabbage, stirring constantly until the boiling point. Cover and cook over low heat for half and hour. Taste for seasoning, and adjust if necessary.

Serves six; and, joy of joys, only 35 calories per serving.

Coffee Sponge

one tbsp. gelatin
½ cup milk
1½ cups hot coffee three egg yolks
two tbsp. sugar
one tsp. artificial sweetener
¼ tsp. salt
three egg whites, stiffly beaten
¼ tsp. vanilla extract

Soften the gelatin in the milk. Add the hot coffee, stirring until dissolved.

Beat the egg yolks, sugar, sweetener and salt in the top of a double boiler. Gradually add the coffee mixture, stirring constantly to prevent curdling. Place over hot water and cook five minutes, stirring steadily. Chill until mixture begins to thicken, then fold in the egg whites and vanilla. Turn into a mold or into six individual dishes, and chill.

Serve very cold, at a cool 70 calories per dish.

Renovating: Old Home - New Nursery

Renovations are transforming a Victorian mansion at the corner of Bridge St. E. and Bleecker into First Adventure, the first integrated nursery facility for normal and handicapped children in the province.

The counter will open in September 1975.

Funded by a grant from the Ontario Community and Social Services Ministry the centre is designed to give preschool children with special problems an opportunity to have these problems met by adequate health and educational staff.

It will include a therapeutic nursery operated by the mental health clinic of Belleville General Hospital, a nursery for multi-handicapped children and a model "normal" nursery.

Approximately 66 children will be accommodated in half-day programs.

The centre will have a director, six teachers and a secretary along with the therapeutic nursery staff of a psychologist, social worker, three teachers and a secretary.

BAN SEX ADS

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — The Zambian government has ordered newspapers to stop printing letters or articles on sex, advertisements for skin-lightening creams and pictures of scantily-clad women.

People and Events

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Merrow quietly celebrated the 50th anniversary of their wedding recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Merrow (formerly Nellie Trudeau) were married in St. Catherine's Roman Catholic Church, Tweed. They settled on a farm north-east of the village of Tweed. Thirty years ago they sold their farm and moved into the village (Tweed) where they now reside at 23 Bridge Street.

They received congratulations from Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, Governor General Leger, Leader of the Opposition, Robert Stanfield, Premier of Ontario William Davis, M.P. of Hastings, Jack Ellis and MPP of Hastings Clarke T. Rollins.

DIOCESE MEETING

Arise and Shine was the theme of the eighth annual meeting of Anglican Church Women of the Diocese of Ontario which was held recently in Kingston.

Inside Postal Workers' President Predicts Long Strike

Walter Yateman, president of Inside Postal Workers' in Belleville and Brighton predicts a "long and bitter, nasty strike" by his union.

Inside workers and the federal treasury board have been negotiating for a new contract since April 24. Last October, the inside workers and outside letter carriers were divorced from each other.

"We have been without a contract since last fall when the council of postal unions was dissolved," said Mr. Yateman.

The union president predicted the talks will be put into the conciliation process by the end of this month, and said, "we would be legally able to strike 21 days following the receipt of the conciliator's report."

"It seems inevitable there will be a strike . . . though that is my personal opinion by what I see locally and not necessarily the national opinion," said Mr. Yateman. "The thought of strike scares the hell out of me."

He said strike is a strong possibility due to the distance between union demands and treasury board offers.

"So far, the treasury board has said no to everything and has offered an hourly raise of $1.15 over a 32-month contract," he said.

"Unless the negotiating committee gets some progress out of the board, the general membership will be militant and bring a great deal of pressure to the bargaining committee by the end of May," he said.

Inside workers currently earn an average of $4.60 an hour.

Wages are not a central issue in the negotiations, said Mr. Yateman.

"The union is more concerned with getting the right to negotiate technological change.

"The union is more concerned with getting the right to negotiate technological change and effects on the worker . . . particularly in reference to postal codes and mechanical mail sorting," he said.

Vandals Cost Parks Board

Vandalism may not take root any more readily in parks.

But it exists. As does the mutual relationship. Let's talk specifics about it — for a common ground, for ideas may become an inspiration. Discussing it just doesn't let destructiveness may prompt fresh outbreaks.

But this year, for the first time, Belleville parks department is keeping a detailed record of the man hours and material costs of depredations to facilities.

The documentation may not prove anything aside from financial losses. But then again, it could reveal specific problem areas — and help with any future research into vandalism patterns, says parks director Lloyd Syer.

He is cautious about estimating the dimensions of the problem, but acknowledges the increase in vandalism is an accepted social phenomenon.

Mr. Syer is not certain that parks are more prone to vandalism than other areas — schools, industries, even private homes.

Any lessons could also be due to the expansion of facilities. There are now more parks than ever and the city's greenbelt continues to grow with new catches.

But there are instances too obvious to miss the eye:

— Young trees, already four or five feet high, uprooted from the ground, even in winter.

— Telephones adjacent to beach frontages for emergencies, repeatedly ripped out.

— Canoe-washroom facilities continually damaged so that now entirely and proper needs are a thing of the past.

— Flags repeatedly torn down.

A costly example is installed as a centpiece in a riverside green strip, was cut from its moorings. The parks department has purchased another artificial bell in Marysburgh about where it would be installed.

Although he admits, there is "no one thing that is a vandal-proof installation."

He has proof of his point: waste containers, so heavy the design was copied by other municipalities, have been damaged. Park benches constructed to the ground have been uprooted — concrete bases and all.

Some are heated incidents. Others, deliberately planned. In one night, trees were uprooted in three different parks.

Frustrations also play a part in damage. There's one park which poses an engine problem. Young motorcyclists repeatedly use it for sport, reading — particularly among young people. In its first year, the competition attracted 34 contestants.

A highlight of the week's activities will be the Start of the Festival concerts to be held at the church Saturday and Sunday evenings.

Trophies will be presented to the winners of all categories during the concerts.

Picton Rev. Robert Sherwin will adjudicate scripture reading.

The competition is open to any individual in the Quinte area.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following call for assistance: Saturday a 24-hour so old which ended at 8 a.m. today:

Tuesday, May 6, 10.17 a.m. — Fulfilled a request by city police to rescue a bicycle from the swirling waters of the Moira River on the north side of the Bridge St. bridge.

Prone to Vandalism

Trees are among items prone to vandalism in city parks. City parks department has a nursery where its workers like John Bonter (left) and Doug McDermott care for plantlings before new trees are sufficiently mature for removal to parks.

First County Strike Entering Second Day

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Outside roadworks remained immobilized today as the first labor dispute in the history of Hastings County government entered its second, non-violent week.

There was no public indication of an immediate attempt to snap the deadlock that sees county road crews striking for higher wages and better overtime pay schedules.

The issue is an attempt to achieve average wage parity with municipal workers in the Belleville-Peterborough region.

The parity bid has boosted a wage demand that, in effect, amounts to $1.75 an hour.

Hastings Warden William McCrea says he meet the demands would cost the county "about $100,000 . . . we approved only last week — about $100,000.

On strike are about 20 members of the Hastings unit of local 793, International Union of Operating Engineers. The Hastings membership increases to about 35 for summer work programs now being implemented.

Besides wage increases, the union is seeking almost minimum on hours worked before overtime is paid.

But a major stumbling block, indicates a union spokesman, is a cash-for-settlement — the need to pay county workers' wages on par with the average for other similar municipal employees in the region.

The catchup is estimated at an average of $1.31 an hour. On top of that an extra 54 cents is being asked for all categories of workers.

A county truck driver earns $3.31 said Phil Gauthier, union area officer in Belleville. The rate compares with $4.80 paid by the city of Belleville, $4.86 in Trenton and $4.43-$4.48 in Peterborough County.

Asked if he knew our problems are . . . why the figure is so large." said Mr. Gauthier. "We're $1.20 in the hole right which was added to the tree

Hastings workers now are paid time-and-a-half overtime after 35 hours. The union wants this lowered to 40 hours, he said.

They also are behind other municipalities about 20 per cent in fringe benefits, he said.

The workers struck Tuesday morning, after last-minute mediation talks broke down.

"We don't really know where we go from here at present," said Warden McCrea late Tuesday. "We're willing to talk at any time. There's no animosity between both sides."

However, he wouldn't predict when the next move toward seeking settlement might come or how long the strike could last.

The workers' demands, he said, represented an increase of more than 40 per cent over a one-year agreement.

"This would represent an increase in the road budget of about $100,000 — and $1,100 a man, not counting overtime."

Progress on at least one project — reconstruction of County Road 18 near the Shannonville Gravel Road on Thurlow Township's Highway concession — was hit by the strike.

But the warden would not forecast how the county's road program could be delayed by the strike. As yet, summer construction crews have not yet been mustered.

The strike comes in the wake of passage of one of the county's biggest road budgets, approved last week after a big stretching of municipal muscles. It totalled $2,326,400 — exclusive of a deficit of $100,000 carried over from last year which was added to the levy charged members municipalities in Hastings for county government.

Present for Mom

The Moira River Conservation Authority has organized a Mother's Day present for area mothers this weekend — if Mom can get the rest of the family to cooperate.

Both the Vandenwater Park and O'Hara Mill conservation areas will be open at no charge for picnicking on Mother's Day, Sunday, May 11.

The camping season at Vandenwater Park will officially open May 30.

Talk Law and Order

A law and order seminar will be conducted this fall by the Quinte District Labor Council, it was announced at a council meeting Tuesday. Ian Reilly, vice-president of the council and chairman of the seminar committee, said the entire range of topics involved in law and order would come under discussion during the seminar.

Tips on Tapes

Now that city police are well into the lilly season of investigating reported thefts of stereo tape decks and eight-track tape cassettes from overnight parked cars, Chief Douglas Crumble has offered some safety tips to motorists.

"If there is a serial number on the tape deck, note it down and keep some private identification on, such as your social security number, on a spot where only you know it is. Try and park your car at night under a bright street light. It's a fact that when generally there is a lot of people around, thieves are when buying a tape deck from an individual that it is not stolen property."

Police Go on Public Display

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

Remember the neighborhood cop years ago — always strolling his beat, with time to chat, lend a hand or give advice?

The neighborhood cop hasn't changed but his system of operation has — patrol cars, high-frequency radio, computerized information systems — in short, he's become mechanized.

Police across Canada will attempt to re-inject the personal aspect into police work as they mark Law Enforcement Week next week (May 11-17).

The theme is "Police Protect People" and one of the highlights will be a display at the Quinte Mall May 15-17 involving the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, Belleville City Police Department, Canadian National Railway Police, military police and the Ontario Provincial Police.

"We want to bring into focus that the police cannot function without the aid of people," said City Police Chief Douglas Crumble in an interview.

"With the mechanization of the police force, the personal contact has been lost," commented Chief Crumble. "We want to regain that personal touch with the people."

Lapel buttons and automobile windshield stickers proclaiming the theme will be distributed.

And included in spot radio announcements will be a 45 RPM stereo recording lasting 95 seconds entitled "That's Our Policeman" with music and music by Canadian songwriter Bibby Gaindy and sung by himself (nickname—The Pied Piper) and a group of youngsters.

Some primary school classes have scheduled tours of the city police department and Sgt. Robert Hall, safety officer, will continue with his in-school safety session.

Centennial Secondary School students will enjoy a rap session at noon on Tuesday with Sgt. Harry Mitton of the city police traffic section and Cpl. Douglas Rutledge of the Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police.

Constable Lynn Smith of city police and Chief Crumble have already spoken to Belleville Rotarians and Quinte Kiwanis Club respectively on Monday.

Inspector Ralph Blatchford of city police will speak to Trinity United Church on Monday and to Belleville Kiwanis on Tuesday.

In addition, city police have been asked to participate in the "man and society" classes at Centennial School.

Also on Tuesday, a city policeman will address Grades 4-9 students at Centennial Public Method Church at 137 Avondale Rd.

Inspector Blatchford said wherever possible is assigning members, the department will attempt to avoid sending high-ranking officers. "We try to get a number of our people involved," he said.

Police Charge Five Following Tire Theft

Three Belleville and two Toronto youths have been charged by city police here in connection with the theft of an undermined number of automobile tires from the warehouse of Independent Tire Sales on Bleecker Ave. here.

A police spokesman said today the five people are David Allen Dayward, 18, of 2 Starling St., Percival Sherman, 22, of 301 Stanley St. and Kenneth Charles Thrasher, 17, of 7 Railway Terrace, all of Belleville. John Francis Decoste and Douglas Kenneth Duffy, 17, both of 1385 Martin Grove Rd. in Toronto. Decoste's age was unavailable.

Police said Dayward and Thrasher are charged with break, enter and theft and Decoste, Duffy and Sherman are charged with possession of stolen goods over $200.

54 tires were recovered in Toronto Tuesday evening, four found in Ontario and one discovered in Belleville. More tires are expected to be recovered after the company conducts a full inventory.

The theft was discovered Saturday morning by an employee and is under further investigation. A court date has not been set.

Brighton Cleans Up

BRIGHTON — Works superintendant, D. J. Simpson has asked Brighton work crew department crews to pick up refuse in a three-day spring cleanup in the village. Thursday is the final day for the pick-up service. Trash should be placed at the street for pickup.

Stirling Festival Marks Milestone

STIRLING — More than 250 competitors are performing this week in the Stirling Festival of Sacred Praise — a festival which this year marks its 25th anniversary.

The festival was founded in 1951 by church parish members to promote sacred praise through music and scripture reading — particularly among young people. In its first year, the competition attracted 141 contestants.

McLauchlan Decries Housing Situation

The problem of sufficient housing no longer can be solved by individuals, warns Carson McLaughlan.

It has become a social issue, says New Democratic Party candidate in Quinte riding.

He told the Bost and Shoe Workers Union, it is no longer possible for people earning moderate incomes " to own homes.

"Action on housing — like that on other social programs — must be undertaken on a big way to improve the standard of living . . . and to stimulate the economy".

The provincial government's recent grant of $1,500 to first-time home buyers is a move in the right direction.

"But we must make sure the money goes into new homes and not suddenly go up accordingly. We may end up subsidizing the developers and land speculators with our tax money — they rip us off enough now," he said.

Mortgage payments and upkeep are also a part of housing costs, he said. Hence, there should be (1) a ceiling on interest rates; (2) property taxes should be replaced by taxes geared to income; (3) government control of utilities should be introduced.

A government lottery and the possibility of off-track betting while attracting more money will also see organized crime "waiting in the wings" to invest "in a new Ontario" said Mr. McLauchlan.

He made the speech recently in Trenton.

Bus Driver Won't Talk

Ann Scanlan doesn't think her story is worth telling.

She's Belleville's first woman bus driver but, as she puts it, so what?

"After all when men drive, nobody wants stories."

Ann Scanlan added "We've progressed to the point now so it really isn't a story."

Mary Lou Bartl, chairman of the Belleville Transit Commission, thinks differently.

"It's a little publicity on this. I would like it like more women. They're easier to handle and they probably wouldn't pick up hitch-hikers.

"We're paying her the same money the men make, too."

Grape Boycott Planned

By COLIN BEUCK
Staff Reporter

A public meeting will be held May 22 at 8 p.m. in Nicholson Catholic College to discuss the plight of the grape harvesters in the United States and to arrange a local boycott of grapes picked by non-union labor. Jessica Govea, Canadian leader of the campaign, will be guest speaker.

Sister Rose Marie Scanlon, a teacher at Nicholson, said Wednesday, "It's a case of so much injustice." She explained her participation in the campaign supporting the United Farm Workers Union.

Organizers will have one hour planning session before May 16 when a picket of local grocery stores will take place. Pickets will hand out pamphlets explaining the problems faced by the fruit pickers and will ask consumers to boycott fruits not picked by the United Farm Workers.

Sister Rose Marie said local student bodies will be approached to hand out pamphlets. "We have to awaken our students to the injustices that exist," she said during a telephone interview Wednesday.

The Quinte District Labor Council and the National Farmers Union, are working in conjunction with the college to arrange the boycott.

Strike Goes On

Picket Allan Blackburn was among striking roadworkers outside Hastings County buildings on Pinnacle St. In first labor dispute in county's history workers are seeking catch-up pay with other municipal employees in Belleville region also with wage increases and new schedule minimum for overtime starts.

Serve Bureau

Quinte District Labor Council president Doug Sword and union representative to the council Gord Yates have been appointed to serve as directors of the Quinte Employee Assistance Centre — formerly the Alcoholic Bureau.

The bureau was re-named and expanded to include federal funding moved back to Belleville where it originated three years ago.

NDP Candidate Receives $200 from Labor Council

The Quinte District Labor Council Tuesday voted to donate $200 to the New Democratic Party pre-election campaign of Carson McLauchlan.

Mr. McLauchlan has already begun making a sweep of the Quinte region in door-to-door campaigns. The labor council, pledge is in delray expenses with the understanding another donation will be made at election time.

In supporting the motion, council treasurer Jack Yates said, "elections aren't won solely on money — but money does a hell lot for it."

The council also voted to make a campaign contribution to the NDP candidate in Prince Edward County.

Labor Council Votes For Buses to Rally

The Quinte District Labor Council will charter buses to transport members to a mass rally at Queen's Park May 17 to bring to the attention of the provincial government problems facing the laborer.

Member unions Tuesday night were asked to contact their members to form a Quinte group to attend the rally and also to raise union funds to offset the cost of the buses.

"Finding people to fill the buses shouldn't be any problem," said Gord Young, vice president of the Canadian General Electric Workers Union. "We've put several hundred unemployed unionists in the area."

Council president Doug Sword will attend a government meeting in Toronto when a formal provincial plan for full will be presented outlining the problems of unemployed workers in the province and how they affect the working class. Following that session, he said he will join the rally.

Spectators Make Mural Lighting Vary

OTTAWA (CP)—Reflecting the glass-tube-and-electronic world of science, a 28-foot kinetic light mural stands in the main lobby of the recently completed Statistics Canada tower here.

The $25,000 work designed by Tomas Jonkers, a Toronto-raised Canadian artist, is made of horizontal bands of colored plexiglass illuminated by fluorescent light. Varying in intensity according to the darkness and movement of spectators.

A program of music composed by Mr. Blanje, integrated with the moving light patterns, complements the color and light.

The public works department commissioned the sculpture as well as a $28,000 "electric" sculpture by Martin Hirschberg, another Toronto artist, to embellish new government buildings.

Mr. Hirschberg's creation will be assembled in the foyer of a $17-million research and health protection centre being built for the federal health department. Acrylic tubes with light sources controlled by an electric programmer will rise and twist from walls of angled mirrors. The programmer will be activated whenever people pass near the walls.

Efficiency Pays Off

CLEVELAND (AP) Dr. B. Samuel Tanenbaum, professor of electrical engineering at Case Western Reserve University, says an air-conditioner that is electrically efficient can save enough in cover its purchase in a few years, compared with operating costs of one less efficient.

Cops and Social Workers Patrol Together in Surrey

SURREY, B.C. (CP) — The cops and the social workers have fallen in love in this suburban municipality 20 miles southeast of Vancouver.

The unlikely romance began about a year ago when Bonnie Vinge, supervisor of family counselling for Surrey, notified family court pilot project, suggested it was in the mutual advantage of policemen and social workers to get together to deal with juvenile and family problems.

The result, six months later, was inauguration of the mobile family counsellor experiment, putting a counsellor in a police car five nights a week to provide immediate help for families in crisis and free policemen for more crime prevention work.

On week nights, counsellors work from 4 p.m. to midnight; on Fridays and Saturdays, the heavy crisis nights, they work from 1 p.m. to 3 a.m.

Each of the four—Lyn Pelisha, Selma Sebak, Les Sawatsky and Alard Mulder—works the roving shift one week a month, always serving with the same RCMP. shift to establish a continuing personal relationship.

The counsellor and an accompanying officer roam the densely-populated Whalley area of the municipality, responding to emergency calls selected through the "grab-an-effect" of the police dispatcher, who has had years of experience, said Sgt. Keith Sim of the Surrey detachment.

The policeman enters the house first while the counsellor stays in the car. Once the situation is calmed, the constable suggests that the disputants talk to a worker from the family court.

The counsellor comes in, listens to both sides of the dispute and tries to assess the family's needs—counselling, legal help or child care services. The constable may stay if there's any indications of more violence, but usually so leaves and the counsellor calls the dispatcher in an hour or so, asking to be picked up.

The family is referred to a daytime counsellor at the family court who can do a more detailed assessment of their problems and work out long-term help. If there is an immediate and continuing problem of physical danger, the Toronsellor can remove the mother or children from the home and arrange temporary housing and money.

The counsellor tells the family about the resources open to them through social agencies and through the agreements, legal aid, reconciliation and juvenile counselling.

The program unique in Canada, concentrates on domestic disputes, the most bothersome of both police and social agency caseloads.

Police dislike domestic calls because they are both dangerous and unresolvable: likely to occur again and again.

"A domestic dispute is potentially the most dangerous situation a constable can go into," Sgt. Sim said. "By far the greatest proportion of RCMP members killed and injured get it in domestic disputes or from mental patients—and the two are often related."

Sgt. Sim and Corporal Ross Tomlinson of the detachment's youth detail said all a policeman can do in a domestic dispute is try not to get killed, advise the combatants of their legal rights and arrest someone if an assault has taken place.

While police and social workers agree that domestic disputes are burdensome, they usually agree on little else except that they don't trust one other.

"We were a little leery when this project started," Sgt. Sim said. "Most of us didn't have much of an understanding of what social workers do and most contacts we had had showed us they didn't have much understanding or appreciation of our role.

"But it's worked out great."

Cpl. Townsend. "We found out they could be effective in helping cool domestic disputes and in dealing with juveniles whom, since they also have the power of probation officers, they can approach while we can't."

Counsellor Lyn Pelisha said her attitude toward the police has changed.

"I always thought police had redneck attitudes toward kids," she said. "But they do a great job and often are skilled in human relations."

Aluminum Sculling Craft

The world's first aluminum sculling craft is tried on the Thames in London. The single seater boat is designed for oarsmen weighing up to 175 pounds and has a one-piece hull of pre-painted aluminum. The craft cost 30 per cent less than a wooden boat and is 40 per cent lighter. (Reddish in the English Midlands. (CP Photo)

Karelia Heart Attack Rate World's Highest

JOENSUU, Finland (AP) — Tulve, Karttunen and his neighbors live at statistical ground. Their community has the highest heart-attack incidence rate in the world.

Karttunen's doctor had one at 40, his father died of an attack and his brother-in-law is recovering from one that came at 47. The charts show Karttunen, 45, is 50 times more susceptible than a man living on the Greek island of Crete.

Karttunen looks trim and is out in the thick forest each weekend hunting rabbits but the actuarial tables insist that he is a candidate for a heart attack 15 years earlier than a man like him in the United States.

He and his neighbors have petitioned the Finnish government to do something to curtail heart disease in the area called North Karelia, and a unique World Health Organization (WHO) program is under way that may change some of the accepted notions about the local causes of arteriosclerosis.

A startling aspect about lifestyle in this sparsely populated the Finnish-Soviet border is that its men are not overweight, get plenty of exercise and seem to escape from the stress situations that have been blamed by factors in coronary disease.

Yet 70 per cent of the adult males say they have had chest pains.

"If you ask a fellow anywhere else if he has experienced them, he'll answer yes or no," said Dr. Pekka Puska, chief of the project of the WHO program. "In North Karelia, if the answer isn't yes, they'll tell you, not yet."

Seventy-five per cent of the deaths among the 180,000 population of the region come from coronary or related ailments.

Figures in a WHO study showed that if only men males between the ages of 20 and 64 out of 1,000 men in Sofia, Bulgaria, had a heart attack each year, 21 do in a town of a few thousand like Tornansti, about 50 miles east of Joensuu.

"I've had two go before they were 30," said Dr. Heikki Siitonen. "One of the great shocks you get in coming from outside the area, as I did, is making school check-ups, and finding out how many young children are overweight."

When the five-year program began six years ago, doctors made a profile of the kind of men who were dying.

Most residents are dairy farmers or lumberjacks, lean, muscular, with substantially less body fat than a comparable group of American railway workers.

Their personality, as a general rule, was far from the standard high-risk type—that a hard-driving, young executive might, perhaps. Karttunen not only have a reputation—for hospitality and generosity but live in a natural setting so relaxing that a U.S. doctor might prescribe it for a vacation for a cardiac patient.

But the cholesterol level in the Karelians' blood was so high that WHO found that men with the lowest levels in the community are equal to the highest 10 per cent in Japan.

Their diet was extremely rich in fat and poor in vegetables. With dairy products plentiful, many men drank two quarts of milk a day. The meat staple was a fatty sausage and meals came rich with butter and pastries.

Most of the men smoked and there was considerable hypertension. These factors—diet, smoking and high blood pressure—became the main target areas of the program.

Dr. Vaino Sulninen, the medical officer, who is 49 and has already had a heart attack, said:

"The important thing for us is not campaigns and posters, although we do that. We take the initiative. We have hypertension registers now. We don't wait for people to come to us. We're trying to change a way of life at its root."

Besides a program to teach Karelian women how to lower the cholesterol level in their family's diet, the authorities were able to convince the three local dairies to produce more low-fat milk.

Bakers have co-operated by reducing sugar and butter content and the community's largest sausage manufacturer agreed—after he had a heart attack himself—to develop a low-fat substitute for the spicy sausage.

Cigarette advertising was banned and an was smoking is all public places. Private offices and stores were asked to forbid it. Among men, during the program period, smoking has gone down from 55 to 45 per cent.

Hypertension has been lowered 14 points on an average throughout the male population.

Karttunen, a taxi driver, knows that at 45 he is in a zone of deep danger. Two-thirds of the heart attacks here come in middle age where the majority in the United States occur after 65. He was sitting in the office of Dr. Jarmo Vetanen, where he had gone for a check of his hypertension, and talked about himself:

"We've made an effort on the diet at home, and my blood cholesterol level is better now. I take the high blood pressure medicine, and that's improved.

"But I'm still smoking. Yes, I know how foolish it is, and the doctor talks to me in pretty tough terms about it. God knows everybody talks enough about it. I get nagged everywhere. I have no interest in dying, but it's hard to stop smoking."

Dr. Puska says there won't be any concrete way to measure changes until the completion of the five-year program. But he said, "We expect improvement in the heart-attack rate because we have shown we're reducing the risk factors."

Dr. Puska has suggested the program may indicate that physical activity is a significant factor in preventing heart disease.

There is an effort to control behavior of the men in sedentary Karelians with that of their active neighbors, but doctors believe that if good physical condition generally helps recovery from an initial attack, it neither prevents nor attenuates others.

B.C. Publishers Find Going Tough

VANCOUVER (CP)—Despite favorable odds, a book publishing industry is being established in British Columbia.

From virtually nothing three years ago, it has grown to a $3-million industry, with more than 20 companies actively publishing in the province.

In 1965, Mitchell Press was the only active publisher in B.C. introducing about five new titles a year. Last year, more than 100 new titles were published on subjects ranging from boating, cooking and how-to books to poetry and yoga.

However, many of the companies have discovered disadvantages in being located west of the mountains.

The B.C. Publishers Group, a year old, outlined some of the problems in a brief submitted to the provincial government.

First, the brief said, printing costs here are 15 per cent higher than in Ontario and in Quebec and 35 per cent higher than in the United States.

It attributed the differences to higher labor costs and the need to ship all book-binding material and most of the paper from the east.

Second, it said, Canadian library wholesalers are based in Toronto, with the result that B.C. books often have to make a return trip to Ontario or to the U.S. before selling on local library shelves. The National Library of Canada, for example, purchases all its books through an American wholesaler, it said.

Third, the brief said, book publishers generally are unable to raise working capital through normal commercial markets. Banks, for instance, rarely accept bound books as collateral since they are not considered real assets.

Finally, the brief noted 70 per cent of the Canadian market is in Ontario and Quebec.

The problem of access to capital was a problem shared by all Canadian publishers until recently.

B.C. publishers have not been so fortunate.

"We're not looking for a handout," said Jack James, who divides his time between co-ordinating programs for the B.C. Publishers Group and running his own Self-Counsel Press in North Vancouver.

"We are an industry first and foremost, and are only looking for the kind of assistance which will give us an even start with other Canadian and foreign publishers."

Karl Siegler, business manager of Talonbooks in Vancouver, also said aid could be justified on that basis.

"This is a province which claims to listen to the little guy and supports secondary industry," Mr. Siegler said, "and at this point we're as little as anybody."

The B.C. Publishers Group has approached the provincial government for aid on three fronts.

It has asked for a meeting with Ernie Hall, the provincial secretary whose department administers the B.C. Cultural Fund, established in 1967 to allocate money earned on capital of $15 million—usually $1 million a year.

Publishers generally have been denied grants from the Cultural Fund because they are not registered as non-profit-making organizations.

Talonbooks, which publishes almost solely Canadian literature, is seeking grants from the Cultural Fund because of the cultural orientation of its books; it has sole rights to playwright Gorge Ryga, the English rights to Michael Tremblay and has published plays by Eric Nicol and David Freeman.

In its brief to Gary Lauk, minister of industrial and economic development, the Publishers Group recommended implementation of an aid program similar to that in Ontario, under which about $3 million in working capital has been made available to 11 Ontario publishers.

Finally, the Publishers Group has urged the department of education to adopt a more responsible book purchasing policy.

"A good 70 per cent of the textbooks in our public schools are American," Jack James, secretary-treasurer of the Publishers Group said.

With provincial aid programs and a move by the secretary of state in Ottawa to control foreign ownership, most publishers are confident the industry will thrive in B.C.

"People in B.C. are more regionally conscious," said Allan Vichert, production manager with J.J. Douglas Ltd. of North Vancouver.

"They will read more books about their own province than people in Ontario will," he said.

Russian Village Is Famous For Folk Tale Miniature

PALEKH, U.S.S.R. (AP)—This ancient village of 4,000 is a place, an art form and a way of life for a select few. To many collectors, its name is synonymous with a colorful little box glowing on the coffee table.

Palekh is world renowned for its miniature portrayals of old Russian folk tales, styled in vivid hues on black lacquered papier-mache.

The Russians themselves see little of it-60 per cent is exported for the even more beautiful commodity of foreign currency.

The Soviets are proud to show it off within limits. The technique has been jealously guarded for years. Recently, however, the government brought in foreign journalists to help celebrate Palekh's 50th anniversary.

Art in Palekh is far older than half a century. This was the home of some of the best icon painters before the Bolsheviks banned religious endeavors.

The Russians admit the heritage but the official line is that Palekh really blossomed when the icon painters turned to ancient folk legends for their subject matter after the 1917 revolution.

The Palekh style is purely decorative, more whimsical than the socialist mosaic which requires art to inspire the people to work harder for communism.

Palekh box or pin costs from $30 to $700, depending upon the artist and the intricacy of the work. Most items sell for under three figures.

About 180 artists, half of them women, work in the studio at the edge of the village, 250 miles northeast of Moscow. They produce about 30,000 items a year, far above the volume of the old icon masters who used to fast and pray before addressing the paint brush.

They work in tempera, an emulsion from the yolk of an egg, to produce the bright colors characteristic of their work. They use brushes made from squirrel hair, a goose feather to brush off the face of the polished piece and a wolf's tooth to polish the gold leaf lines.

It takes five years to become a member of the Ancient Painting Art Co-operative. Some students get bored and go out on their own.

"They seldom succeed, because they lose touch with their roots and the rural setting from which we get our inspiration," said one Palekh master.

The work is so straining that many of the artists wear glasses and often use a magnifying glass to work.

This apparent hump on the head is purely the result of the camera angle, as two men work on an industrial gas turbine at the St. Cloud, Minn., plant of Turbodyne Corporation. The men are putting the finishing touches to part of the compressor section of a turbine for a southern California utility company.

Dutch Consider Chain Of Wind-run Turbines

AMSTERDAM (Reuter) — Dutch scientists are working on a giant scheme to generate "clean" energy by harnessing the fierce winds of the North Sea.

The plans envisage a long chain of wind turbines, like colossal windmills, stretching along the coast or on artificial islands set at sea.

The scheme would please Dutch environmentalists who fiercely oppose building more nuclear power plants because of the risk of pollution and damage to wildlife.

The government's industrial council for economy, one of the groups studying alternative sources of energy, says a power station with 150 wind-driven turbines could produce as much electricity as the 650-megawatt nuclear power station near Flushing, south Holland.

"Technically, it would be possible to start the project within six years. Right now we are evaluating the cost aspects," said Prof. Willem van Gool, chairman of the government steering committee on energy.

Experts estimate that generating electricity by wind turbines would probably cost about 10 per cent more than by conventional means because of the new technology required.

But the scientists hope that large-scale production would eventually cut costs substantially.

The marine power station would probably consist of about 50 units, each with three wind turbines built on giant steel towers 225 feet high. The units would be driven by three huge rotor blades about 164 feet long.

The units, constructed on platforms rather like oil rigs, would be placed about half a mile apart.

The scientists believe that the output of wind turbines at sea would be considerably greater than along the coast or inland, where the wind would be less strong. Only 50 turbines would be needed out at sea to produce 500 megawatts, but the same output would take 25 along the coast or 125 inland.

To master the problem of uncertain wind conditions the so-called seamills might be linked with conventional power stations supplying the main grid.

Another possibility under study is a complex system of transforming the electricity from the turbines into hydrogen by water electrolysis.

The hydrogen could then be brought ashore by pipeline or in tankers. This would be cheaper than laying a network of electric cables.

The Dutch government is studying an interim report by the economy council before deciding to give the go-ahead for more detailed research.

The experts noted that the scheme would have virtually no environmental drawbacks and would help reduce Holland's dependence on oil for its energy needs.

Prof. van Gool said the turbine towers would not present a hazard to shipping. "They would be no more dangerous than oil rigs at present in the North Sea."

The only drawback of the scheme likely to cause an outcry is the fact that the turbines would ruin television reception over neighboring inland areas.

For centuries, Holland has used windmills to grind corn

Extend Subway

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Swedish engineers are forced to blast underground stations out of solid granite as they extend Stockholm's subway to the city suburbs. They are six city suburbs. They are surprised to find these "cave" stations cost one-fifth as much as regular stations built with prestressed concrete.

Bowman Combs Referee Lloyd Gilmour

Rene Robert's Sizzler Sinks Canadiens

BUFFALO (CP) — Coach Scotty Bowman of Montreal Canadiens was complaining what he thought was the turning point in Tuesday night's fifth game of the Stanley Cup semi-final won by Buffalo Sabres 3-4 in overtime.

"We had it under control until the penalty to Pierbourg," Bowman said, referring to a tripping call by referee Lloyd Gilmour against Pierbourg at the Montreal Forum at 13:02 of the third period.

"I heard Lloyd Gilmour say on the radio he wouldn't call a penalty in the neutral zone."

At that point, Scotty Morrison, National Hockey League referee-in-chief, emerged from the officials' dressing room. Bowman spotted him and the two became embroiled in a three-minute shouting match.

Morrison, who has heard Bowman criticize his officials before, told the Montreal coach he would like to see him say the officials had done a good job when the Canadiens lost.

Bowman at one point accused Morris of being biased in favor of one stage there was a reference made to a recent Bowman statement that referee Wally Harris did not like the Montreal coach.

The argument drew a small crowd of fans, reporters and photo-graphers and even some players peeked out of their dressing rooms to see what was going on.

Finally, Morrison wheeled away and Bowman brushed past the group of waiting reporters and said: "That's your referee-in-chief."

Robert—He Worked Hard and It Paid

It is the second time in this best-of-seven series that Robert and Rene Ramsay has bested the work of the officials. In the second game he was visibly upset over the work of Ron Wicks.

The Canadiens were leading Tuesday's game 4-3 after Jimmy Roberts third-period goal when Pierbourg's penalty brought out the Buffalo power play which tied the score 4-4 on Craig Ramsay's second goal of the game.

The Sabres then mounted a strong attack and had good chances to win in regulation time.

"Nobody likes to go into overtime," said Rene Robert who scored the winning goal at 2:26 of the overtime period. "You like to get it over quickly."

The win gave the Sabres a 3-2 lead in the series which resumes Thursday in Montreal.

Besides Ramsay's two goals, the Sabres got scores from Fred Stanfield and Gil Perreault. Jacques Lemaire, Yvan Cournoyer, Rioux Richard and Roberts scored for Montreal.

The Sabres had a 45-19 edge in shots including a 6-1 edge in the overtime period.

Coach Floyd Smith of the Sabres admitted that goalie Ken Dryden of Montreal had worried for a while."

On the winning goal, Robert stationed himself in the slot and took Perreault's pass on the faceoff and fired the puck past the Montreal goalie from close range.

"I was just trying to shoot on the net," said Robert. "Ken (Dryden) didn't even move. He didn't have time. They were screening him."

The overtime win was the Sabres' second over Montreal in this series. They won the first game here on Danny Gare's overtime goal at 4:42.

Smith, Smith and Robert agreed Tuesday's win was vital for the Sabres who had lost two previous two games in Montreal by 7-2 and 9-5 scores.

"We had to get going again," said Smith. "It was a good win for us. We needed it."

"We took two beatings," Robert said. "It was good for us to get beaten real bad. It made us realize that you aren't the only team on the ice. We worked hard when we got back. It paid off."

CLARENCE CAMPBELL

Robert Sues NHL

MONTREAL (CP) — The National Hockey League reactor vehemently Tuesday to a proposal that professional leagues face intervention by the federal government if they fail to reach agreement with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association (CAHA) on compensation for junior players who turn professional.

Roland Mercier, vice-president and junior hockey chairman of the CAHA, made the proposal while attending the annual junior championship—the Memorial Cup—in Kitchener, Ont.

Clarence Cam pbell, NHL president, said he had written a letter to Gordon Jucker, executive-director of the CAHA, to protest Mercier's proposal and to determine whether the statements reflected the views of the CAHA or the personal feelings of the official.

"We consider it a very unfriendly act," Campbell said. Mercier said his suggestion arose from the fact neither the NHL nor the rival World Hockey Association has renewed its pro-amateur agreement with the CAHA. The WHA has expressed its willingness to renew the agreement provided the rival WHA does the same. But so far the WHA has balked.

The WHA has already said it would not enter a new agreement under the current union, but would prefer dealing directly with individual players. It currently owes the CAHA $150,000, while the NHL has paid for all players it obtained in last year's amateur draft.

Mercier said his proposal, which would in effect ask the federal government to tax the leagues for playing in Canada, would be used only as a "last resort."

He said he had submitted his proposal to Robert Giroux, deputy health minister, at a meeting in Toronto last Monday. Mercier said the CAHA could charge a team $100,000 for and permit to play on Canadian ice.

Campbell said the NHL had paid the CAHA's development fund "many thousands of dollars" for players it received in the amateur draft, because Mercier's proposal as not in the best interests of the CAHA.

Lafleur, Clarke Named Tops

ST. LOUIS (CP) — Centre Bobby Clarke of Philadelphia Flyers and right wing Guy Lafleur of Montreal Canadiens were named Tuesday by Sporting News as the top players in the National Hockey League for 1974-75.

Clarke, who scored 27 goals and had 46 assists for 73 points, who scored 53 goals, were selected players of the year for their respective conferences in a poll of NHL players.

Flyer Bill of Atlanta Flames and Pierre Larouche of Pittsburgh Penguins were named rookies of the year in their respective conferences.

Hockey Player Jailed For Smuggling Hashish

HERNING, Denmark (AP) — Gregory Wentz, a 28-year-old American who played ice hockey with a Danish team, was sentenced to five years in prison Thursday for charges of smuggling 221 kilograms of hashish into Denmark and for attempting to smuggle another 200 kilos. He was arrested last December before a game for Gladsaxe, a team he joined in Denmark a year ago. Several hockey players and race drivers were arrested in what police described as the biggest of a large-scale smuggling ring.

Eye Injuries Cause Alarm

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto eye doctor, alarmed at the increasing number of eye injuries in hockey that cause blindness, has undertaken a research program to determine ways will prevent or reduce such damage.

Dr. Tom Padsky said Tuesday the study is "by no means complete, but I think it important to publish some of it before the annual meeting of the Canadian amateur Hockey Association in one next month and I'm hoping they'll give this problem some consideration."

Padsky said the study, which covers the 1973 and 1974 seasons, shows that 221 people (all but 3 men) were blinded as a result of hockey injuries during hockey games this year.

Of the 221 eye injuries reported in both, 131 had been caused by pucks, he said.

He admits the statistics are incomplete, "but I side them reliable because I would expect doctors to drop if they'd dealt with serious injuries."

Last year the Canadian Ophthalmological Society asked him to study eye injuries in hockey and he produced some disturbing figures concerning the 1973 72 season. Blindness had been inflicted in 24 eyes, of 341 injuries reported by 75 of 535 doctors polled, 19 were caused by sticks and 46 by pucks. In about half the cases, the players were under 16.

Brawl Mars Action As Guelph Takes Lead

EDMONTON (CP) — Guelph Biltmores grabbed a 3-1 lead in their best-of-seven Centennial Cup hockey final Tuesday night with a 4-1 win over Spruce Grove Mets in a game marred by a third-period brawl.

Captain Wally Hogg led the Southern Ontario Junior Hockey League champions with an impressive two-way performance.

Hogg scored two goals, one of them while Guelph was short-handed, and led the power-played Biltmores in blocking shots in their own end.

Tim Holder and Dave Kennedy contributed the other scoring, while Barry Brown, the rookie winger who scored three goals in Monday's Spruce Grove victory, got the lone Mets goal.

"Guelph must have wanted this win more than we did," said Spruce Grove coach Doug Messier whose club failed to score despite a two-man advantage for one minute and 45 seconds in the first period.

The third-period brawl broke out with only 67 seconds remaining in the contest when Spruce Grove forward Tony Leculyer tangled with Guelph goaltender Bob Sauve.

The brawl quickly spread to the other players on the ice. When it was over Leculyer, along with Hogg, Mark Dong, Bisson and Terry Gregory of Guelph received minor penalty game misconducts. Dave Holmes of Guelph and Dave Lewis of the Mets drew minor and minor misconduct.

Before the fight referee Bernie Hisley had called a total of nine minor penalties—six to Guelph and four to the Mets—and with one major to each team.

Players from both clubs showed signs of coming off the bench but Messier and Guelph coach Bob Noble managed to restrain them.

Twins Whip Barrie Flyers

THUNDER BAY (CP) — Thunder Bay Twins playing coach Dave Siciliano regards the fifth game in the best-of-seven Allan Cup final against Barrie Flyers Friday as crucial.

"The winner of that game probably will take the Allan Cup," he said Tuesday night shortly after the Twins blasted the Flyers 8-2 to even the series at 2-2.

"I can't see either of the teams taking the last two games in a row."

The Twins handed the Flyers their worst defeat of the series, coming close to eliminating the game terrifically throughout most of the contest in which Barrie goalies faced an avalanche of 52 shots.

The Twins surged ahead at 4:17 of the second and held a 5-1 margin after two before pounding in three more in the third against the weary Barrie crew.

"They beat a tired team," said Barrie playing coach Darryl Sittler who was wrestled with a sweat-soaked uniform after the game.

"After a couple of days rest I think we'll be okay Friday. I still think we have the best hockey team if we put it all together. But they sure are a bunch of hustlers. They just don't stop."

The Twins scoring was shared by Russ Elliott, Dave Bragnalo, Jack Byerley, Murray Wing, Bill McDonald, Barry Hogan, Tom Deacon and Brian Vescio.

Ron Robinson and Gordy Ashton provided the Flyers' scoring punch.

The 4,196 fans were delighted by the Twins' effort but many have felt some compassion for Flyers' goalie Grant Cole who finally was relieved of the hockey rage of shots with 2:50 left in the game when Ron Robinson, Robertson replaced him. Patterson was targed for one of the goals in the last minute of play.

Siciliano, despite the lopsided win, felt his team has played much better.

"Tonight we did a lot of running around in the first period and it gave them a lot of opportunities," said.

"But Rocky Menard came up with some key saves. We settled down after that and they didn't have too many more opportunities."

Sittler was hailed by his goaltender as the catalyst after his fading to continue a playoff game during the eastern final against St. John's Capitals. But the Flyers obtained a coin-flip from Cole permit him to return to the lineup for Tuesday's encounter.

The sixth game is scheduled for Saturday. If a seventh is required, it will be played Sunday.

Bernie Parent Aiming For Early Fishing Trip

BERNIE PARENT

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (CP) — Goalie Bernie Parent of Philadelphia Flyers can't wait until the hockey season is over so he can get in some sports fishing.

The way the Flyers are going, the season may be shorter than he thinks.

A friend came up to Bernie and told him the mackerel were really biting off the South Jersey coast. Parent and his wife live in a new home in Cherry Hill, N.J., not far from Philadelphia.

"I hope to win the cup and 20 grand and we'll go for some mackerel instead of mackerel," Bernie replied with a grin.

The Flyers are overwhelming favorites to end the season tonight for New York Islanders and advance into the National Hockey League playoff finals against either Montreal or Buffalo.

The chances of playoff survival for the Islanders were dimmed considerably Sunday when Parent returned to the net and blanked New York 1-0.

He didn't have to work hard, making only what he considered to be three difficult saves. But he said it was a good test for his ailing right knee.

Parent missed the first two games of the Islander series when he was struck on the knee by a puck during a pre-game warmup.

The Flyers lead the Islanders 3-0 in best-of-seven semi-final series and can complete their second series sweep of the playoffs in tonight's fourth game at the Nassau Coliseum.

Right now, there is little support anywhere for any repeat of the Islanders' miracle of Pittsburgh.

The Islanders were down 3-0 against the Penguins in the quarter-finals but rebounded to win and oust the next four games and the series. Only Toronto Maple Leafs had to endure that in NHL history—the last version against Detroit Red Wings in the Stanley Cup final.

But the Flyers are not the Penguins. The Islanders were able to capitalize on a weak Pittsburgh defence. With Parent in the net, the Flyer defence is one of the best in the league.

Th Flyers have not been beaten in 22 games—18 wins and two ties—since March 8. In their playoff opening quarter-finals in four games, they swept Toronto only six goals and an average of 24 shots a game.

Islanders goalie Glenn Resch, who stopped 36 shots Sunday, believes the Islanders still can come back.

"There's a little bit of hope is involved, a little bit of luck. You gotta get a bounce. But you never know. No one thought we could do it against Pittsburgh. So we'll just have to wait and see."

Indians One Away

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Jim Pettes scored early in the second period Tuesday night to stifle a New Haven comeback and give Springfield Indians a 4-2 win over the Nighthawks in an American Hockey League playoff game.

The Indians, who lead the final series 3-1, could wrap up the title with a victory tonight.

Pettes' second goal, which came at 2:36 of the middle period, just 22 seconds after Richard Brodeur had tied it for New Haven even at 2-2.

Pat Lewis and Phil Hosea scored in a first period marred by 14 penalties to send the teams into a 2-2-0 advantage.

But Rick Kessell scored for Indians into the second period to bring the Nighthawks back within one but Hosea tying goal.

After Pettes provided the pay-ahead tally, Tom Cassidy scored at 8:06 of the second period to give the Indians an insurance goal.

The third period was scoreless.

Dennis Abgrall picked three assists for Springfield.

Indians' goalie Rick Charron stopped 32 shots and Nighthawk netminder Brian Holdsworth turned aside 28.

Aeros Stick to Basics While Stopping Quebec

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Aeros' Bill Dineen says post-season hockey play is the only way to stop Quebec Nordiques and his defending champions Aeros are doing a good job of it.

The Aeros dumped visiting Quebec 5-3 Tuesday night and a 3-0 lead in the 1 n 1 r best-of-seven World Hockey Association final playoff series.

The series resumes Saturday in Quebec.

"That's the only way to play them because of their great speed," Dineen said. "If you don't, they'll skate us right down the ice."

The speedy Nordiques were ready to play after a slow start but Quebec came back 17 seconds into the second period by Marc Tardif, his second of the game.

Then at 2:06, Gerry Ruskowski, who replaced Nordiques' goalie Michel Dion in the second-period fight, poked in the go-ahead goal for the Aeros and Andre Hinse made it 5-3 with his fifth playoff goal at 11:06.

Gordie Howe kept the Aeros even with the Nordiques with goals in the first and second periods. Dale Hoganson scored for Quebec in the first period and Tardif's first goal in the second period.

Houston increased the pressure on Quebec goalie Richard Brodeur in the second with 10, 15 and 23 shots on goal for a total of 47—21 more than the Nordiques had.

Switch to Calgary ?

Blazers May Be Cowboys

CALGARY (CP) — The manager of the Calgary Exhibition Association and Stampede said last night that arrangements have been completed for a possible transfer of the World Hockey Association to move to Calgary.

"The only thing remaining is the (exhibition) board to accept or reject it," said manager Bill Pratte.

The board met Tuesday night and a decision was to be announced today at simultaneous press conferences in Calgary and Vancouver at 9 a.m. Pacific time.

Pratte confirmed earlier that the Calgary Exhibition and the 5,800-seat Stampede Corral, which the exhibition association owns, for home games during the 1975-76 WHA season.

Reports in Calgary said the board would approve the move, but number of seats available for the 1975 baseball all-star game on the first day ordered were accepted. Milwaukee Brewers said Tuesday. The Brewers hope for the whole league classic at Milwaukee County Stadium on July 15, said Bob Uecker, the Brewer catcher marked on Monday had club, if moved from Vancouver, could be renamed Calgary Cowboys.

Scotty Munro, owner-manager of Calgary Centennials of the Western Canada Hockey League said the decision will be "a complicated judgment." Munro, who lives in Vancouver, is one of the probable founding members of the WHA Cowboys, should he refused to say whether he is directly involved in the proposed transfer.

The Blazers have failed to make a profit during two years in Vancouver, sharing the Pacific Coliseum with the Canucks of the National Hockey League.

What Could the Experts Teach Our Coaches?

Belleville must be one of the most knowledgeable hockey towns in the world. There just isn't be any question about it.

Here we sit, with the most renowned hockey symposium in the world (according to people who know) taking place right under our noses and only one coach from Trenton and one from our city feel they need to attend.

"It's beyond me," said Gary Green, executive director of Ontario Minor Hockey. The organizing body behind the symposium, "there are no coaches coming from across Canada and the United States, colleges and university coaches, even coaches from Europe, but there are only two coaches from the Bay of Quinte area."

Among the coaches who seem to be necessary to attend the symposium is Billy Dineen, the man behind the Houston Aeros' bench. He coaches the Howes. He won the World Hockey Association championship last year and is right in the middle of the WHA final again, yet he seems to think a symposium such as the one here in Belleville will help him.

"I was talking to one of the Belleville coaches at a meeting in a while ago," laughed Green, "and he said he wasn't coming because he didn't think he could be taught anything."

There are a lot of coaches around the area who must feel the same way. And they must be right. Just look at the Oshawa Rockets' championship. The Bay of Quinte area holds.

Instructors at the clinic include Philadelphia Flyers' coach Fred Shero; Team Canada '74 coach Billy Harris; Peterborough Peter coach, Roger Neilson; Austrian National coach during the 1974 season Frank Carney; sports psychologists Dr. Richard Anderson and John Marshall and physical fitness expert Peter Snow. Former David Bauer Olympic Canadian National coach, will be on hand for questions and panel discussions.

Let's face it. What could the coaches of Belleville or the surrounding area learn from a bunch of guys like that?

I mean, maybe Billy Dineen needs some tips on coaching, but nobody around here could possibly pick up anything from this symposium.

If coaches from the area happen to get their heads out of the clouds before registration for the symposium reaches the 300 mark, that's when the registration is closed (120 coaches have already applied) you can get all the information you want by writing Tom O'Shaster Hockey School, care of Albert College Belleville.

The symposium goes from July 31 August 3.

Bruins Make It on Hard Work

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — New Westminster Bruins made it to the Memorial Cup hockey tournament with a bunch of hoer - sorted but dedicated hockey players.

While the Western Canada Hockey League champions lack the finesse of the other two teams in the tournament—Toronto Marlboros and Sherbrooke Beavers — they know they can go into tonight's game with Toronto rated as even money to take the cup and the Canadian major junior hockey championship.

New Westminster was never expected to make it past the first round of the WCHL playoffs. The Bruins faced second-place Medicine Hat for the quarter-finals after finishing a notch below them in the West Division standings and won the series in five games.

They played first-place Victoria Cougars in the semi-finals and disposed of them in six games. The Bruins final series with Saskatoon Blades went seven games, with the Bruins winning the last two at home.

They may face their biggest test of the season in tonight's game against the Marlboros, Ontario Hockey Association champions.

Toronto won its first game of the tournament 5-4 in overtime over Sherbrooke, the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League winners. The Marlboros win was a come-from-behind effort with three second-period power-play goals.

If Monday night's New Westminster-Sherbrooke game was any indication of things to come, Toronto may have quite a few power-play chances.

Wed-Canadian won the game 7-5 with five unanswered second period goals in a contest that saw 102 penalty minutes assessed, including 14 majors. New Westminster played shortanded most of the first period, accounting for Sherbrooke's 3-0 opening - period lead.

The winner of tonight's game will automatically gain a berth in Sunday's 1:30 p.m. EDT final. Sherbrooke, losers of its two games in the first round, will play the loser of tonight's game on Friday to determine the other team in the final.

Ernie McLean, coach of the Bruins, says he doesn't plan any lineup changes for tonight's game at Kitchener Memorial Auditorium—site of all games in the eight-day tournament.

Toronto coach George Armstrong didn't put his team through any special drills during a minor practice Tuesday, but said if the Marlboros are playing their best "they're the team I going to have to be pretty good to beat us."

Linesmen in Cup Game Will Be Taking No Chances

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — The linesmen at tonight's Memorial Cup hockey game between Toronto Marlboros and New Westminster Bruins have been ordered to wear helmets by Hugh McLean, referee-in-chief of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association (CAHA).

McLean, of London, Ont., said Tuesday that he told linesmen before Monday's game between New Westminster and Sherbrooke Beavers in west Saskatoon because of the many fights they might have to break up.

Monday's game saw 102 penalty minutes assessed and the Beasmen broke up seven fights.

The Quebec Major Junior Hockey League has been invited by the CAHA to field a team to represent Canada at December's world junior hockey tournament in Finland.

Gord Juckes, CAHA executive director, said he approached QMJHL officials on Tuesday with the invitation. The Western Canada Hockey League represented Canada in the world junior tournament at Winnipeg this year and Peterborough Petes of the Ontario Hockey Association travelled to last year's tournament in Russia.

One of the many rumors circulating at the Memorial Cup tournament is that Calgary Centennials of the WCHL will move to Vancouver next season. Reason for the move is reported to be that Vancouver Blazers of the World Hockey Association have moved to Calgary, leaving the Centennials without an arena.

Ed Chynoweth, WCHL president, said all transfers must be approved by the league directors and must first be submitted to him. Chynoweth said he hasn't received any application for the Calgary move, which could pose problems for Victoria Cougars and New Westminster since it infringes upon their territory.

Ted Lindsay, guest speaker at the CAHA's Memorial Cup dinner Tuesday night, took a swipe at the two major hockey leagues for their policy of removing young players from junior ranks before they are ready for pro play.

Lindsay, a former National Hockey League star with Detroit Red Wings, blamed "the greedy elements of hockey" for threatening the entire structure of Canada's national game. He said the pro leagues are doing their best to "rape junior hockey."

Clarence (Tubby) Schmale, commissioner of the OHA Major Junior A series, said Tuesday he favors a three-game playoff format in place of the present round-robin tournament for the Memorial Cup. He suggested the Ontario and Quebec champions play off in one series with the winner then advancing to meet the West in a best-of-seven final.

Bulls Fall

OAKLAND (AP) — Golden State Warriors stormed back from a seemingly ruinous first period Tuesday night and beat Chicago Bulls 111-105 to even their National Basketball Association Western Conference final at two games each.

The Warriors trailed by 19 points early in the second quarter, but cut the Bulls lead to two points—23-25—at halftime.

Rick Barry scored 26 of his 30 points in the second half when the Pacific Division champions opened a post - the first-placed Bulls.

Chicago, Midwest Division champions, were ahead 84-82 after three quarters. The Warriors tied the score three times before going ahead to stay 99-98 on a layup by Derrek Dickey at 9:47 left in the game. Dickey had 20 points in the last quarter, when Barry scored 12.

The Bulls' Bob Love, who sat out most of the third period after drawing his fifth personal foul, scored nine of his team's points in the last quarter.

Love led Chicago scorers with 27 points, and Jerry Sloan followed with 22.

Dickey, a reserve forward who scored 14 for the Warriors while guard Charles Johnson finished with 13 points, including five near the end of the game.

The best-of-seven series resumes here Thursday night.

He is a young left-hander just breaking into the National League. His west to Lafayette high school in Brooklyn, N.Y.

But there end the similarities between Pete Falcone of the San Francisco Giants and Sandy Koufax, the former great pitcher.

The 21-year-old Falcone made his fifth major-league start in his team's 25th game Tuesday night. Koufax didn't appear in his first game until the end of June, 39 summers ago, and didn't start until July 4.

A 19-year-old Koufax pitched a total of 42 innings his first season, while Falcone already has worked 37. The last eight of those innings were spent beating Atlanta, 7-1, holding the Braves hitless for the first six innings and losing his chance on an eight-inning ball.

In Tuesday's other National League baseball action, Los Angeles Dodgers beat Houston Astros 3-1, Montreal Expos defeated Chicago Cubs 8-4, Cincinnati Reds beat San Diego Padres 7-3 and Pittsburgh Pirates edged New York Mets 2-1 in eight innings. The Philadelphia-St. Louis game was rained out.

Randy Moffitt came on in relief of the 21-year-old Falcone. The two finished with a three-hitter that went into the books as Falcone's third victory in four decisions.

"He has the poise of a 10-year veteran," says manager Wes Westrum of his southpaw.

Los Angeles pitcher Don Sutton carried a one-hitter into the eighth inning but lost that on a leadoff single by Cesar Cedeno. Sutton, who had a six-hitter in his second consecutive shutout and 23 consecutive scoreless innings rode away on Rob Walton's ninth-inning home run.

2-run Homers — So What?

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Joe Coleman thought he had a good pitch. Johnny Bench thought he threw a bad pitch. Both pitches came down behind a fence as two run homers led Cincinnati and Boston came up with victories anyway.

Detroit Tigers' Coleman was tagged for a two-run homer by Milwaukee's George Scott in the first inning but that was the only hit he allowed as the Tigers rallied to end the Brewers' five-game winning streak 4-2.

Kansas City Royals' Brian Rinkard Texas on four hits until Willie Davis tied the game with a two-run homer in the eighth. But the Royals retaliated with four runs in the bottom of the eighth and beat the Rangers 8-3.

In other American League baseball action, Boston Red Sox defeated Cleveland Indians 4-1, Oakland A's beat California Angels 5-3 and Minnesota Twins defeated Chicago White Sox 4-1. The New York-Baltimore game was rained out.

George Brett delivered a tie-breaking single and Frank White added a two-run hit in Kansas City's four-run eighth. After the Rangers had tied the score on Davis' two-run homer, Jim Bibby issued a leadoff walk to John Mayberry in the bottom of the eighth and Hal McRae sin-gled him to second.

Kansas City Manager Jim Frey pinch-hitted Steve Foucault for Bibby. Foucault singled to right, Brett mapped the bases with a single and the runners wound up on second and third on the throw to the plate. White followed with a two-run single, third second on the throw home and scored on a single by Buck Martinez.

Bill Lee's six-hit pitching and Bob Montgomery's two - run single led Boston to its fourth consecutive win. Montgomery's second-inning single off Dick Bosman put the Red Sox ahead 2-0 after Hughes, by Jim Rice and Rico Petrocelli and an error by second baseman Jack Brohamer loaded the bases.

Ed Bane doubled home the winning run for Oakland in the seventh inning after Claudell Washington tied the score with a leadoff homer. The A's added an insurance run in the eighth on singles by Phil Garner and Bill North and Washington's sacrifice fly.

Steve Braun hit his first home run of the season and Larry Hisle added a run-scoring triple to help the Twins to their fourth consecutive win. The defeat was the sixth for Chicago's Wilbur Wood, who has won only once.

SIX TO COMPETE

MIKE JORGENSON

Rekindles Old Spark

MONREAL (CP) — First baseman Mike Jorgensen of Montreal Expos kept another date with pitcher Rick Reuschel of Chicago Cubs sunday night and rekindled an old spark of his memory.

Jorgensen accepted a fourth inning offering from Reuschel and powered out his second career grand-slam home run over the fence in right field to lead the Expos to a 9-4 win over the Cubs in Reuschel's first Expos home ball action.

Jorgensen's first grand slam came off Reuschel on Sept. 4, 1973, also at Jerry Park.

Foamtreads last longer than flowers.

A cosy pair of Foamtread slippers may be the most sensible idea for Mother's Day yet. They're something that'll make her life nicer the other 364 days a year.

Foamtreads come in a bouquet of wonderful colours too. Everything from red, red rose to lily white.

And of course, Foamtreads come in enough styles to please even a mother-in-law.

We've got styles with wedge heels or flat. Foam soles or leather. And no matter which one you choose, they all have the comfort that made Foamtreads famous.

(They should make you pretty popular too.)

This year give someone you love some Foamtreads. They're cosy. They don't cost much. And they also last considerably longer than a box of chocolates.

New City Is Being Built For Folk of Mixed Race

CAPE TOWN (AP)—South Africa has begun the creation of a major new monument to apartheid.

An entire city called Atlantis, which will house 200,000 people by the year 2000, is being built near Cape Town exclusively for coloreds, or people of mixed race.

The new city will help ease an acute housing shortage for the Cape Province's 1.7 million coloreds, who are carefully segregated from white residential areas in Cape Town and other cities.

Coloreds are not as strictly segregated as Africans in South Africa because government policy is to allow them "parallel development" with whites while "separate development" is ordained for blacks.

Thousands currently live in shanty towns on the outskirts of Cape Town in an area known as the Cape Flats.

Atlantis will be built from scratch on the plains about 30 miles north of Cape Town.

The creation of Atlantis was announced recently by Jan J. Loots, minister of planning.

It is the first totally new and independent city planned in the republic and the first time in the history of South Africa that a city will come into being with schools, hospitals, community centres, playing fields and other facilities all there before the residents themselves arrive, said a government spokesman.

Although affiliated with Cape Town, Atlantis will be a new city with a residential and industrial complex linked to the rest of the western Cape by road and railway, said Loots.

"What we envisage is a balanced city with a happy community in all spheres of life.

"Industry will be asked to play a vital role because if we want people here we will have to provide the necessary job opportunities which will arise out of industrial development."

Industries setting up business in Atlantis will be granted government tax concessions and assistance based on the number of coloreds they employ in their factories.

Loots said the first 600 houses will be ready for occupation later this year.

The first command units will be villages, then towns, each with a population of about 60,000, which will finally be amalgamated into a city.

Atlantis will stand near a plateau overlooking an imposing natural amphitheatre.

The plateau will house the central business district and two large industrial areas totalling about 1,720 acres will be located on the city's fringes.

Atlantis, a legendary island in the Atlantic Ocean, was said to be the seat of a powerful empire around 10,000 BC which sank into the sea.

Agricultural Students Aid Farmers in India

BOMBAY (CP) — Manjula Gandhi, a Bombay college student, has just returned from spending six weeks in a village in Madhya Pradesh state, 450 miles away.

Miss Gandhi, no relation of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, was in a group of 25 student volunteers who helped illiterate farmers in agriculture, sanitation, education and other fields.

The government met half the expenses of the college in sending the volunteers to the remote hamlet. In the last six months, dozens of student groups have been active in rural areas.

"This is India's version of what students in China are doing," said Miss Gandhi, who comes from an orthodox Hindu family where women are not expected to work on farms.

"We are constantly told by visitors to China that students there are massively participating in rural development. Maybe they are ahead of us in this area. But the important thing about our campaign is that it is entirely voluntary."

Reports from various Indian states show that nearly 300,000 students have taken part in rural development work in the last year.

Federal and state agriculture ministries now are working on a plan to involve at least a million students in sowing, harvesting an other agricultural work. They will be sent to areas where farmers need help during key agricultural operations.

Many of the students will be from the growing network of agricultural colleges so that farmers will get the benefit of modern technology.

For instance, Madhav Patil, a senior student of the agricultural college at Poona, is hoping to help peasants set up tree farm operations each [illegible] student model of irrigation pumps year.

"In India, you can't force students to go to villages or apply to water their fields.

"One optimistic intimate is where," said an official. "We Officials of the federal agriculture ministry said as many can get up by a minimum of five to show some impressive results as 10 million students may million trees through student suits."

Vaillancourt Execution Postponed Until Fall

OTTAWA (CP) — Rene Vaillancourt's May 15 date with the hangman was delayed Tuesday until Oct. 31, possibly to allow the federal government to put its own life on the line in an effort to end capital punishment.

Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said a cabinet committee began studying the Vaillancourt case Friday but found it too complex, with seven other men on death row, to allow a quick decision.

The lengthy stay of execution for Vaillancourt, 26, who killed a Toronto Police Constable Leslie Maitland in 1973 after a bank robbery, was taken as a signal that the abolitionist Trudeau cabinet is out to solve what former cabinet member Robert Stanbury calls the dilemma of the present law.

The law, on trial until December, 1977, is that anyone convicted of killing a working policeman or prison employee must be sentenced to death.

The final appeal is to the federal cabinet, which reviews all death sentences and has commuted each one since the last hanging in Canada in 1962.

"Under the present law, they're obliged to consider the facts," says Mr. Stanbury. "At times you can, there's bound to be a case where there are no extenuating circumstances."

All Commons votes on capital punishment in the last 10 years have been free—because the Parliament not being required to vote along party lines allows the government not having its own head on the line. Efforts to get Parliament to accept total abolition have been fruitless and the compromise law has been the result.

Mr. Allmand said he will examine all alternatives during the next few months. These included tougher gun, bail and parole law.

Mackasey Won't Lift Postal Suspensions

OTTAWA (CP) — Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey said Tuesday he will not withdraw suspensions against 40 Montreal postal employees "even in return for a national collective agreement."

"They are not negotiable," Mr. Mackasey told Walter Dinsdale (PC—Brandon-Souris) in the Commons.

Joe Davidson, president of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, has said the suspensions must be retracted before a new national working agreement can be reached.

"I am not wiping the suspensions out to please Mr. Davidson," Mr. Mackasey said.

"The quickest way to deal with the . . . problems is for him to stop running around the country and go back to the bargaining table where he belongs.

"The government was prepared to "sit down and negotiate in good faith."

"If, however, one of the conditions of arriving at a settlement is that we waive or cancel the suspensions, I suspect we shall still be waiting for a settlement in 1980."

Mr. Mackasey said outside the House that the government has no intention of bowing to Mr. Davidson's request."

The employees, who received indefinite suspensions a month ago, would not necessarily be fired.

"The length of suspension will vary with the particular infractions, ranging from a number of days . . . to a matter of actual dismissal."

The workers were suspended after preventing casual employees from working. They said overtime bans had not been offered overtime before the part-time workers were brought in.

Otto Lang Target Of Bitter Criticism

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservative criticism of government plans to improve income stabilization for western grain farmers turned into a hard-hitting personal attack Tuesday on Otto Lang, minister responsible for the wheat board.

"Everything this minister has touched . . . has turned out bad for us," said Alvin Hamilton, Conservative agriculture critic.

"Why does he keep stirring everything up?"

"The minister was born on a farm," added Alberta Conservative Jack Horner, a cattle rancher and frequent critic of Mr. Lang, "but he left the farm because he hated agriculture. I say . . . he still hates agriculture."

Their comments came during continued debate on a bill to improve income stabilization for grain farmers by establishing a special pool from which to draw in bad crop years.

Conservative MPs support the general aim of the bill, but say it falls short of what farmers need. They want it delayed until public hearings can be held in the West to get first-hand advice from grain producers and farm groups.

Hockey Player Goes to Jail for Manslaughter

TORONTO (CP) — In a major appeal by Paul Douglas Smith, sentenced to jail for manslaughter in the death of another hockey player, Judgment Tuesday, the Court of Appeal dismissed the appellant's conviction of manslaughter in the death of player during a fight in Peterborough, Ontario, in 1973.

St. Thomas' Has Weathered Adversity Before

By ROBIN CHASE
Intelligencer Staff Reporter

St. Thomas' Anglican Church struggles for life today — battered, weakened, blackened and, a testimony to the awesome power of God perhaps, when all the truth is known to the fallacy of man.

And as its demise was contrived in at least some fashion by man, so now its fate lies in the hands of other men in high places with power over resources by which to restore it and return it to life.

But St. Thomas' has weathered adversity before, on Feb. 26, 1876, to be exact, when it was partially-destroyed by fire just 18 years after its original construction.

Whatever the future holds in store, St. Thomas' history will always be known thanks to Ina Bellhouse of Belleville, whose booklet, The Parish Story, written in 1966 to honor the church's sesquicentennial, recounts its life from the time before Belleville was incorporated as a city.

It was conceived on Dec. 26, 1818 when the congregation was formed and a meeting held by a number of "the respectable inhabitants of the town and vicinity" for the purpose of devising means to erect a commodious Episcopal Church".

At a meeting held on Feb. 20, 1819, Thomas Coleman, on request, named the proposed church St. Thomas. Building operations began in 1819 and the first service was held in the church in June, 1821.

Mrs. Bellhouse's book, "according to pictures, the first church was an impressive brick building. The pews were square with high backs and the pulpit and prayer desk were of the three decker style, placed in the centre of the church."

The brunt of much criticism for its appearance, the humble structure was finally deemed to small and in April 1859 a committee was appointed "to procure a plan for a new church from some competent architect in the city of Toronto."

On May 30, 1855, the corner stone of a new stone church was laid and under it placed a dedicatory document printed on satin at The Intelligencer office.

In addition, inside the corner stone was laid a copy of the Belleville Intelligencer from its 22nd year of operation, a copy of the Canadian Churchman from the 18th year of its operation, various coins and other tokens.

H. H. Horsey was the architect, John Regan and Andrew Northcott of Belleville were the builders. Percy Gees's grandfather, a stonemason, assisted in the construction.

Sunday, March 21, 1858 marked the opening of the new church and 19 years later it had its first trial by fire. A photograph from the era of that gothic structure shows almost a twin of the present damaged building.

St. Thomas' re-opened for services on Dec. 26, 1876 and the Hastings Chronicle reported, "the pews with those in the gallery are calculated to seat 850 persons . . . the carved railings of the pulpit and altar are elegant, yet chaste and harmonious . . . the brackets in the roof . . . the cost of the building so far is over four thousand pounds, and we are told yet a surplus towards it has been solicited outside the town and congregation."

In 1904 the church was consecrated by Bishop Lewis and Bishop Mills. On May 29, 1955, the 100th anniversary of the laying of the corner stone was celebrated. And in a centennial project in 1967, floodlights were installed outside the church.

So St. Thomas' stood until the early hours of Wednesday, April 30, 1975 when it was ravaged by another fiery blow. And lest to memory are the following:

— irreplaceable stained-glass windows depicting the beginning and the end of the life of Christ, portraying various biblical themes and commemorating the memory of many of Belleville's past personalities.

— several memorial plaques fashioned on memory of Capt. John Walden Meyers, the founder of Belleville;

— several regimental colors of the 49th Regiment, a unique history including the oldest, being those of the 13th Battalion which were made and donated to the regiment by the ladies of Belleville in 1883 and deposited in the church in 1906.

— and the War Memorial Organ dedicated in 1927 which contained pipes from the two older organs of St. Thomas'.

Showbiz Shorts

NEW YORK (AP) — Stephanie Edwards, co-host of ABC-TV's AM America show, will leave that job after May 16 to concentrate on her acting career in Hollywood, ABC said Tuesday.

Miss Edwards began co-hosting the show with journalist Bill Beutel when it started Jan. 6.

JACKSON (AP) — More than 1,000 persons jammed into the Mississippi Coliseum Monday night as singer Elvis Presley performed for charity.

Presley's show raised more than $110,000 for victims of the Jan. 9 tornadoes which raked McComb and other southwestern Mississippi communities.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bill Macy, who plays the easy-going husband on the television series "Maude," is incorporating his actress Samantha Harper on the Hawaiian island of Maui following their marriage Sunday, a spokesman said Tuesday.

This is the third marriage for Macy, 51, and the first for Miss Harper, 28. They met while they both appeared in the stage presentation of O Calcutta.

ROME (Reuter) — Italian actress Nella Montagna, 101, who made her stage debut in 1888, died in Rome Tuesday, her family said.

In her day, she was regarded as the prima donna of the Italian theatre, and toured in Spain, Portugal, Brazil and Argentina.

LONDON (AP) — Actress Elizabeth Taylor and her friend Henry Wynberg, a Los Angeles car dealer, left London on Sunday for Lausanne, where she will resume work on the film Blackbird of Happiness.

Miss Taylor, 43, came to Britain 10 days ago for treatment of a flu infection.

While here, she had a reunion with her three children—actor Christopher and Michael Wilding and daughter Liza Todd.

Miss Taylor was divorced last June from her fifth husband, actor Richard Burton.

First Fire

An eerie similarity can be seen be tween this photograph of the original St. Thomas' Anglican Church, taken after its first fire on February 26, 1876 ,and the present gutted structure which resulted from the fire of April 30, 1975.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Tuesday, May 8

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You're going to find things different approach to a problem facing you. A temporary solution is better than marking time.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You will be a very slow starter today. To get off and going you'll need motivation. Think about those advantages.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your instinctive leader could be restricted because you lack resources. Use your brains. You'll find ways to get out of the box.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If your ambitions are too obvious concerning your ambitions, you're going to create problems. Be subtle to succeed.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't hesitate to ask advice on how to solve a complicated problem today. No one will think less of you. They'll be pleased you asked.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You'll run into a stone wall in negotiations today. An alternate plan you'll devise will break the impasse.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) An intensive selling job will be necessary to get your point across today where help is vital. Don't hold back details.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) A project you were hoping to complete today must be shelved. You don't have the proper tools on turn to something else.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You've been lucky in your dealings today as yesterday. Don't take chances on anything sight-unseen and don't gamble.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 20) Your mate will not be in accord with your ideas on a family matter. You may have to take the initiative to realize what's good for all.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Being overbearing with subordinates today will only serve to defeat you. You'll get nowhere by goading them. Charm works wonders.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 21) Before buying anything today, economize-shop. It may take extra time, but a healthier purse will result.

To Your Good Health

Eating in Sleep Makes Her Fat

By G. C. THORESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thoreson: I have a problem I hope you can help me with. I walk in my sleep. But that's not the only problem. I go to the refrigerator and take food and I eat it. I don't know I have done this until the next morning when I see crumbs on the floor and in my bed.

I figure I must have eaten the food in bed and on my way back from the refrigerator. As a result of eating during the night I am gaining so much weight that my clothes don't fit me. I don't eat much during the day.

Doctor, will you please tell me if there is any way of stopping this?—Mrs. M. F.

Stranger things than your nocturnal iceboxing have occurred during episodes of sleepwalking.

Somnambulism is a sort of hypnotic state in which the person has amnesia. In a real sense, but relative to recollection of his actions. That seems to fit your situation except you have provided your own trail of evidence to go along with it.

Sleepwalking can accompany a dream, and in your case the dream could be about food. Such occurrences often stem from unresolved emotional conflict. Again, in your situation food may enter the picture.

But it is also possible that sexual hunger is a factor. You don't eat much during the day according to your letter. Perhaps if you did eat three balanced meals the subconscious urge to eat at night would disappear. The meals could be low in calories, a protein snack on retiring might help too. Try a piece of meat, a cheese sandwich, or a glass of milk.

Do the crumbs provide any clue as to what you have eaten? Your weight gain is probably a result of purging at mealtime of foods you deny yourself during your waking hours.

If a change in eating habits doesn't work, then you should perhaps see a psychiatrist. Sleepwalking is a dramatic emotional conflict involved that may not be apparent to you.

Dear Dr. Thoreson: My mother believes you can stretch parts of your body by pulling on them. For example, you can stretch your body and become taller.

This is a real problem. My sister says she's wrong. What do you say?—M. D.

No amount of stretching is going to add a whit of length to the body or to body parts. Stretching positions are a part of any good exercise program, and will help improve your posture, allowing you to make the maximum use of the natural height you have.

This may be what your mother means. If you want to convince your mother, explain to her that there is no traction for neck injuries gain not even a little height because of it.

Dear Dr. Thoreson: My doctor told me two years ago I was a hidden diabetic. Can you tell me what this means, and the symptoms of it? Is it like other forms of diabetes?—Mrs. B.

With a (atent (or hidden) diabetes there may be no overt symptoms, but the doctor may have found sugar in your urine or an elevated blood sugar, both signs of the disease. Hidden This means that you have the potential now for developing an overt diabetes, especially if you are not careful.

If you are overweight, you should be aware that a history of obesity is found in about 80 percent of all diabetics. And you should be checked rather regularly from now on (once a year, every at least) for urine and blood sugar.

If you are an older person you can slip into overt diabetes with very few symptoms, and one of the symptoms is a sudden weight loss.

Latent diabetes is often found in women who have had large birth-weight babies or unexpected pregnancies (miscarriages or stillbirth).

In your case, a more extensive urine and blood test would be in order. Overweight is the key content, a borderline situation could get worse unless you are careful.

Bombay Plans Lovers Parks

BOMBAY (CP) — The government of this metropolis of 8.5 million is making plans to give its young lovers a break. While Bombay is relatively free of muggings—only 37 were reported in the last year—courting couples are frequently subjected to harassment on the beaches and in parks.

Students are victimized by criminals like the two young men who threatened to chase a couple off a beach unless they were paid. But on other occasions, the course of true love is disrupted by pranksters just for the fun of it.

"There's just no place in this big city for lovers," complained one student at a college near whose evening on the beach a friend was allegedly robbed by a group of youths who seemed then with barely enough.

"It's a shame," agreed D. S. Chandiramani, a member of the city government, proposing a plan to set up exclusive parks for lovers.

The parks, of which four would be established initially, would be fenced in and guarded by watchmen to ensure that the lovers' privacy is undisturbed.

While the facility was viewed with enthusiasm by Bombay's younger citizens, some of their elders had misgivings.

"There is already too much state interference in our lives," protested Salim Fazalbhoy, a Moslem businessman with five daughters. "Now our children are to be given a course in lovemaking under government protection."

Stage Design Chosen

EDMONTON (CP) — Lawrence Miller, assistant with the University of Alberta drama department, has been honored by the United States International Theatre Institute. The institute has selected one of his stage designs for inclusion in a traveling exhibition which will represent the U.S. at the Prague Quadrennial later this second one. Now the defence has two spade tricks, but can't get a third. You have time to knock out both aces and make your contract.

Opening lead—4 ♣

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

The "C" in ARCH stands for Count your winners and losers. Sometimes the total doesn't come to 13. Then you can count 11 winners after the spade opening. Two in spades and three in each other suit. The three in clubs come from the "R" for Review the bidding which marks East with the queen of that suit as part of his opening bid.

When you count losers you are looking at two aces and three aces for a total of five losers. That makes a total of 8 tricks. A further study shows that if you win the first trick with your ace of spades over East's king you will knock out one of East's aces. He will send back a spade. West will let you win that trick. Then when you knock out the other ace, the three spade tricks will be taken against you before you can score your own tricks.

Now you come to the "I" or "Imagine" or "Imagination." How can I make this hand?

The answer is you can make it by changing your count of both winners and losers. Obviously, when you Analyze the bidding you assume that West has fourth best of a five-card suit headed by the king or queen. Your Review of the bidding shows East on the aces. Thus, you let East hold the first spade and West the second one. Now the defence has two spade tricks, but can't get a third. You have time to knock out both aces and make your contract.

CARD SENSE

The bidding has been:

You, South, hold:

♠KQ9654 ♥A2 ♦K64 ♣A987

What do you do now?

A — Pass. Your partner has bid only four and five spades. Accept his judgment.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Instead of bidding five spades your partner has bid five hearts over your five diamonds. What do you do now?

Army's History Out

LONDON (CP) — The Salvation Army has published its own history in paperback. Entitled No Discharge in This War, it is by the army's eighth (and incumbent) general, Frederick L. Coutts. It traces the movement's progress from a chance meeting between the founder, General Booth, and a group of revivalists holding a gospel meeting outside the Blind Beggar public house in the east end of London in 1865.

Museum of Acadian Settlers

The Acadian House, built in 1765, for a French Commonlad, is now a museum St. Martinville, La., containing furnishings and other items depicting the way of life of the early Acadian settlers. In south Louisiana's heartland, language and customs of those exiled from Nova Scotia more than 200 years ago are still very much in evidence. (CP Photo)

Canadian Nominated UN Food Body Head

EDMONTON (CP) — A 48-year-old Canadian agricultural economist is one of seven candidates from six regions of the world nominated for the post of director-general of the United Nation's Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO).

W. David Hopper, president of the International Development Research Centre at Ottawa since 1970, has been nominated to fill the vacancy that will be created when the present director-general, Dr. A. H. Boerma of the Netherlands, retires at the end of this year.

Dr. Boerma took his first four-year term at the start of 1968 and was re-elected for another four-year term at the end of 1971.

In 1971, the FAO's governing conference, which elects the director-general, decided that future terms would be for a single, non-renewable six-year period.

The next election will take place during the regular, biennial session of the conference at Rome in November.

Dr. Hopper received a science degree in agriculture from McGill University in 1950 and a doctorate in economics of agriculture and cultural anthropology from Cornell University in 1957.

Between 1957 and 1959 he taught agricultural economics at Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph and moved to University of Chicago where he taught economics and anthropology until 1963 when he went to India as an agricultural economist for the Ford Foundation, and later, for the Rockefeller Foundation. He has been president of the research centre since 1970.

Other candidates include Dr. Francisco Aguilar of El Salvador, who has been director of the FAO-United Nations World Food Program since 1968, Eric M. Ojala of New Zealand, assistant director-general of the FAO's economic and social policy department since 1970, Dr. Josef Okmiewski, 58, of Poland, his country's former agriculture minister and now Polish ambassador to the Netherlands, Dem Edouard Saouma, 48, of Lebanon, director of FAO's land and water development division since 1968, Samuel Sey, 51, first deputy governor of the Bank of Ghana, and Dr. Bukar Shah, 47, permanent secretary in charge of Nigeria's agriculture and natural resources ministry since 1968.

Today's Furniture Better

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP)—Synthetic fabrics and artificial wood surfaces make today's furniture add up to longer lasting, more practical furniture, says Harry Cherney.

Mr. Cherney has been in the furniture business for more than 40 years and says furniture made today is far more durable and practical than the best of the silks and mohairs of the past.

"We hear everybody talking about things as they were in the good old days," says Mr. Cherney, partner in the Cherney's five-city chain of furniture stores. "Well, I know what they were like in the good old days and they weren't as good in at many cases as they are now."

Veneer and material that duplicates wood surfaces "may be artificial in a sense . . . but how impractical it is to have that beautiful wood table," he said. "The first person who puts a glass down on that table top for all time unless it's totally refinished.

"Not every reproduction makes sense. But many of the synthetic fabrics and the impervious finishes that we have today simply mean that furniture is going to last longer than the furniture that our grandparents had."

The Cherney family started operations in Peterborough in 1914 when the late Abe Cherney founded a family clothing store that later became one of a chain. Brothers Harry, Myer and Louis later took over the business and began expanding.

They now have showrooms in Whitby, Cobourg and Kingston.

"But Harry Cherney remembers when days weren't as good. In 1935, the Depression had hit bottom two years earlier, the economy had stabilized somewhat but remained low until pre-Second World War days, recalls Mr. Cherney.

"Everything was one color. There was something called a 178 taupe fabric and 16 per cent of what we sold was in that one particular color and fabric," he said. "Any changes were two and three years apart.

"It was more a matter of economics than of taste. If you could afford a new living room set, you got that 178 taupe . . .

The Cherney brothers have opened a new 100,000 square foot warehouse sales centre here with a "supermarket" format.

The furniture is displayed with price tags showing both the store price and the suggested retail price. Customers who pick up furniture in factory cartons from the loading docks save the cost of delivery.

"I'm on the idea of having it all under one roof with minimum administration, minimum overhead and it is an efficiency that just had to be made . . ." said Mr. Cherney.

Safety Expert Started His Career by Accident

EDMONTON (CP) — Paul Lawrence spent 29 years in the safety business and to hear him tell it, the whole thing started as an accident.

Mr. Lawrence, recently retired after 29 years as director of the Alberta Safety Council, was a commercial artist by training when he was employed in the publicity department of a Montreal munitions factory during the Second World War.

The plant made detonators for ammunition using "very touchy explosives" and "I had to absorb the principles of safety in order to do the publicity."

"The company was safety-oriented. The safety in that plant was so good it was safer to work there than in an office."

Mr. Lawrence wrote "safety propaganda" and designed posters at the plant and when the war ended he continued to work in the safety business.

The need for public safety education was the same in the late 1940s as now, he said.

"Traffic was killing too many people. Fire was a terrific hazard. You only had to look at the statistics to see the need for public education."

He pioneered the first Safe Driving Day in Canada in 1954.

"It was tremendous. We held it Dec. 1 in 1954. We had been averaging 28 deaths in the province every December. That December we had only four deaths."

The idea was later adopted by the Canada Safety Council and expanded into Safe Driving Week.

Mr. Lawrence is also credited with developing the Pedal Pushers Club, the first organized bicycle safety program in North America: a rural safety essay competition which still attracts 20,000 entries annually and the first defensive driving program in Alberta.

'Evangeline' Buried At Lousiana Church

ST. MARTINVILLE,La. (CP) — Canada and the state of Louisiana are linked by close historic ties through the Acadians. A threat to security to the British during their fight to conquer French Canada, the French-speaking residents of Nova Scotia were ordered into exile. In the British-ruled colonies of Maryland and Georgia.

Their exposition is the background of Longfellow's famous poem Evangeline, which tells of the separation of the lovers Evangeline and Gabriel. The poem ends as Evangeline, who has become a nun, finds Gabriel, now a soldier, in New England. He has been wounded and dies in her arms.

In Louisiana they tell a story that is equally sad but more prosaic.

Before leaving Nova Scotia, many of the Acadians had agreed to try to make their way to Louisiana, a territory that remained French until some years after the Seven Years' War ended.

It took Evangeline's beloved Gabriel 10 years to reach St. Martinville, where he married three years later. Some months after the marriage, Evangeline and her family arrived.

Visitors are shown the wharf on the Bayou Teche where the ship docked and a nearby oak tree under which Gabriel is said to have broken the news to Evangeline of his marriage.

The dead soon after. Legend says she went out of her mind and died of grief.

"Nonsense," says Mrs. James Guitard, curator of the Acadia House Museum. She died of consumption after walking most of the way from the Atlantic coast.

Evangeline, whose real name was Emmeline Labiche, is buried in the graveyard of St. Martin Church under a seated statue of Longfellow's heroine, the gift of Dolores del Rio who played the role in a 1929 film that was shot in Martinville.

The Acadian House Museum, a 214-storey brick house built in 1765, is described in some tourist literature as Gabriel's home but Mrs. Guitard, whose ancestors were Acadians, says it belonged to Commandant Collette de la Houssaye, a French nobleman who married one of Queen Marie Antoinette's ladies-in-waiting.

On its lawn is a huge oak under which Evangeline and Gabriel are said to meet at night.

Gabriel, really Louis Arceneaux, is virtually ignored in St. Martinville. His burial place is unmarked and his plantation not been much a success.

"We Acadians haven't forgiven him," says Mrs. Guitard. "He should have waited."

Snowmobile Trail Ready

TIMMINS, Ont. (CP) — A 65 mile trail for snowmobiles has been completed this winter. The trail begins at the transportation and communications ministry weigh scales in Cochrane, Ont., and passes through 10 townships. It is marked with directional arrows, danger warnings, caution and road crossing signs. It is a project of the provincial natural resources ministry.

Payoff from Find Years Away Brazil's Oil Euphoria Fades

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — The oil euphoria that gushed up in Brazil last September has faded. Now there is a sober awareness that the payoff from a prolonged oil offshore strike is years and many millions of dollars away.

But official hopes remain high that the find eventually will more than double Brazil's production and shrink the nation's oil bill—the biggest of any Latin-American country.

The government is quietly making big new investments to test the potential of new reserves.

The state-run oil monopoly, Petrobras, says it plans to spend $400 million on exploration and development in 1975, 90 per cent more than in 1974.

Operations off the Atlantic coast were expanded early in February with the purchase of a $30-million drilling ship, the Petrobras III.

Brazil already had a rented drilling ship and another of its own, the Petrobras II, in operation. A Petrobras spokesman said the company plans to rent still another soon at the going rate of $25,000 to $30,000 a day.

When the government announced in May that the Petrobras II had made a major discovery east of the city of Campos, the country came down with a case of petroleum fever.

Newspaper headlines predicted Brazilian self-sufficiency in oil, the stock market shot up, and businessmen celebrated.

At Campos, the Lions Club put up a sign saying, "Welcome to Campos, the Petroleum Capital," and at least one bar was renamed Petrolino.

President Ernesto Geisel said in a year-end speech that the discovery enhanced Brazil's "credibility in international financial circles." He said Brazil's oil production was sure to expand significantly within a few years, but that this would require "intensive work in evaluation and development."

Since then, newspaper headlines on oil have lost their urgency, and Petrobras shares—which led the stock market boomlet—have leveled off. Officials and businessmen are back to worrying about immediate economic problems, such as what to do about Brazil's huge trade deficit.

The deficit was aggravated in 1974 by oil imports that cost nearly $3 billion, up from about $1 billion in 1973. Brazil uses about 750,000 barrels a day, producing less than 200,000.

After the discovery of the Garoupa field off Campos, the president of Petrobras estimated that the field would produce 300,000 barrels a day within two years.

A Petrobras spokesman said recently it might take four years for production to start and the 300,000-barrel estimate was premature. But he added that nothing had happened to undermine the general optimism.

One basis for Brazilian oil optimism has been a Petrobras report that 13 limestone formations similar to Garoupa have been detected off Campos and that about 15 exploratory wells will be drilled in the region.

The spokesman said Petrobras also is pressing ahead with exploratory drilling off the shore of neighboring Espirito Santo state, in the mouth of the Amazon River and in the Amazon jungle of Acre state, not far from oil fields discovered across the border by Peru.

"That's a very difficult region," the spokesman said, referring to Acre. "The equipment goes in by helicopter."

Brazil's most productive oil fields currently are in the onshore petroleum of state of Bahia. Several smaller fields have been discovered and are under development off the shores of other northeastern states.

Lectures In Mexico

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — Donald V. Deverall, director of the centre for continuing management education at University of Waterloo recently conducted a five-day seminar on management at University Autonoma of Guadalajara in Mexico. He said there is keen interest among Latin American countries on the way management personnel are developed by Canadian business and industry.

Phobias Acquired Gradually

VANCOUVER (CP) — People invariably by phobias build up their fears in a series of experience, says Dr. Gunther Reith, director of the Behavior Therapy Clinic at University of British Columbia.

"Contrary to Freud, the origin of most phobias is not a single dramatic experience but a psychological distinance learned gradually," said Dr. Reith.

"People often don't realize they have a phobic disorder, for instance, until they're suddenly aware that their heart is pounding on an elevator."

"Each subsequent time the fear increases. The buildup of anxiety could result in a heart attack."

Dr. Reith cited the example of a man so frightened by crossing under trolley wires that he kept changing his route to work in order to avoid them.

"Finally, the wires became so dense overhead, he couldn't find what he felt was a safe route. He was forced to quit his job."

There are several types of phobias but one of the most common is agoraphobia, a fear of open spaces and leaving the security of home environment. Agraphobics often become housebound.

Dr. Reith said about two per cent of all people requesting psychological help are suffering from true phobias.

For 10 years, doctors have been practising a theory for treating phobic disorders called systematic desensitization.

"The emphasis for helping people with phobic disorders is addressed to the manifestations rather than the causes of the phobia," Dr. Reith said.

To a person afraid of flying in a plane, the manifestations of the phobia are his anticipatory fears of flying and actually being on a plane. Patients are asked to itemize their anxieties.

A man nervous about flying might say he felt low anxiety when a plane was passing overhead. His anxiety level would increase if he dreamed of flying. Being on a plane registered high anxiety.

In systematic desensitization, a treatment which takes from eight to 16 sessions, the patient is taught to recognize his anxiety and categorize it on a scale of one to 100.

The treatment involves a verbal presentation of images of the difficult situation while the patient is relaxed. His tolerance to his fears thus built up, the patient is next asked to go to an airport to watch planes and get accustomed to them.

The next step is walking in a plane and finally taking a short flight.

"After a patient with the fear of flying has flown and felt little or no anxiety, the therapy is considered successful," said Dr. Reith.

CP News Roundup

Folks Send Their Mail By Wagon

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — The great Canadian wagon train is promising to turn into the great Canadian mail train.

Wagon master Gordon Robertson said in an interview Tuesday that people have started to hand members of the wagon train pieces of mail to be delivered to various towns along their route to Alberta.

"For some it's a gimmick," Mr. Roberts said. "They'd just like their letter to go by stagecoach.

"Others fear a mail strike and just don't trust the post office," he said. "They feel their letter would probably get there by wagon train before it would by mail."

Awaits Report

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — John Greenwood, Peel region Crown attorney, has ordered provincial police last week to investigate allegations of corruption in city hall, said Tuesday he expects a report within 30 days.

Funds Low

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — Margaret Birch, provincial social services secretary, said Tuesday Ontario certainly will have to begin taking more responsibilities for social-care programs because the provincial government is running out of money to support new projects.

Fire Kills Four

THUNDER BAY, Ont. (CP) — A fire in a tent killed four persons Tuesday on Lake Helen Reserve about 40 miles northeast of here. Dead are Charles Peter, 45, his wife Madeline, 32, and their grandsons, Joseph, 12, and Julius, 8. The Ontario fire marshal's office said it suspects the fire was caused by an overheated wood stove.

Broadbent Critical

OTTAWA (CP) — Government anti-inflation programs are wage controls without price controls, NDP parliamentary leader Ed Broadbent said Tuesday.

"It's clearly a set of documents aimed at working people only," Mr. Broadbent said of two government working papers distributed to labor leaders.

Dealer Fights GM

TORONTO (CP) — Campbell Chevrolet Ltd. of Sudbury, Ont., was granted a Supreme Court of Ontario injunction Monday restraining General Motors of Canada Ltd. from establishing a new Chevrolet dealership within five miles of the Sudbury business city's largest Chevrolet dealership.

Raises Smaller

OTTAWA (CP) — Wage increases negotiated through collective bargaining show a downward trend in the first three months of 1975, the federal labor department reported Tuesday.

Of 80 settlements reached in the first three months of the year involving bargaining units of 500 or more employees, average annual increases in base pay rates were 16 per cent. Construction industry agreements are excluded.

Curbs Asked

OTTAWA (CP) — Pleading financial hardship, the predominantly foreign-owned domestic electronics industry urged the federal government Tuesday to put new restrictions on imports of U.S. and Japanese television sets and components.

Opposes Leniency

STRATHROY, Ont. (CP) — Ontario Premier William Davis called Tuesday for stiffer penalties for persons convicted of violent crimes and said the federal Bail Reform Act is too lenient.

Asked by a student whether he favored capital punishment, the premier declined to answer, saying the matter is the federal government's responsibility. But he said violent crimes are increasing and persons convicted of such crimes must be deferred.

New Type of Automobile Will Store Excess Power

TORONTO (CP) — Ralph Flanagan, a University of Toronto professor, and Anthony O'Donohoe, a Toronto alderman, have proposed a high-efficiency hybrid automobile which would cut gasoline consumption by 50 per cent. They say the car would save Canadian drivers $2.1 billion a year.

The key to their plan is a hybrid drive control system for a wheel-type energy storage unit. Power in the prototype would come from a diesel engine.

All power produced would flow through the storage unit and a new type of transmission to the wheels.

When the car used more than the power produced by the engine, extra would be drawn from the storage unit. When it used less, the excess would be stored in the unit.

The prototype would be a two-passenger city car, ideal for commuter use, Prof. Flanagan said.

Dredging Trial Rulings Awaited

HAMILTON (CP) — Mr. Justice Peter Callon of the Ontario Supreme Court was to rule today on defence motions presented at a trial in connection with alleged kickbacks on Hamilton Harbor dredging contracts.

Lawyer Ray Harris, acting for Reginald Leigh Fisher, argued Tuesday that charges of conspiracy and allegations of "substantive" offences should be tried separately.

Malcolm Robb, lawyer for Kenneth Ronald Elliott, asked for more particulars on each charge. He also argued that the first count, charging Elliott and Fisher with defrauding the harbor commission of $500,000, be separated from the rest of the indictment and tried first.

Lawyer John Bowlby made a motion Monday for special status to represent former harbor commissioner Del Hickey and Joseph Lanza, who are named in one of the counts of the indictment but not charged.

There are 13 counts against Elliott, former Hamilton Harbor commissioner, and 19 against Fisher, a business consultant. They are charged in connection with alleged kickbacks totalling $365,000 on dredging contracts.

Elliott, 42, and Fisher, 41, are jointly charged with fraud, uttering forged documents and conspiracy. In addition, Elliott is charged with breach of trust.

Lawyer Harris argued Tuesday that the jury "will be hearing five or six weeks of evidence" and the reference to other counts will be in their minds as they hear evidence on each charge.

He suggested five separate trials would be shorter than marathon proceedings facing the court at present.

Mr. Robb said he suggested the first count be separated from the rest of the indictment because the complexity of the present indictment will exhaust the jury.

Assistant Crown Attorney Rod McLeod said defence suggestions would complicate matters and five trials would be oppressive "not only to Elliott and Fisher, but to the administration of justice as well."

The jury for the trial has not been selected. Mr. Justice Callon dismissed the jury panel while he heard legal arguments Tuesday. The jury was to return today.

Elliott and Fisher have not yet been asked to plead to the charges.

Mr. Justice Callon rejected a motion Tuesday by Mr. Robb to have charges against the defendants dismissed. Mr. Robb had argued wording of the charges was vague and unclear.

Hiring Halls Rules Coming

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor code amendments will be introduced to halt hiring hall abuses by labor unions, Labor Minister John Munro said Tuesday.

The changes will deal with "the whole question of abuses in hiring hall practices," he said in the Commons. But he gave no indication when the amendments will be tabled for first reading.

He made the announcement in response to a question from Allan Lawrence (PC—Northumberland-Durham) on the Seafarers' International Union (SIU).

Mr. Lawrence asked whether an inquiry will be called on the basis of information compiled for the government at SIU activities.

Mr. Munro said he hopes to make an announcement within the next few days. He did not elaborate.

SIU has been accused of violence, intimidation and blacklisting of members.

Cocaine Valued At Million Seized

TORONTO (CP) — An eight-month undercover investigation has resulted in the arrest of seven persons and confiscation of about five pounds of cocaine, RCMP said Tuesday.

Insp. Emile Beaulieu of the RCMP's Toronto-based drug squad said several more arrests are expected after the weekend seizure of the drug with a street value estimated by police to be about $1 million.

Price Freeze Law Said Almost Ready

News Briefs

Charges Coming

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor Minister John Munro said Wednesday that charges will be laid "in the fairly near future" against Quebec longshoremen who have defied a back to work law passed by Parliament. He told the Commons an injunction will be sought today in Montreal, adding the force of a court order to the special law passed two weeks ago.

Supervisors Get Less

TORONTO (CP) — A contract currently being voted on by letter carriers will give them more pay than their supervisors as of July 1, Postmaster General Bryce Mackasey said Wednesday.

Non-swimmer Drowns

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — Paul Chun, 18, of Mississauga drowned Wednesday in the Credit River when his racing canoe capsized. He and Clare Bosma, 16, were paddling the canoe in a supervised school physical education program. Police said the youths were not wearing life jackets and the Chun youth was a non-swimmer.

No Jobs for Women

TORONTO (CP) — A borough of North York committee suggested that women be invited to try jobs such as loading garbage trucks and digging ditches has been rebuffed by the all-male union local which does the work. A meeting of 60 of the 750 members of the local unanimously rejected the proposal because they felt they might lose pay during the experiment.

Fat Proving Fatal

OTTAWA (CP) — Poor eating habits and lack of exercise are fading seven years off the life of half the Canadian population — the "overweight half" — a natural nutrition seminar was told here Wednesday. Unless poor habits are changed, most people by the year 2000 will spend one quarter of their salaries on hospital bills, says Dr. Madeleine Blanchet of the Quebec government's social affairs department.

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government may use long-promised legislation permitting it to freeze or roll back "excessive" prices in its efforts to get the public to accept voluntary wage and price restraints.

Corporate Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet says the legislation is "almost ready," but it is being held back until current consultations on wage and price restraint are completed.

Finance Minister John Turner's campaign for a restraints system to fight inflation has run into resistance from some labor leaders and politicians who say they fear the plan may be tough on wages but soft on prices, profits and rents.

Asked if there is a direct link between the bill's preparation and the restraint talks, Mr. Ouellet said: "There is or there could be. That depends upon the outcome of the consultation process."

Documents published this week show the government is proposing maximum wage increases of 12 per cent a year. For those workers who had single increases in pay last year the increase should be eight per cent.

Price rises would be limited to that needed to recover costs.

Part of Mr. Turner's over-all restraint program is a series of boards to monitor price and income increases. They could then publish reports on whether guidelines set as targets for controlling inflation were being followed.

Consumer affairs department officials have previously indicated a new tribunal, probably with a civil servant as permanent chairman, would consider whether prices were excessive. They could then order price freezes or rollbacks.

In certain circumstances, companies might also be ordered to give refunds to consumers. This might be done by requiring the offending firm or industry to pay the amount that was overcharged to Ottawa, or by keeping prices frozen longer until consumers had been reimbursed.

Report Disturbs Pepin

MONTREAL (CP) — Marcel Pepin, president of the Confederation of National Trade Unions (CNTU), told a news conference Wednesday that his union fears implementation of Cliche Commission recommendations would destroy the trade union movement in Quebec.

Mr. Pepin said the report was correct in identifying certain rival QFL unions as the "cancer" in Quebec's construction industry. But such recommendations as forcing unions to incorporate and surveillance of strike and contract votes sought to make them a state instrument.

In Quebec City, Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer said he plans to introduce soon two bills of the report.

Munro Pleased By CLC Response

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's labor leaders Wednesday received the federal government's wage-and-price restraint proposals as sufficient and set nine conditions for continuing discussions on a program to control inflation.

The leaders, representing 1.2 million members in unions affiliated with the Canadian Labor Congress, stated notice they will not let labor become the scapegoat in the battle against inflation nor let labor bear the brunt of restraints.

In Ottawa, Labor Minister John Munro said he was encouraged by the initial response because he believed the labor movement was giving serious thought to the government's attempt to find a consensus among business, labor and government officials on methods of beating inflation.

The congress statement released after the meeting said that until now the federal government has been unwilling or incapable of bridging the gap between the views of those held by labor and that of the federal cabinet.

The government has not made a positive commitment to ensure that the brunt of the fight against inflation will fall equally on all groups of society, it said.

"The net result of Turner's proposals would be to establish a ceiling on wages while leaving all other forms of income unrestrained," the statement said.

"The labor movement is willing to do its part in the fight against inflation but it will never consent to discriminatory treatment against wage earners and savers and those who have no means to protect themselves."

PM Says Talks To Continue

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will continue talks with labor leaders in an attempt to reach agreement on voluntary wage restraints, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau said today.

But there will be no specific attempt to negotiate the nine conditions set by the Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) for holding voluntary agreement on rising voluntary agreement on restraints, he said.

Saigon's Curtain Is Raised

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The new South Vietnamese government resumed communications with the outside world Wednesday. Communications had been cut since South Vietnam surrendered to the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese April 30.

A Saigon radio broadcast monitored in Bangkok said the Saigon general post office would relay telegrams to any part of North Vietnam and that messages could be sent anywhere in the world.

Associated Press reporters George Esper, Peter Arnett and Matt Franjola, who remained behind voluntarily, said the markets were open, major hotels were functioning and no restrictions were being placed on the movements of more than 30 foreign newspaper men.

Associated Press writer Daniel De Lacy reported from Bangphong that machinery was pouring into the Binh Thuan province port from Phanrang which had been captured by the Vietnamese and Pathet Lao forces that had disrupted the ceasefire there since mid-April, government sources said.

Travel Agency Deal Reported

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada financial officers were aware of an unusual $100,000 payment to a Montreal travel agent last November, the Air Canada inquiry was told Wednesday.

Yves Mocard, former Air Canada vice-president of marketing, said he discussed his plan to set up Mocard McGregor Travel Co. Ltd. with Michael Cochrane, the airline's vice-president of finance, before the $100,000 was paid to R. Y. McGregor, travel agency president, Nov. 29 last year.

HILDA PUGH, president of the 15,000-member Canadian Kennel Club, was in Belleville Wednesday with some advice for local dog-owners. She said "parks are for people and that dog-owners should carry a plastic bag while walking their dogs so that the waste from the animal can be picked up." Mrs. Pugh, from Toronto, holds two of her purebred champion Chihuahuas. She was in the city to tape a television program at Loyalist College.

Dogs Getting Too Numerous Kennel Club Leader Warns

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

The Canadian Kennel Club will have to develop a long-range view of "problems" if dog breeders are to survive, says its president Hilda Pugh.

Mrs. Pugh, in Belleville to tape a television program, said Wednesday "unless we move now to control dog population we will be legislated right out of existence." Mrs. Pugh, from Toronto, represents the 15,000-member Canadian Kennel Club which is sanctioned by the federal department of agriculture.

Mrs. Pugh said the country is being flooded with "backyard" breeders who indiscriminately destroy purebred lines by close breeding. The national club is responsible for registering purebred dogs in this country.

She said the fault belongs with both the purebred and non-purebred breeders who know too little about their dogs and are trying to make a fast dollar. The kennel club currently recognizes about 170 breeds in Canada.

Mrs. Pugh, who breeds Weimaraners, said there are too many dogs in the country and that the only answer is public education. She said any further legislation against dog owners will not help.

She said the government and the kennel clubs across the country have a responsibility to educate the public. Apparently, large dogs, such as Irish Setters, Afghans and Saint Bernards have become more popular.

Mrs. Pugh said kennel clubs can encourage people to not exploit one breed because in the end the quality of the breed is reduced. She said the cocker spaniel breed was ruined in the 50s due to its popularity.

The Kennel Club president said parks should not be used by dogowners to let their dogs run free.

"This is alright if they clean up after the animal," she said. She advised dog-owners to take a plastic bag along with them while walking the dog, to pick up any excrement.

Bitch's Life Not Bitter If She's Denied Litter

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

It's not necessary for a bitch to have a litter of pups before she is spayed, says Hilda Pugh, president of the 15,000-member Canadian Kennel Club.

Mrs. Pugh, who was in Belleville taping a television show Wednesday, said "It's nonsense for people to believe their bitch will be happier if she has a litter of pups before she is spayed."

She said this attitude contributes to a problem in this country of too many dogs.

She also said spaying does not make a bitch over-weight. "It's a myth. Exercise and over-feeding that makes them fat," explained Mrs. Pugh.

Mrs. Pugh also dismissed the notion that children learn more about life by watching a bitch have's litter of pups. "If parents want their children to know about birth, then there are many educational films on the subject," said Mrs. Pugh.

She said the only answer to the dog population problem is for local kennel clubs, veterinarians and governments to educate the public.

Petroleum Product Suspected Factor in St. Thomas Blaze

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

Officials investigating the early morning blaze which gutted St. Thomas' Anglican Church on April 30 theorize that a petroleum product may have been used as an accelerant.

Paul McKercracher of the Ontario Fire Marshal's office here told members of St. Thomas' council of the vestry Wednesday three witnesses were drawn to the northeast corner of the church at 2:45 a.m. seven minutes before the alarm was rerised, attracted by a haze in the area.

He said they saw a turbulence of black smoke issue from a partly-open door leading to the vestry office. The black smoke "would seem to me to indicate a petroleum product," he commented.

However, Mr. McKercracher emphasized investigators are awaiting confirmation of the assumption from the attorney general's laboratory of forensic sciences.

A quantity of liquid mixed with water was discovered near a stairwell in the basement. This and other samples were delivered to the laboratory in Toronto Wednesday following their collection in the past week, contrary to earlier reports the samples were sent last week, he said.

Mr. McKercracher added no evidence has been found to pin the cause on electrical or heating units.

He said the fire pattern shows a general trend from the basement through the Sunday School section and into the interior of the church where flames were fed by fresh oxygen provided by the open vestry door.

This oxygen feed wiped out any chance firefighters had of saving any part of the church by the time they arrived on the scene, he said, noting it has been estimated the fire was burning from two-and-a-half to three hours before discovery.

Mr. McKercracher said there might have been a secondary source of the blaze indicated by "an unusual burn pattern on the floor of the vestry".

It was in the vestry that a number of silver items used in communion services have not been accounted for. Police speculate their theft occurred sometime prior to the fire.

Freedom Bridge Crossed

Three-week Trek Ends for Refugees

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

About 250 refugees trapped in Phnom Penh since the Khmer Rouge victory crossed into Thailand today at the end of their three-week ordeal.

The first to cross the small "Freedom Bridge" into the Thai town of Aranyaprathet was a month-old French baby carried by a Thai fire fighter name. The infant was being fed intravenously. Its mother was the next arrival.

The evacuees, surrounded by baggage, were disbarked as they lined up to cross the bridge. Many were unshaven and said they had not changed their clothing on the trip.

Officials said the convoy of more than 25 trucks contained 226 French citizens, 200 Pakistanis and about 120 persons of other nationalities including four Americans.

Previous reports had said five U.S. citizens had remained behind in Phnom Penh after the first evacuation convoy brought out 363 foreigners Saturday.

About about 250 foreigners had been expected in the second convoy but French spokesman Marc Bonneflon said more had been picked up during the four-day journey.

Bonneflon said all the evacuees but one were in good health, as elderly French evacuee who made the 200-mile plus trip in an ambulance.

During the journey from Phnom Penh to the Thai border the foreigners said the Khmer Rouge soldiers and civilians lined the roads gave them drinks, water, coconut oil and oranges.

One old woman and the eight-month-old child of the Frenchwoman died along the way.

Officials at the border said no one was left at the French embassy where many of the group had taken refuge.

Red Cross doctors, Thai immigration officials and French diplomats were waiting to receive the group and take most of them to Bangkok.

City School Drops Kindergarten

Despite a slight projected increase in school starters next September one city school is phasing out its kindergarten class.

King George Public School principal William Lott said Wednesday the class is being phased out because only four students have been enrolled. This compares to a class of 19 currently in kindergarten at King George.

Director of Education Eric Runacres said there appear to be a slight increase of school starters across the county, however, he said some isolated areas have suffered major declines.

The core areas of Belleville tend to have declining kindergarten enrollment mainly because younger families are not moving into these areas," explained Mr. Runacres. It is expected the four or five kindergarten students will attend either Prince of Wales or Parkdale public schools.

Mr. Lott said he had talked to the parents involved and that there was no apparent objection. According to projected enrollment figures from the Hastings County Board of Education elementary school enrollment will decline until 1980 when it is suppose to level off and begin to rise slightly.

Secondary school enrolment will level off until 1980 when it too will experience a dramatic decline. The board predicts by 1984 the total enrolment will be 19,08* as compared to almost 23,500 this year.

Motorbike Strikes Boy

A three-year-old Corbyville boy remains in Belleville General Hospital today in satisfactory condition after being struck by a motorcycle Wednesday while crossing the Greenfield Road, half a mile south of the fifth concession of Thurlow.

A hospital spokesman said Neil White, 3, received abrasions to his face and today is in "satisfactory" condition.

The motorcycle was driven by Norman Sharma, 46, of RR 1, Corbyville.

Bellevillian Wayne Dall paints the windows as part of preparations for summer duty by the three Canadian Coast Guard cutters that are on a three-day layover in Trenton this week. Seaman Dall gets the 95-foot steel-hulled Rapid into ship-shape Wednesday before it sails to Lake Huron at Goderich to take up patrols this summer.

Cutters Docked at Trenton

TRENTON — Three Canadian Coast Guard cutters sit at their moorings at the government wharf in Trenton today preparing to sail Friday to take up summer stations on the Great Lakes.

The three ships, two 65-foot and one 95-foot cutter, recently left their Prescott winter home port.

Crews of the ships have been attending briefings over the past two days, at CFB Trenton on search and rescue operations.

One of the cutters, the 140-ton, steel-hulled Rapid, is the largest ship operated by the federal Department of Transport on the Great Lakes. It will take up patrol duty out of Goderich in Lake Huron and Georgian Bay.

Prince Edward Protests Gas Prices

PICTON — The Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce will submit a brief concerning disparities in gas prices between the county and the rest of the Quinte area to the Ontario Chamber of Commerce this month, with hopes for province-wide support.

The decision followed a recent directors' meeting where chamber president Sheldon Whitaker said few gasoline station operators in the Picton area have shown interest in discussing the situation with the chamber.

Donald Sutton, manager of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce attributed this reluctance to fear. He said station operators think they will be cut off by the oil companies if they participate in these meetings.

He quoted Belleville's regular gasoline prices as ranging from 63.9 cents per gallon to 68.5 cents, depending on whether the station is a self-serve outlet or a higher-priced family station.

In Prince Edward, prices average 71.9 cents per gallon for regular gas.

Mr. Sutton said most of Belleville's stations are owned by the oil companies and the owners accept the gas on consignment, receiving a set fee per gallon for filling a tank.

In Prince Edward, most service station operators are independents who buy the gas and charge relatively higher prices. They receive no oil company subsidies to permit them to charge lower prices.

Prince Edward Chamber director Gary Campbell observed: "So the only way a guy could be competitive is to turn his station over to them (the oil company) and let them run it their way."

Mr. Whittaker discussed the local situation noting there may be "lever-control" that should be investigated by the government.

Chamber director Gordon Lloyd commented, "We suspect they are subsidizing company-owned stations to the detriment of privately-owned stations."

Curator James Gooding studies Macaulay House master plan with students Donna Midwinter, Charles Baird

Macaulay House Gets 3-phase Master Plan

PICTON — A three-phase master plan for the restoration of the Macaulay House was released Wednesday by James Gooding, curator of the Prince Edward County Museum.

A long-term project, the restoration begins this year and should be completed in 1980.

The Macaulay House is a former Anglican Church rectory adjacent to the Old Church of Mary Magdalene now renovated as a county museum.

Built in the 1830s the rectory, with its rolling lawn was purchased by Prince Edward County council in 1973 but few improvements have been initiated until recently.

Mr. Gooding said Prince Edward County council has given approval to plans to establish a museum budget that allow $20,000 for capital expenditures in 1975.

The museum management committee has approved the restoration plans in principle and has agreed to ask restoration architect Peter Stokes to head the project.

Mr. Stokes was described as "without peer" by Mr. Gooding during a conference to reveal restoration plans.

The restoration plans involve three phases, the first extending from 1975 through 1977.

In this period a master interior use plan is to be completed and a master grounds plan. A new roof as required will be added and chimneys repaired. Major structural repairs will be made and a driveway located.

Brickwork will be repaired and re-pointed and the front veranda removed and reconstructed to period. Exterior painting also will be done.

A) period barn will be acquired for immediate storage and future restoration and landscaping will be completed.

From 1977 through 1978 phase two will be initiated, involving restoration of the cooking fireplace, bake oven and related masonry. Heating revisions will be made as required and a kitchenette installed.

In phase two, offices, a library and archives will take shape and there will be continuation of interior decorations to the master plan.

Phase three, final step in the restoration project, focuses on outbuildings and outdoor features such as a smokehouse, privy, wellhead and possibly a summer house. It begins in 1979 and continues through 1980.

Toronto Men Charged In Break-ins

WEST LAKE — Police have charged two Toronto men with four counts of break and enter with intent and one count of break and enter following the theft of household items from five cottages on Sheba's Island near here.

Charged are Wayne Rosenbaum, 21, a carter Prince Edward County man, now of Toronto, and Eric Kalevi Ikeala, 21, of Borden Ave., Toronto.

Ikeala is also charged with an offence under the narcotics Control Act and a liquor offence.

Investigation followed a telephone call from a Sheba's Island resident Tuesday night reporting a suspicious truck and two men in the area.

OPP corporal Ted Arthurs and Corporal Bert Rea of the Picton detachment assisted by tracking dog searched the area and arrested two men.

Five cottages owned by Toronto and Toronto residents, had been entered and house hold items valued at about $30 had been taken. A police spokesman said all goods were recovered.

Students Visit Iowa Pen Pals

TRENTON — Twenty - nine grade five and six students from North Trenton Public School will start Saturday on a 1,600-mile bus journey to Webster City, Iowa, for a one-week stay to study the American town.

Murray Workman, school principal, said Wednesday the trip to the Midwestern town of about 9,000 people is one of the school has been planning for over the past year.

It's intention is to show "similarities among different cultures" to the 10 to 13-year-old children who have been studying the Iowa town and comparing it to Trenton.

Mr. Workman said the trip is a culmination of a "Hands Across the Border" program geared to acquaint students with comparative social studies. It also develops their citizenship skills, he said.

The students have been studying both the Quinte area and the country surrounding Webster City in terms of political structure and agriculture. Trenton and the American town are "very similar in size and make-up," Mr. Workman said.

The 29 students are all members of a single class at the school.

Each will be staying in the home of the Webster City student with whom the Trenton student has been corresponding over the past year.

Most Hospital Pledges Returned by Cyclists

TRENTON — All the big pledges from participants in last month's Trenton Memorial Hospital bike-a-thon have now been submitted, according to co-author Neen Ellis.

Mrs. Ellis said Wednesday that "a few people who braved wet roads and winds gusting up to 35 miles an hour have submitted money raised during the third annual hospital bike-a-thon.

In all, she said, $18,800 had been pledged during the event. The funds will go towards payment for a gastroscope and laboratory together valued at $12,000.

This year's bike-a-thon was the most successful to date. Participation was up from 290 in 1974 and money raised increased by $2,800.

She said about 100 people still hadn't submitted their pledges and encouraged them to call bike-a-thon organizers "We'd like to have this wound up fairly soon."

Those people that haven't submitted their pledges will also not be eligible for prizes the bike-a-thon organizers plan to award this Saturday, at 10.30 a.m. at the hospital's visitors' entrance.

All who completed the bike-a-thon's shortened 30-kilometre ride and submitted pledges are eligible, by draw, to win a bicycle or one of five pairs of jogging shoes. Other prizes will also be awarded.

A Nod to Rhodesia's Black Majority

Jamaica's Michael Manley Reflects Impatience of the Burgeoning Third World

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

The Commonwealth heads of government conference just concluded in Kingston, Jamaica, a socially disrupted city with 25 per cent unemployed, has messages for us we have heard before. And we are hearing them again with increasing urgency.

The Third World, where most of mankind lives and where most of mankind suffers from racism, poverty and exploitation, will not wait for the rich nations to find the solutions.

The poor countries had their spokesman at this conference and their own impatient style of turning the agenda around — none other than host Prime Minister Michael Manley of Jamaica who once fought for another cause as a wartime member of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Prime Minister Manley, leader of a largely racially black island nation in the Caribbean, was definitely out-order in inviting Robert Mugabe of Mozambique to address the conference as 18 other delegations without consulting them.

Jurisdically, Mr. Manley was out of order since Mugabe's area represents no government, though some day he could attend a future Commonwealth conference as Rhodesia's first black prime minister. That is, if there are future Commonwealth conferences.

But Mr. Manley's impatience was inevitable for another reason. In Jamaica itself beyond the comfortable hotel compounds where the leaders met, Manley himself is racing against time.

His backward country is a microcosm of the huge number of problems of most of the underdeveloped world.

And Mr. Manley's grand design for Jamaica, which he gently labels "social democracy," is a classic Third World answer to slow response from rich nations.

He is moving toward complete nationalization of the big foreign-owned (American and Canadian) bauxite extractive industries. He has formed a commodity cartel for the white bauxite-producing nations with headquarters in Kingston, along the lines of OPEC, (Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries) with the oil industry.

And last week also in Kingston, he announced a "Marshall" aid fund, and possibly multilatry, supported by the African freedom fighters.

It is the black world responding to the black world. And an African Vietnam swells up in the Rhodesian bush as we seem solved.

Unless the racial time bomb is defused in Africa, this may be the last of the peaceful Commonwealth heads of government conferences with their trademarks if rational dialogue and avoidance of secret pre-conference agendas. These are the things that Mugabe is telling us.

Prime Minister Trudeau's office of a meeting of selected Commonwealth specialists prior to next summer's meeting of Commonwealth finance ministers, is a move to find and bring such industrial men feel about Rhodesia.

And even if the Rhodesian racial crisis lingers to the next conference after dire warnings from this one and the earlier meeting in Ottawa in August, 1973, the arrival of the so-called "new economic world order," is adding a further dimension to Third World demands.

In basic terms, it means new dividends of economic power made possible by the major hikes in commodities, begining with oil in 1973.

The resources-rich countries have established or are about to establish commodity cartels, and the poor industrial countries which once set many of the prices wonder how much economic power has passed from them to the new countries.

Ravages of Inflation

Inflation is virtually out of control.

This has to be the only conclusion from a look at price increases and parallel escalation of pay scales — parliamentary salaries included — and now with the prospect of another cost-of-living oriented mail strike in the offing.

The evidence of inflation is all around, from the cost of food (although admittedly, it does seem to have stabilized a bit) to car insurance. A hike of as much as $30 on last year's premium, without so much as a single claim in that period, is not unusual. Small wonder that provincial opposition leaders are calling for an inquiry into these increases.

Government guidelines past, present, or pending appear equally ineffectual and the spiral continues ever-upward.

In education the trend is the same. Hastings county's 1975 budget has been set at $31.87 million, or an increase of 19.8 per cent. However, the average mill rate increase across the county is only 12.3 per cent and the board has yet to establish priorities.

The public, as well as the board, should be giving thought to spending at all levels, including county education and the priorities about to be established. While board members are also known as "trustees," the whole business of spending of public money has become such a runaway, uncontrolled tiger-by-the-tail that it needs additional hands on the rein. It is PUBLIC MONEY, after all, which is at stake.

The Ontario government, meanwhile, is showing some signs of urging more restraint in spending, as revealed by Loyalist College board chairman Will Wilkinson. He reports Colleges and Universities minister James Auld as calling for more belt-tightening.

This could be very pertinent in the contemplation of such ventures as the Quinte Community Arts Centre, which could become a reality only with an operating deficit of upwards of $60,000 annually.

Society has come a long way from the days of balancing its books. In fact, deficit financing has become a way of life. But how long can it go on; someone make on television in recent days of the prospect of a crash — and soon, perhaps within months.

If that happens, whatever guidelines remain will not matter any more, and it will be the result of our cumulative extravagance in recent years, without regard for matching production in all spheres to keep costs down. Meanwhile, some spending restraint is essential, whatever ultimately is in store.

Image and Initiative

If there is an erroneous impression abroad with regard to the police, and a need to project one that affords the public a better idea of what police and their work are all about, then Lynda Smith is a charming and articulate proponent of this idea.

Mrs. Smith is with the community services branch of the Belleville police department and part of her work is concerned with helping to change a misleading image many people have with regard to the officers of the law. She says police are regarded seriously with distaste, awe, and admiration.

In any event, Belleville Rotarians, at a meeting this week symbolic of International Women's Year — Mrs. Ruth Burrows of the Volunteer Bureau also spoke — were left with the impression of an efficient force at the local level which presides over a relatively peaceful community.

Indeed Belleville is the sort of community which is "smaller than London, but is a nice place to live" — this comment overheard in a restaurant from a woman who has come here from the western Ontario city.

Mrs. Burrows meanwhile had already outlined to the club some of the reasons for Belleville's reputation as a community that cares. She spoke of the new child development centre for normal, handicapped, and emotionally disturbed children. To be located at the corner of Bridge Street and Bleecker Avenue, and scheduled for opening in September, it will be — as an integrated centre — the first of its kind in the province.

Although the centre is being made possible through a grant from the Ontario Community and Social Services Ministry, Mrs. Burrows is hoping financial support will also be forthcoming from service clubs, citizens, business and industry. As it is, the centre will draw on volunteer help in its operation, as the bureau does in its other community-oriented programs.

The Centre is an outgrowth of existing programs, such as the nursery for children of working mothers who attend classes at Bridge Street United, and of similar nursery programs in schools and others for handicapped children. On an integrated basis, the new Centre will be a fulfillment of existing and potential needs in the community and as such deserves the support of the public.

Viewpoints

Brockville Recorder and Times

For reasons beyond the comprehension of the common man, housing, which is the key to an economic upsurge, as well as a necessity, is taking it on the chin again. Interest rates are edging up just as activity in housing construction was starting to move into high gear. Unless there are some government moves to ease the costs, it is expected that another slowdown in housing starts will take place as the peak construction period approaches.

Tax Dollar Beneficence Assists Indians, Students, Senior Citizens

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Here's about one-tenth of your federal tax money to teach young Indians to be young Indians!

Sounds rickiddiculous?

Maybe it does, but there's the way it is with the federal Secretary of State's $4 million Student Community Service Program.

Like on page 25 of the department's report and accounting of how the $4 million was spent to provide what is described as "a wide variety of jobs for approximately 2,000 students" last summer:

To quote:

"Le bande d'Abitibi seminar, Kapuskasing. The objective of this Indian tribe's summer project was to teach Indian youth their traditional way of life . . . that is how to shoot rapids . . . how to sleep outside without a tent . . . call a moose . . . and load a canoe. A number of young Indians were able to learn these techniques thanks to a $2,000 grant."

If $4 million was spent on 2,000 students as the Secretary of State reports, then it follows that on the average each student would get $2,000.

So on that basis, "the going student union scale for a canoe ride, a moose-calling or hunter in rapids shooting, tentless sleeping and canoe-loading runs at $2,000 in the halls of Secretary of State learning.

There was another remarkable — or perhaps in this age, from-our-days ago and-yesterday — course in unusual learning funded by the even-more-unusual (with your money) State Secretary.

It was sponsored by a group in Fort Frances, Ontario, and it read in the State Secretary's summary of the program, a grant, of $44,254, was for the "assisting five students to complete the first 'Let's Get Basic' to various local groups in an attempt to improve community relations between teens and adults. The play focussed on teen attitudes to such issues as drug use, sex and cheating."

One may feel a little short-changed on that $4,254 as a contributing (grant) for the State Secretary neglected to reveal what the "Let's Get Basic" set and cheating in the under 30's set.

There was an Ottawa project on which the State Secretary went for $1,200. Its name or may not leave you hanging breathless, wondering what came of it.

Again to quote:

"Pulliston Probe: Ottawa . . . $1,500 enabled one student to investigate why people do or do not become members of Pulliston Probe. The study determined that the State Secretary doesn't lift whether structural changes or changes in issue emphasis are required to attract more members."

The State Secretary, incestively, found ways for students to turn senior citizens and pensioners into a paying proposition.

If you can imagine it — and you won't have to go that far because it is spelled out on Page 36 of the State Secretary's report — a grant of $4,400 was provided to four students "enabling them to direct a day camp program for senior citizens of supervised outdoor activities."

What activities requiring supervised by students?

Well such grabbers as "mushroom beats and leaf-collecting," among other "imaginative" ones the feds call "day of fun" thing.

These four students, each getting $1,100 for their efforts, labored among the elderly at Cache Pleis-ale that I Pine Ta-corporated at Ste. Bary, Quebec.

Now, in case you are yearning to travel and not getting very far at all lower because you are too busy working and can't spare the time, or simply don't seem able to work globe-trotting into your budget, you will be cheered to know the Secretary of Sate spent $9,250 to promote the joys of leaveyboy abroad among students.

The $9,250 went to four of them to make a film to provide "information on international understanding by sending young Canadians abroad and by bringing youth fro mthe Third World to Canada."

Maybe you wish you were a student and knew somebody who knows the Secretary of State!

Fuel Price Up—Or Shortage

By VINCENT EGAN

Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

Users of natural gas are going to have to pay higher fuel bills next winter—if they are lucky.

But if they are unlucky, they could face a fuel shortage instead.

The Petroleum Administration Act, passed by the federal government recently, gives Ottawa the power to decide by how much and to who if gas will go up—or even to hold the price where it is.

The government of Ontario, which consumes a big share of the gas produced in Western Canada, thinks Ottawa should rule out any price increase.

But the government of Alberta, where much of the gas comes from, seems determined that the price must go up substantially.

Its arbitration panel has authorized an increase of nearly 100 per cent in the price of gas sold by a big pipeline (Gulf Oil Canada Ltd.) to the major distributor (Alberta Natural Gas lines Ltd.). Other producers expect similar favorable treatment from the Alberta government.

Here are some of the arguments being made against an increase in the price of natural gas:

—The Alberta-authorized increase of almost 100 per cent bears no relationship to the cost of producing gas.

—Its net effect would be extremely inflationary, especially since gas is a basic fuel and an essential raw material for the petrochemical and other big industries. Ontario officials say it would mean a 12.9 annual increase on the bills of an average family using gas for heating and cooking.

—Only about one-eighth of the increase would be retained by the gas producer, so the increase offers only a marginal incentive to discover and produce more gas.

And here are arguments in support of an increase:

—If producers are not given any financial incentive in the form of higher prices, the development of new gas supplies could stop. That's what happened in the United States, where for many years the price of gas was frozen at a low level to discourage production.

—Unless development efforts are maintained, a shortage of gas for Eastern Canadian users is a distinct possibility during the next several years, until gas from new Arctic reserves become available in the heavily populated areas of the country.

—Natural gas has long been under-priced in relation to oil and other sources of energy, and it has been used wastefully because it was too cheap.

If we make producing province, Alberta, satisfied by a price increase. Economic reasons aside, it's good politics to do so.

That gets the same old fed-fed, Ottawa-Alberta, in all likelihood. Ottawa will use its new powers under Bill 61 (the Petroleum Administration Act) to scale down the price multiplication planned by Alberta, and regard it with a series of massive increases spread over a period of time to cushion the inflationary effect.

In the end, users will have to resign themselves to higher prices.

Gas, in a monopoly market with no readily available alternative supplies, should have have a right to expect Ottawa to impose reasonable restraints on potential price gougers.

Chauffeurs for Bureaucrats

By DON O'HEARN

Queen's Park Bureau

Thomson News Service

Recently it has come to light through questions in the house that the government provides cars and chauffeurs to the chairmen of the Ontario Securities Commission and the Ontario Liquor Licence Board.

Perhaps there are others.

The government seems to forget the example set 1944 when Mitch Hepburn was an election with government provided cars his main theme and the profligacy of government automobiles his chief target.

Then following his win, of course, he was Ontario Attorney-General and Commercial Affairs Minister Sidney Halkland for giving the chairman livery service was that this was the only "perk" they got.

Yes, yes, that was $40,000 or more in salary.

It all depends which way you are looking!

At this winter's policy conference in Windsor Liberal leader Bob Nixon said he wouldn't feel bound by the actions of the meeting.

It was strictly advisory and he would be preparing his own platform.

NDP leader Stephen Lewis criticized this pretty forcefully.

Yet a few years ago, I recalled, Mr. Lewis said just that. Back in the early NDP premiers Schreyer and Barrett were not bound at all by party policy decisions.

Yet, at the time, I asked him about this, said he had been different: that his position was that if he didn't agree with the decisions he would send them back.

Some difference?

The other day I received a sealed government envelope bearing in very large letters in the upper corner the word CONFIDENTIAL.

Wow, what was this-

Inside was the weekly sittings list of the Ontario Labour Relations Board.

A little inquiry showed that the Board wasn't going ultra-secret.

It seems that there is a supply of this stationery around and it is using it up.

Crowe River Flooding Raises Questions from All Corners

By RUBY McCOY
Staff Correspondent

MARMORA — Who is responsible for the flooding in the Marmora area and why should the operation of the Crowe watershed be directed from Toronto instead of locally?

These were two questions directed at Bryan Boyce, resources manager of the Crowe Valley Conservation Authority, by concerned citizens and village councillors here at a recent meeting.

Mr. Boyce was to explain the authority's intention to map the Crowe Valley flood plain but was almost immediately involved in a discussion on who or what caused the flooding conditions at the junction of Crowe River and Beaver Creek.

Deputy-Reeve Grant Aikhart protested it was unfair to blame Leo McGowan, operator of the Marmora Dam, because all the logs were taken on that could have been.

He suggested the authority write the Marmora Herald, the village weekly newspaper which criticized Mr. McKeown for his dam operation in a recent article.

Mr. Aikhart explained miles logs in never dams, the stop logs at the Marmora dam have to be put in and taken out by hand, a difficult task during high water.

Lack of communication between the dam operators in the system was blamed in the past as one of the obstacles in the proper operation of the control system. Mr. Boyce said he agreed the system needs it shakedown and added he realized the Marmora dam was the critical point in the system at all waters are funneled through it.

He said an extra large amount of runoff from Beaver Creek contributed to the flooding problem this year. Reeve Jack Reynolds revived a former authority plan, which has been lying dormant, of constructing a dam on the creek since there is plenty of space to store the backup.

Criticism was raised that the whole system should be under the control of a local person instead of being directed from the chief engineer's office in Toronto.

Mr. Boyce noted, being newly-appointed to his position, he would require time to study the situation but added it would help if council and area residents would write the authority asking that closer control be placed on the water system. He said he would then take the problem to higher levels of government.

He said an engineering study will be done on the Marmora dam this year, probably in the fall. It will determine what is wrong with the present dam, where should a new one be built and the design of a new one.

Grant Gives Booth Boost

MARMORA — An opportunities for Youth (OFY) grant has made it possible for four area youths to set up a tourist information booth in this village, study the history of Marmora and publish a book within six months on their find logs.

The four people are Jim Airhart and Anita Wisti of Marmora and Ardith McKinnon and Gar-net Pigden of Madoc. The latter two persons will be in charge of the history and book.

The booth will operate from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. from June 9 to August 30. Its location has not been determined.

Cost of the booth is $617.38 which is not covered in the OFY grant. Marmora and Lake Townships have agreed to contribute $200 and this village will undertake the remaining cost.

Ski Trail Proposal Sent to Bernier

A proposal for creation of a major cross-country ski trail system circling through four northern Hastings County townships is being made to the provincial government.

The scheme is the offspring of the Quiate - Hastings Recreational Trail (QHRT) whose spokesmen in Belleville say such a facility anticipates the sport's future popularity.

The plan which projects long-range development up to 10 years, has been sent to Natural Resources Minister Leo Bernier.

It calls for a main route looping from east of Bancroft up to 30 bushland miles through adjacent townships. The system would include shorter side trails curving off the major circuit.

Much of the development would be on Crown land once proposed for the York River Project — a scheme to create a cottage-tourist area centered on a man-made lake and pipeline-buried three years ago after a disappointing economic cost benefits study.

Jim Staveley, QHRT president, says the scheme was inspired by the success of a cross-country ski loop developed off the trail last winter near Moira Lake. It prompted many inquiries about more facilities in future.

The proposal includes:

— Creation of a trail system though Dungannon, Mayo, Monteagle and Carlow townships. It would be centred on an unused gravel pit off Highway 500, eight miles east of Bancroft. The pit would provide a base for car parking and other facilities such as a chalet for use as a starting-base by the skiers.

— Shorter side trails — three to eight miles long — would provide facilities for novice skiers or those not wishing to tackle the longer route.

— Shelters would also be constructed along the circuits for use as stopover points and first aid stations

— Snowmobile safety patrols would also be required along the trails.

— Overnight accommodation should also be considered at trail in the McWhirter Lake area of Carlow Township, 15 miles northeast of Highway 500 base.

In its brief to Mr. Bernier the QHRT hopes from ministry backing for the scheme.

It says the proposal may seem somewhat elaborate. However, in view of the mounting demand for cross-country ski facilities it is designed "to anticipate future growth in this winter sport.

There are no indications the pastime will "not continue to enjoy this upsurge in interest," says the brief.

Such a project would also increase the potential to be tapped by the winter tourist industry in the Bancroft area, says the QHRT.

Foxes Raising Rabies Fears

Foxes are raising fears of increased rabies in north Hastings County.

As a result, federal veterinary authorities in Belleville now are pondering organizing vaccination clinics for animals throughout the county this summer.

Dr. J. F. McCorquodale, Belleville area federal veterinarian says there has been an increase in incidents involving rabies — mainly blamed on an upswing in the fox population — particularly in the county's northern township.

Requests have been received for immunization clinics and the proposal now has gone to regional federal authorities for consideration.

If approved, the clinics like ly will be held in June.

One such request came from and was relayed last week to Hastings County council by the county's ARDA and Tourism committee. The committee recommended $600 be allocated to advertise such clinics and pay for a student to assist with reports.

Foxes are a prime carrier of the disease and the Ontario natural resources believes their numbers now are on the increase, reported Dr. McCorquodale.

He said there had been an increase in foxes in Renfrew County — which borders Hastings' northern municipalities — and the problem was likely a spillover as the fox population spread.

The veterinarian said some livestock — about two head of cattle and a horse — had been lost to rabies in recent years but no rabies in recent months.

But there were increasing reports of foxes attacking dogs and showing signs of other "strange" behavior patterns.

The problem is a cyclic occurrence. The incidence of rabies mounts with the increase in foxes, then in turn declines as the animals are killed off by the disease, said Dr. McCorquodale.

The last clinics held for domestic animals in the county was in 1971.

D. C. R. Leak, public health officer for Hastings — Prince edward Counties, said his department in Belleville had not lately received any reports of rabid dogs or cats.

Canada Fast Day Mainly in Ontario

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Participants in Canada Fast Day on Wednesday seemed to be concentrated in Ontario, where the campaign to raise money for Canadian Save the Children Fund started.

Paul Mason, one of the students at Le Salle Secondary School in Kingston, Ont., who organized the fast, said 4,000 letters were sent to secondary schools across Canada. Students were asked to give up lunch and donate the money saved to help buy food for children in underdeveloped countries.

However, a Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press showed many schools did not receive the letters because of recent postal disruptions or there was little interest in the project.

John Bosca, teacher of the Anglo-Saxon politics class at La Salle which started the project, said the fast day would be considered successful if even 10 per cent of Canadian high school students participated.

Paul Mason, 16, said about 85 per cent of the 1,100 students and staff at La Salle participated and donations exceeded $1,000.

Jarvis Collegiate in Toronto collected money for the project by selling bowls of rice and chicken for 99 cents.

Tom Boston, student organizer at Jarvis, said the food was served to show students what children in underdeveloped countries eat, "and only once a day at that."

Joe Eckkerman, district director of Beaver Foods—which catters to most secondary school cafeterias in the Metropolitan Toronto area—said participation in the fast was "spotty."

"A lot of kids were contributing money to the hunger day, then going and buying their lunches as normal," he said.

Students at Adsbury College, a private boys' school in Ottawa, participated in the fast, but a spokesman for the Ottawa board of education said none of its schools held fasts.

"Activities such as these are curtailed until the end of the school year due to the complete timetable the students now have," the spokesman said.

Grain Stabilization Period Said Too Long

OTTAWA (CP) — Otto Lang, minister responsible for the wheat board, reported renewed opposition domestic Wednesday for changes in a bill that would give retroactive legislative approval to the country's two-price wheat system.

Jack Horner (PC—Crow 9 alt) said the bill, that would set a fixed price for domestic—prices moved when the world "lack grain farmers in" for a seven-year period without considering rising production costs.

The proposed legislation is retroactive to 1974 and would run until the end of 1980, fixing the price that millers pay for wheat at $3.25 a bushel.

The government would add a $1.25-a-bushel subsidy, giving farmers a set $5 price for domestically-consumed wheat. Export prices are currently above $5 a bushel.

Mr. Horner urged the government in shorten the cut-off date to the end of 1977 and then have it reintroduced for another three years if the cost of production doesn't go up.

But Mr. Lang said many farmers are satisfied with the prospect. Without rising production costs had been considered during committee study when the government agreed to insert a clause calling for an annual review of the price farmers receive.

Trial Adjourned

HAMILTON (CP) — The Hamilton Harbor Commission dredging-scandal trial was adjourned Wednesday to next Monday after three days of complicated legal wrangling.

Quebec Construction Firms Facing Post-Games Bust

MONTREAL (CP) — After the 1976 Olympic Games, the Quebec construction industry may fall into a depression from its current artificial boom, says the president of one of Canada's biggest construction companies.

Henri Gaudrin, president of A. Janin and Co. Ltd., compares Quebec's current building boom with the period preceding Expo 67. In the years immediately following Canada's centennial, the workman's hammer was relatively silent in Quebec.

He forecast the building depression will be especially profound because of problems masked by the current boom. Problems which were already apparent would intensify.

The Cliche commission, a provincial government inquiry into labor violence, revealed contracts had did not identify the causes or solutions of this discontent, he said.

The lengthy inquiry, headed by Judge Robert Cliche, unearthed evidence of widespread corruption in labor, management and government officials involved in Quebec's construction industry.

Mr. Gaudrin blamed inflation and its resulting erosion of workers' buying power for the labor violence, which with the destruction of a complete of the massive James Bay hydroelectric power project.

Cost-of-living escalation results in "workers taking all the ways, good or bad, legal or not, to preserve their buying power."

At the same time, contractors "are ready to pay for having peace on the worksites to complete sooner the contracts which are becoming more unprofitable."

Meanwhile, the government "allows the situation to continue until the physical violence angers public opinion."

All these excesses will eventually have to be paid for, he said. The bubble of the building boom would then burst.

Currently, it is impossible to estimate accurately the costs of a project because the cost of materials and productivity of the workers are always changing in a detrimental fashion, Mr. Gaudrin said.

Many projects started during the last two years had as much as doubled in cost.

Ongoing projects usually identified with Quebec's building boom include the James Bay project, Olympic installations, Montreal subway extensions and Place Desjardins, a 125 million downtown project housing shops, offices and apartments.

All these projects have huge manpower requirements. Mr. Gaudrin said when these projects are completed it is doubtful that other projects will be waiting to absorb a huge crop of unemployed.

Mr. Gaudrin's company, Janin, one of the bigger employers in the Canadian construction industry, maintains 1,300 full-time staff and as many as 6,000 workers during peak season.

The company, founded in 1898, is in part responsible for giving modern Montreal the look it now wears. Through Janin and its various subsidiaries, Montreal has acquired such recent landmarks as Place Victoria, the stock exchange tower; Chateau Champlain, one of Montreal's more elegant hotels; and Place Ville Marie, a towering office and shopping development.

Older landmarks include Canadian National Railways Central Station, Simpson's department store, Montreal City Hall and Mercier Bridge, crossing the St. Lawrence River.

Can It Find Job

LONDON (CP) — A computer that tells an applicant what his or her ideal occupation would be is being experimented with by the British government's employment agency. Personal details are fed into a data bank and the computer matches the details with available jobs in another data bank, saying the ideal job on a screen.

Charladies Volunteer For Supersonic Test

FAIRFORD England (CP) — A group of British charladies has joined the supersonic club along with artisans and other workers who might never be able to afford a flight in a fast jet.

The four office cleaners, together with tealadies, from British Aircraft Corp (BAC) factories were among 11,000 jetliner.

aboard a Concorde jet in a test flight from this western England community.

Hundreds of BAC workers had volunteered to act as guinea-pig passengers to test the plane's air conditioning system. The corporation picked the names for the flight by computer. Other workers will get their chance on further flights.

Two of the cleaners who accepted the excitement of flying at 1,300 miles an hour were 55-year-old Fred Rea and his wife Joan, Mrs. Dee admitted: "We will probably never be able to fly in Concorde when it is in actual service so we were really thrilled to get the chance now."

Others on the 31-hour supersonic dash to the Bay of Biscay and back included BAC canteen and fitters who had helped to build the plane.

Engagement

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Jones are pleased to announce the forthcoming marriage of their daughter Sharon Elizabeth, to David L. Grant, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Grant. The wedding will take place on Saturday, May 31, at 4 p.m. in Hollaway Street United Church, Belleville.

People and Events

DESERONTO QUINTE OLD TIMERS

The first-time Mini-Bazaar was held Wednesday by the Deseronto Quinte Old Timers, under the direction of Elsie Palmer of the social committee.

Pouring tea were the president Ada Claus and first-vice president Marion Mott. Serving tables were Tillie Sherman, Barney Lord, Muriel Blayney and Pearl McEwen.

There were display tables of needlework, attended by Nancy Reynolds, Ethel Brown and Ada Boyer, home baking convened by Mary Roach and Estella Davis and the white elephant booth, by Jessie McQueen and Marg Neal.

Zenaliy involved in the bazaar were Marg Lyons, Nancy Beyette, Evelyn Stuart and Lena Cummings. Nora Walker looked after the Admission Table at the door.

ALPHA DELTA KAPPA

The Lambda Chapter of the Alpha Delta Kappa Sorority for women educators met at the home of Dorothy Blakely for their recent meeting.

The members had met earlier at BCI for the Belleville Theatre Guild performance of The Music Man. President, Pearl McCurdy, expressed her thanks to the members for the cooperation and assistance which contributed to their successful rummage sale.

Faye Burnell, Glenda Calnan, Helen Smith and Linda Burns were hostesses for the evening.

Nichol—Fallis

Heather Constance Fallis and James Charles Nichol exchanged wedding vows April 19 in an afternoon ceremony at St. Matthew's United Church, Peterborough.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell Fallis, Peterborough; the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Nichol, Marmora.

Rev. Fred Clappison officiated at the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an empire gown with a wedding band neckline and long lace sleeves. Her veil was caught in a Juliet cap and she carried a bouquet of spring flowers.

Matron of honor Joanne Bedore, the groom's sister, wore an empire waist gown and matching picture hat in green. Bridesmaids Brenda Higgins, Peterborough, the bride's sister, and Pat Rutherford, Peterborough, and junior bridesmaid Carol Fallis, wore yellow gowns. Flower girl was Jennifer Bedore; ring-bearer was Michael Bedore.

Terry Murphy, Peterborough, was the best man assisted by ushers David Bedore, Doug Caesone, Owen Fallis, the bride's brother.

A dinner at the Holiday Inn, Peterborough, followed the wedding.

The couple took a wedding trip to the southern United States.

They reside at 161 Foster Avenue, Belleville.

Speech Pathologist Helps Young and Old Communicate

Lilly Cheng helps young people speak.

By SHARON AIRHART

Lilly Cheng says you've probably going to run into half a dozen people in your life time who have a serious handicap. They can't communicate by talking quite as well as you can.

Perhaps they stutter. Or slur their speech because of a brain injury or stroke. Perhaps there's child in your neighbourhood — or in your home — who can't articulate properly.

It's important, Mrs. Cheng says, that you know how to react.

A speech pathologist at Belleville General Hospital, she recommends that you relax, look at the speaker and wait patiently.

"You can help him through a very difficult experience that way," Mrs. Cheng says.

At BGH, Mrs. Cheng works daily with persons from 18 months of age to 80, helping them communicate verbally. Formerly a linguist, she became interested in the acquisition of language while at Michigan State University in the United States. Then she heard Ontario School for the Deaf supervisor Dr. J. O. Darbyshire speak and decided to move to this area.

"I was amazed that an area the size of Belleville and Trenton was without a speech therapist. So I came."

In her language laboratory, Mrs. Cheng might deal with the toddler whose language is delayed — in other words, a child who does not speak. He might have a hearing loss which needs diagnosis (its first symptom might be lack of speech) or he mentally retarded or have suffered a brain injury. Or his lack of speech may be a functional disorder — whatever the reason, he doesn't speak.

Or she may deal with the child who has an articulation problem — the one who says wabbit or telphone for rabbit or telephone, substituting or omitting sounds.

For the stutterers — most of her clients are teen-agers — Mrs. Cheng seeks to improve their speech performance with behaviour modification techniques.

All of her efforts, she points out, however, depend on reaching the people who need her help, particularly children.

"Speech and language readiness is the first thing you need to learn," she says.

"A good control of symbols is necessary to think."

For that reason, she urges early assessment of speech problems so that the young child can be educated and trained even before nursery school.

"Parents should always be aware of language behaviour," she says, adding that there are indicators of average development which can be measured.

"Watch how your young child reacts to other children and the way he plays. Notice the way he indicates his wants — he should be encouraged to ask for what he wants."

Mrs. Cheng says the average 18-month-old child uses 50 words; the average two-year-old 200 words, The three-year-old should use 1,000 words and speak in sentences.

For more information, a display about speech and hearing — May is speech and hearing month — will be at the Quinte Mall until Saturday.

Parliamentary- Wives Want Pay

OTTAWA (CP) — The wives of some MPs and diplomats say they should get money—or at least a little recognition—for toiling on behalf of their husbands.

Several wives of parliamentarians and diplomats told a seminar here Wednesday that it is time they went on the government payroll for their tasks as hostesses, secretaries and managers for their husbands.

They said a husbands election to the Commons or posting to a foreign country upsets families, cuts short the independent careers of many women and forces wives into unpaid jobs as public servants.

But others said women should be content to do what they can to support their husbands and not push for more independence.

The seminar, sponsored by the Parliamentary Wives' Association, showed sharply differences between younger and older women on whether the public is getting "two for the price of one?" when MPs are elected or diplomats are sent abroad.

Laurette Watts, wife of a diplomat, said she must give up her government policy analyst's job to follow her husband to a posting at the Canadian embassy in Washington.

Such moves are fine for the husband, Mrs. Watts said, "but what about our responsibilities towards ourselves and our own development?" She said the government should consider some form of compensation for wives who interrupt their own careers in favor of their husbands'.

Maureen McTeer, wife of MP Joe Clark (PC—Rocky Mountain), said MPs should not be criticized for hiring their wives at government expense to work in their offices.

But Evelyn Munro, wife of Donald Munro, a former diplomat who now is Conservative MP for Esquimalt-Saanich, said women should consider it a privilege to support their husband's careers.

What's the Point Of Mother's Day?

It all started as a nice idea.

When her mother died in early May, 40 years ago, Anna Jarvis mourned her loss deeply because they had been such an ideal relationship. During the next few years, she organized memorial services, and persuaded first the city of Philadelphia, and then the state of Pennsylvania, to eventually the entire nation, to join her in her annual tribute to motherhood.

Miss Jarvis's well-meant efforts have swollen in 75 years to a monstrous, and peculiarly American, occasion. Although reverence for motherhood is an essential part of many other countries and cultures, the flashy "gobsharmangift" pressure around us have turned Anna Jarvis's Day into a superficial and commercial joke.

While it was, as intended by the media as we are, can credit herself at least it taken part of the blame. Are "days" long enough to change If they shrug away the importance of a one-day show, can avoid being sure if their children don't "remember them" the second Sunday in May?

If a woman's been a "good mother" then she deserves a special recognition you may argue. But what if she's been a "perfect mother" like many women, after all, are naturally great in their attempts to become the ideal mother society wants?

In fact, there are probably lots of mothers who are not lovable mothers, but are admirable people in other ways.

And haven't you ever heard, or said yourself, "You know, if it wasn't my mother, I'd probably like her as if being a mother and a friend were two different conditions."

If you are a mother with grown-up or grown children, have you never signed in-wardly "I'm sorry they know that under all this I'm just me"?

So many of the qualities that make someone pleasant in a human relationship—kindness, generosity, nagging and guarding kids, but "all for their own good", Anna Jarvis's sincere niceties?

Doris Clark

Good Leaders Consider Others

One of the characteristics of greatness is the ability to take the lead in dealing with people. After all, a person of good intelligence realizes that the progress is only made through cooperation with others.

This applies to employers as well as other people. An open door policy is the thing; but employers should employees hesitate to walk through that open door and the best employers are those who encourage their employees and circulate among the workers in good fellowship.

A man who is a leader, a good one, will know that his better morale when he adds that "something special" which boils down to consideration of those who are working with him, in minor matters.

Dear Doris: "Disgusted" complained that her husband was domineering. I'd like to tell her my experience.

When my husband told me there was not enough money to buy extra clothes for the children and then later wanted to buy something for himself, I said, "How can you? You said you had no money!" I got my money and he got what he wanted.

I would buy all school supplies with groceries, so nothing was ever said about the grocery bill.

If I was told I could have $100 for clothing for the children, I found that if I made an order for $61 I never saw the other $5. If the order came to $108 nothing was said, so I would, other order two pairs of shoes (for example) and would return one pair and keep the money.

Cheating, lying, yes; but easier than having to beg every time.

"Disgusted" will just have to accept the fact that her husband is a dominating person and that maybe something in his past life has caused him to be that way. He leaves committees because he cannot dominate them and then he comes home to dominate me. When he kept trying to force an opinion on me I just said that that was his opinion and that other was different.

He would criticize people and I would say to him, "If you run someone down it is because you feel that he is better than you and you want to pull him down to your level."

A Once Disgusted.

Dear Once: You are getting around the situation, in some cases, rather than facing it head on, aren't you? I like the part of your letter where you state your own opinion and then help your husband to think more clearly and to recognize you as an individual. I don't like the part about cheating — sounds too much like a peace-at-any-price attitude.

Ann Landers

Slow Security Checks Better Than Danger

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing in response to "Irked at La Guardia." You said it is a frequent traveler, being a flight attendant for a major airline.

A few years ago I had the unfortunate experience of being hijacked. It was the most terrifying thing that has ever happened to me. We were completely at the mercy of a gun-wielding maniac. I'm sure the other passengers had been in effect at that time. It would have saved us plenty of trouble if the crew members (not to mention their guns) had taken a good look at you.

I'd like to say to "Irked," if the security check system irritates you so much why don't you check your baggage in cargo? Anyone who has been on a plane for 14 hours without fresh water and working toilets and spent a night in Cuba, will agree with me it's no fun. So please don't knock the system until you have been subjected to the alternative.—Grateful

Dear D. J. Amen, friend. A's another frequent traveller. I'm delighted the airlines are checking hand luggage. I admit, however, that I'm partial to airlines that use X-ray equipment. This precludes rugging around in person and tote bags.

Dear Ann Landers: For the past three years I have been dating an unwed father. Perry is 27 years old. It is an 18 year baby in six months old and he is crazy about her. He was engaged in June of last year but they couldn't get along and the engagement was broken. Linda He still sees her because he is so wild about the child.

Perry's parents have been on his back a lot since the baby was born. They want him to marry the girl and work out their differences later. This is their only grandchild and they are crazy about the little girl, too.

Everything was fine until two months ago when I had to leave town to take care of my sisters children. She needed surgery and I offered to baby sit. When I returned to town, Perry said his feelings toward me had changed and we could never go back to where we were. I love the guy and want things back to normal. I'm sure when I was away the baby's mother got to him and this is where the trouble started.

Will you please tell me how to get Perry to marry me? I know he loves me and I want the mother of his child. He has told me so a dozen times.—Perry's Girl Girl.

Dear Girl: Sorry, but you're fighting a lost cause. Realistically if you lose this one you win.

An unwilling groom wishes a very poor husband. Perry would be forever grateful to the other woman in order to see his child. They would be the source of never-ending arguments between you two. My advice is to write off Perry NOW and save yourself a lot of heartache.

Dear Ann Landers: We've come to think of you as a friend of the family. Our teen-age daughters are a delight.

One daughter is a college freshman. For years I've been concerned about her atrocious grammar. Her corrected her (audibly) jokingly, or ever-so-lightly and heart-to-heart. No matter how we worded it she felt so shamed by intelligent people.

Is her horrible grammar going to be a serious problem or am I looking at life through 50 year-old eyes? I've adjusted to mini-skirts and dungarees but every time I hear "Me and Jane was walkin' through the park" I shudder.—Worried

Dear Worried: A daughter is not a daughter-in-law. Suggest special tutoring, or a crash course in grammar. Some graduate students at English could use the money and your daughter could use the help.

We owe you a vote of thanks for helping them form good values.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you had a letter in your column from a secretary who said she wouldn't dream of calling her boss (chairman of the board of a make all company) by his first name. I hope that squarrelame saw the results of a national survey reported by a wire service recently.

It revealed that 95 per cent of the 500 bosses questioned said they preferred to be called by their first names.

Age difference between employers and employees were not a major factor. The 95 per cent who objected to first names were physicians and lawyers.

How do you?like them apples?—Gotcha

Dear G: The apples are fine. It's the survey I question. I don't know who those 500 bosses were, but I did a little survey of my own. The results were as follows: 99 per cent of the bosses were quite adamant about being addressed as "Mr." or "Dr., "Mrs." or "Miss." (P.S. Not one said "Ms.")

JUST ARRIVED!

A '10 Day Special'

Wrays Home Furnishers at 306 Front St. have a guest this Friday — with some great home furnishings to match. Ken Kroehler of Kroehler Furniture will be attendance on Friday to talk with you about the merits of Kroehler furniture — a name well-known in your home. Wrays are featuring the weekend special prices on sofas, loveseats, chairs, rocker and 'Sleep-or-Lounge' furniture during Kroehler's Custom Cover Sale. Here's what it means. You can see four of Kroehler's most popular styles covered in white cotton. And why are they covered in white cotton? Well, you can choose from a myriad of fabrics and colors from the selection available and cover your Kroehler sofa just to suit your fancy — and what you get . . . you make what you get. And it's all quality Kroehler. This sale will be on at Wrays for 10 days but you'll only be able to talk with Mr. Kroehler on Friday. Any question, any fabric, Wrays and Kroehler have the answer.

Tropical Fish Special

Every week I do this column, I always learn something. This week, when I phoned the Tropical Garden Pet Shop, 2015L First St., I learned about "Community fish." Community fish are fish which are able to live together in the same aquarium, which makes them preferable to those of you who are just starting aquariums, or are interested in maintaining variety and color in your tanks. It was almost like getting a lesson in marine zoology from Mel Sherwood, owner of the Tropical Garden. At any rate, zoology aside, The Tropical Garden is offering a special price on 3 well-adjusted species — 3 for $1. And that's while the supply lasts. So if you want a happy, well-balanced neighborhood in your aquarium, then you'll have to move quickly. After all, he wouldn't like you to miss all that sportsmanship and competiveness which marks all Stanley Cup playoffs. He won't be able to do anything about which teams are going to make it, but he can make sure that you see everything in real living color. Here is a chance to see those black and white (or black and blue). Superior TV isn't called that for nothing you know.

Sprucing Up the Vehicle

And the vehicle in this case happens to be your own recreational vehicle — camper or trailer which requires some quality attention after your last vacation-and-a-half. And where are you going to get such carpeting? At Sidney Ian's Carpet Division of course, at the rear of Pinnacle St. Or your new outfitting is going to require some carpeting, so why not the old stuff in a little too old and scruffy, even for roughing it. Sidney Ian can do that, too. Some of the best and best of quality carpet which Sidney Ian purchases, they can sell it to you for some very low prices on all in your favor. Visit Sidney Ian or, if an evening appointment is more convenient, just call 962-5744 and it can all be arranged. Just because you're camping out, or at the cottage, doesn't mean you can't go in style — or that it has to be expensive style.

Gaining Those Extra Days

Belleview Glass and Mirror, 254 Pinnacle St. has a great idea for saving gas, grafting and flattening this season. Do it all at once. And by "it", we mean taking off and putting on those storm and screen windows. Why not do it all at once, with some help from Belleview Glass and Mirror? In one effort, you can have aluminum storm and screen windows and screens installed. So some fall, you don't need to panic. The job will be already done, by your foresight right now. And don't think that those aluminum and steel doors and windows don't do a good job of keeping those flies and mosquitoes out. They usually do — and far better than you and your half-a-job putting on those bothersome wooden ones. All you have to do is call or visit or call Belleview Glass at 968-6771. And goodbye labor and mosquitoes and hello golf course!

Taste Of What's To Come

Vader's Car Sales, 21 College St., just around the corner from their former location on North Front St., have, in their Datsun truck with a Cardinal camper, a taste of what's to come, both for you in holiday family camping, and in the line of recreational vehicles which Vaders will soon be carrying. This particular Cardinal unit sleeps six . . . And another feature well worth considering, now that holiday time is fast approaching, is a reputable used car from a fine selection hand at Vader's. And Vader's specialize in small cars and their used car selection at the moment contains many models of compact and sub-compact variety. You can have a good vacation if you're worried about the reliability of the car you're driving. Get rid of the worry before it starts and see Vader's now!

Summer Accessorizing

Studio 221 at 221 Front St., which includes De Kapster's Wig Boutique, have some summer accessories bound to keep you cool and fetch it all hairtoss-free. Airy by cool and with it, I mean flowys looking your fashionable best despite wind and water. Two of those items — and there are more — are mod watches, which are large and lovely wrist watches in high-fashion plastic, and hair wigs. These wigs take the form of gray hair or cascades and come in human hair, or that miracle wig fibre, Kurs. With a little wig magic, who will know that you spent all day at the pool or beach? And a special PS from Studio 221. Watch for the special insert in next Tuesday's Intelligencer telling you how you'll profit shopping downtown during the Downtown Spring Shopping Festivities.

Boats, View And Great Food

That's when you'll get when you visit The Inn On The Bay Tavern in Picton any day of the week — a great view of the lovely Picton harbour, with its interesting selection of craft, and some great dining. Or if you're sailors you can remember to get yourselves up to the Inn On The Bay when you go sailing in the harbour, a great favorite for local boating enthusiasts. Inn On The Bay likes sailors, and they like tourists, and they like local people. In fact, each and everyone receives the heariest of welcomes when they visit the Inn On The Bay. So you don't have to have a boat to get there. A car or bicycle will do. Just go through Picton to the top of the hill and watch for the large sign on your left. You really can't miss it. Nor should you!

Great Home. Great Location

Gord Roblin Real Estate, 117 North Front St. has an ideal family property on its listing right now. This three-bedroom home is of brick construction, has a rec room in the basement with a built-in bar, has wall-to-wall carpeting over hardwood floors and a small patio. BUT, it is in the ideal residential area of the East Hill. Good schools are literally across the street and shopping is very near by. This home is referred to as a back split-level, meaning that the bedrooms are on a higher level than the rest of the house. This is a good solid buy for a family in a good solid family area. And your good solid realtor? Why, Gord Roblin, of course. Call any Gord Roblin salesman at the Gord Roblin number, 968-6475.

Alberta Agency Obtains Results

EDMONTON (CP) — In its two years of operation the Alberta Export Agency has fostered more than $42 million in sales and lifted Alberta to a position of relative prominence in world trade circles, says Bruce Mathew, the agency's director of finance and administration.

"Two years ago I could have walked into an office in Beirut, Buenos Aires or Tokyo and announced I was from Alberta without my host having any conceivable idea where that was or what we represented.

"The situation is vastly different today."

Bear gall bladders have been sent to the Far East for pharmaceutical products, processed meats to Japan, cattle to Argentina and farm machinery to Italy with the help of the agency, which falls under the provincial government's newly organized department of business development and tourism.

"We're moving sizable quantities of potato granules to Japan and elsewhere from a plant down at Vauxhall," said Harry Hargrave, the agency's marketing commissioner.

"This market just opened up in the last two years. And were finding we've developed a product the Japanese like. The granules make better French fried potatoes than frozen, they tell us."

The agency, which used about 11 per cent less than its operating budget of $924,000 during the last fiscal year, offers financial assistance for the development and promotion of Alberta products on world markets.

It also sponsors trade missions to and from Europe, South America, the Pacific Rim, the Middle East and Africa.

"There's no way you can initiate these kinds of deals through mail order," said Mr. Hargrave, brother of Medicine Hat member of Parliament Bert Hargrave.

"You have to meet people face to face and as you get to know them and establish confidence in them you start to do business."

The agency, which sponsored 47 individual trade missions to 43 countries and brought in about 45 foreign missions from May, 1973, to December, 1974, maintains offices in London, Tokyo, Los Angeles, Ottawa and Toronto.

But it relies most heavily on "a highly-knowledgeable mobile force headquartered in Alberta and available to travel to the various markets as required," said Mr. Mathew. The Alberta staff, including clerical workers, numbers about 25.

The agency has authority to trade directly but, as it is committed to supporting the private sector, uses that authority only in unusual circumstances.

For example, it became involved in the bee industry last year when the California supplier of Alberta's bees raised his prices dramatically. The export agency bought $50,000 worth of Mexican bees at a lower price, sold them to Alberta beekeepers, bought back the queens and sold them back to Mexico. But the Alberta Beekeepers Association will perform that function this year.

The agency also assists in developing joint ventures with foreign interests, such as Alberta Japanese rapeseed crushing plants at Lloydminster and Fort Saskatchewan, Alta.

"This expands the economic base, provides more employment in Alberta and means the processing of more Alberta goods here at home," said Mr. Hargrave. "And we're automatically assured a (foreign) market for the product when the industry gets on stream."

Trade missions often receive inquiries abroad about engineering and technical expertise, which are referred to private Alberta consultants, he said.

South and Central American countries, in particular, have requested assistance in such areas as livestock production, meat processing and irrigation systems.

"Our know-how in the petrochemical industry is also in demand. We're getting to the position where we're providing the service the Texans provided to us when we initially got involved in oil in Alberta."

Among the financial assistance programs offered by the agency to Alberta farmers and businessmen are marketing grants, guaranteed loans, market promotion assistance and joint financing of new market or product concepts.

Marketing grants generally are limited to transportation costs to and from the potential consuming country. If the marketing effort is successful, the government expects to be reimbursed two per cent of the resulting export sales.

The government will guarantee loans, at an interest rate of one per cent above the prime rate, for such purposes as financing purchases of raw materials to be processed in Alberta or for stockpiling products or animals pending export. Guaranteed funds may also be used for the development of export markets.

Funds may be provided on an interest-free basis, generally up to $50,000, towards the financing of new market or product concepts. The agency would expect a percentage of the profit should the venture be successful.

Caribou Chop Suey Novel Dish

ST. ALBERT, Alta. (CP) — Mixing ethnic dishes has long been popular among amateur culinary enthusiasts but a combination of Eskimo and Chinese must be some sort of first.

Diane Arbeckie found herself with a chunk of leftover caribou, a gift from a friend in Yellowknife, and decided, since the meat tends to be on the dry side, to make caribou chop suey.

The dish is a kind of Oriental-Arctic cultural mix which, when served over noodles—to add the European touch—with home-made red wine (Okanagan, 1974) and preceded by over proof rum from the Northwest Territories, is sure to please any palate.

Condominium Interest Reported Dying Down

TORONTO (CP) — Michael Warren, Ontario's deputy minister of housing, says the number of applications to convert rental apartments in the province into condominiums is decreasing.

Officials in other provinces report a similar trend, citing rent controls and difficulties in obtaining mortgage financing as contributing factors.

Mr. Warren said many landlords are finding it increasingly difficult to sell old apartments.

Bob McLeod, vice-president of Greenwin Developments Ltd. of Toronto, said most mortgage lenders have decided to avoid giving loans to buy condominiums, particularly converted units.

"They say it's too much money in one location," Mr. McLeod said. "They are taking treasury bonds in preference.

"A lot of people think you can do a condominium conversion standing on your head. But there's a great financial risk."

Fred King, a salesman with A. E. LePage-Westmount Realties Ltd. of Montreal, said he expects conversions to take the form of tenants in a rental building collectively purchasing their building from its owners.

Mr. King said he is afraid the Quebec government will move to prevent conversions, already taking place at a slow pace in the province, to keep an adequate stock of rental apartments.

In Alberta conversions are continuing at a rapid clip. But W. J. Masterson, general manager of Carman Realty Ltd. of Edmonton, said apartments converted to condominiums represent only a small portion of the total rental stock.

Prof. David Baxter of the commerce faculty, University of British Columbia, Vancouver, said the rate of conversion in B.C. has declined.

"It's that rent-control program we have here. A lot of people would like to get out of the rental business."

Prof. Baxter said tough municipal regulations and B.C.'s Landlord and Tenant Act have prevented a wholesale disposal of rental buildings.

"Even if an owner can get permission to go ahead, he must provide three months' notice to a tenant and $300 in moving expenses."

Fausto Rosca, president of Swiss-controlled Fidinam (Ontario) Ltd. of Toronto, said his real estate development company is converting rental buildings into condominiums by selling suites to foreign investors.

The units are not occupied by the owners but are rented out to Canadians by Fidinam.

"The advantage is that you don't touch the tenant in conversions," Mr. Rosca said. "We're in the middle of a battle with the borough of Scarborough, trying to show it literally doesn't affect the tenant." ...3

Art Exhibit On Tour

OTTAWA (CP) — Nearly 300 objects of decorative arts covering the Victorian design period in England between 1850 and 1870, now are on tour in Canada. The organizer of the exhibit is Simon Jervis, assistant keeper of furniture and woodwork at the Victoria and Albert Museum in London. After being shown in Ottawa until April 27, the exhibit will move on to Quebec City.

Untouchables Given Right to Carry Guns

BOMBAY (CP) — Poor peasants belonging to the Harijan or untouchable caste now will be able to carry guns for "self-defence."

Harijans in many rural areas, particularly Bihar, Uttar Pradesh and Madhya Pradesh states in north India, have complained of "atrocities" by landlords and members of the higher castes.

Recently, hundreds of Harijan homes were set on fire in Gwalior County of Madhya Pradesh. A judicial commission is in Bihar quieting into the outrages attributed by Harijan politicians to higher caste Hindus.

Though the practice of untouchability has been outlawed by the Indian Parliament as a criminal offence, Harijans in some remote villages continue to suffer discrimination.

Often, as happened in Bihar last year, policemen, who generally belong to the higher castes, have been accused of joining in burning and looting Harijan peasant homes.

In a dramatic move to give more protection to Harijans, Madhya Pradesh Chief Minister P. C. Sedik announced that the government itself will distribute guns to them free of charge.

"If Harijans are attacked by landlords, they now can hit back," he is quoted as having told a meeting. "The government is determined to put the landlords in their place."

Harijans in many villages in north India have greeted the Madhya Pradesh administration's move with jubilation.

"Once we get the guns the higher castes will begin to behave well," said Chandra Sekhar, Harijan politician in Gwalior County.

According to one estimate, the government may have to distribute more than 10,000 guns to Harijan families in Madhya Pradesh alone.

Other Indian states where atrocities on Harijans have been reported are watching the Madhya Pradesh experiment in protecting the lives and property of a desperately poor caste.

"Some use Harijans politicians for that placing guns in the hands of Harijans may lead to more rural tension. They expect members of the higher castes to buy guns in the black market.

Commons Begins Magazine Debate

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons begins debate today on proposed legislation aimed primarily at removing tax advantages held by Time Canada Ltd. and Reader's Digest.

The bill, to eliminate tax deductions for advertising in Canadian editions of the two United States magazines and on some U.S. border television stations, is expected to run into stiff opposition.

"We were be supporting the bill as it stands," Gordon Fairweather (PC—Fundy Royal) said in an interview Wednesday. He said he will outline the Progressive Conservative position, and the changes sought during a Commons speech today.

U.S. broadcasters, publishers of Time and Reader's Digest, and the publishers of three medical journals and four foreign-owned western newspapers also affected by the bill have said they will fight to continue doing business here.

State Secretary Hugh Faulkner, who introduced the bill three weeks ago, said he will seek to have it referred to committee where arguments from those concerned can be heard. The bill is a tax measure and normally would be dealt with only in the Commons, detaying publishers and broadcasters a chance to make submissions.

Manning Would Pay More For MPs With Experience

OTTAWA (CP) — Pay raises for MPs should be based on their ability to get re-elected, Senator Ernest Manning (SC—Alberta) said Wednesday as the Senate gave approval in principle to proposed salary legislation.

"Parliament is one of the few fields where experience is not rewarded," Senator Manning said.

"A graduated indemnity would encourage more MPs to stay for more than one term."

The first term was a learning one and it was only in subsequent parliaments that an MP could put his knowledge to work effectively.

Senator Manning, Alberta premier for 25 years, attacked the federal New Democrats for their opposition to the pay bill in the Commons. He said their counterparts in British Columbia had brought in large increases for legislature members.

No Prospect for Early Settlement of Roadworkers' Strike

The strike of Hastings County roadworkers entered its third day of inactivity today.

Both county and union spokesmen today indicated no immediate developments aimed at breaking the deadlock over wages and working

It is the first labor controversy involving county government since it was organized 135 years ago.

Phil Gaubber, area officer of Local 793, International Union of Operating Engineers, said the union would have to await a county initiative to reopen talks.

"We have no choice," he said. "... Our positions are crystal clear. Unless we get settlements we have no place to go."

Talks, which began last February before the road workers' contract ran out in March, unsuccessfully went to conciliation then reached an impasse Monday at mediation discussions. The session ended with negotiations being broken off.

"We have gone to all the places we can go — and now we're out on the street," said Mr. Gaubber.

Workers claim they first need $1.21 an hour to give them parity with average wage scales for municipal workers in the Belleville — Peterborough region. On top of the catch-up adjustment they want a 54-cent wage increase and the starting minimum for overtime reduced from 55 to 45 hours.

Warden William McCrea says the wage demands amount to more than a 60 per cent increase over a one-year agreement.

This would cost the county roads budget — approximately one last week — $100,000 or about $3,150 per man, not counting overtime costs, said the warden.

Membership in the roadworkers unit of the Local involves between 25 and a summer peak of 50.

Legal Aid Stays

The legal assistance project launched several years ago by law students is in Belleville to stay.

Not only that. It's expanding — both in demand and resources.

The program — Queen's (Belleville) Legal Aid — next Monday goes into its summer schedule — and steps up its availability to those needing its free services.

"It's a stabilized operation now in Belleville," says Ken Clarke, new project director. "Not only that, it's into an expanding phase."

Indicative of the claim is the increased caseload handled by the young advisers — all Queen's University law students.

The Belleville operation, run from an office in the United Community Services Building on William St. — and making no-cost legal advice only a phone call away — is twin to a Kingston unit.

The director Wednesday had no separate statistics for the Belleville branch.

But both legal aid projects — in Kingston and Belleville — handled 1,500 calls, and cases last year.

This compared with 1,200 in 1973, says Don, 27 and entering his third year of legal studies and who worked with the Belleville scheme last year before his appointment as director for 1975.

As such, he heads up work teams of fellow students which has had to be slightly increased — to six, from five last year. It also is adding an extra day to its office hours.

The Belleville project was launched three summers ago and is funded by federal Opportunities For Youth grants and the province's Attorney General's department.

Its team is available to handle all the lesser problems resulting from citizen involvement with the law.

Besides keeping an assistant to duty defence counsels in provincial and family courts, the group also offers free advice on a legal spectrum of kin—from welfare to workers' compensation.

This year too the law students are broadening more publicly into the community.

They're making themselves available as speakers to any community group during the summer.

The Final Check

City manager Wilbur Purcell makes last-minute check of most important document of city hall's year . . . the 1975 budget. The estimates were despatched to city councillors Wednesday night who will pour over its statistics before going into session Friday to strike a new mill rate.

St. Thomas' Council Refuses To Consider 'Absorption'

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

St. Thomas' Anglican Church officials have three alternatives to restoration of the gutted 120-year-old structure and one is so drastic it will not even be studied, says Harold Carruthers, chairman of the church's property committee.

He told a meeting of the church council of the vestry Wednesday the one proposal involves a phase-out of the parish and absorption by other city Anglican churches "which we are not going to even consider".

The other two alternatives would mean demolition of the walls and tower and construction of either a new, contemporary church or the building of a multiple purpose complex which would see the disposition of the parish hall and rectory on East Bridge St., he said.

"We are not sure, but there is a possibility we could restore that church," commented Mr. Carruthers, pointing to approval of an application to the Ontario Heritage Foundation now in the works.

He noted the walls and tower, in danger of collapse at any time, have to be shored before workmen can enter to clear out the interior. "You don't do anything with the walls the way they are now," he said.

Mr. Carruthers explained committee members have urged a quick decision by council officials in order that work can begin before the walls further deteriorate. The north wall has a noticeable lean and large cracks have formed in the buttresses.

He said it is hoped to involve as many members of the congregation as possible in the restoration of the interior. "There's a lot to be done, believe me," he commented.

The council decided to approve the expansion of the property committee to include representatives with expertise in various areas concerning reconstruction.

Licence Needed For Pits

On May 1, 1975, the Townships of Percy, Seymour and Rawdon were designated under the Pits and Quarries Control Act, 1971.

Operating pits and quarries have six months to be licensed. No new pits or quarries shall be opened without a licence.

Contravening any provision of the Act or the Regulations may result in a fine not exceeding $5,000 for each day on which the offence occurs or continues.

For information of the licensing procedure and regulations, one may be obtained from the Ministry of Natural Resources in Napanee. Phone (613) 354-3385.

Vestry Office Door Likely Thieves' Exit

The vestry office door of St. Thomas' Anglican Church may have been used as an exit and not an entrance by unknown thief or thieves who made off with a quantity of silver prior to the early morning fire which gutted the 120-year-old sanctuary April 30, says a representative of the Ontario Fire Marshal's office here.

Paul McKerracher told a meeting of St. Thomas' council of the vestry Wednesday no evidence has been found of any marks on the door the vestry lock was forced in any way following recent study of the site.

Police said last week it was believed that door was the point of entry but Mr. McKerracher pointed out marks have been found around a door leading into the basement from the outside.

He said the basement door has an inside panic bar which was found in the locked position. This door might have been kicked in, the bar replaced and the vestry door used as the exit, he added.

Mr. McKerracher said the church caretaker has reported he left all doors in the building at 5 p.m.

He also said it is believed more than one person might have been involved. He said some metal object - recovered from the debris were found removed from their locations.

Mr. McKerracher commended the vestry council representa a cross-section of business in the city and appealed for any information which might aid the investigation.

Bemis Predicts Industry Park Will Be Filled in Four Years

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Work begins this summer on servicing 2 more blocks of 200 acres of city industrial land — the only major parcel not land left in Belleville for industrial expansion, says industrial commissioner Fred Bemis.

The land, comprised of farmers' fields, is owned by the city and lies in the north-east quadrant of Belleville. It is bordered to the south by Cankidian National and to the north by the city's existing industrial park and Highway 401.

"Securing land for industrial development is a major chore for the commission," said Mr. Bemis. "At best, this 200 acres will last for more than four years."

Within two years, there will be no more available land in the city's north east industrial park — the only other major industrial development area, he said.

This summer, the last of the land in that park will be turned into a 51-acre cul-de-sac. The end product of the cul-de-sac will be a subdivision of half a dozen small industries.

The innovation was first tried in Belleville last year and was sold out to eight companies virtually before land preparation was completed.

Mr. Bemis would give no corporate name but said "six new firms, have shown an interest in locating in the new cul-de-sac," located off Percy Acres Bell Blvd. from the pilot park idea.

"The first try met with unusual success — we expect the new park will be sold within two year," said Mr. Bemis.

The city has been fortunate in the past year to far exceed the industrial growth average for the province.

Compared with the provincial average of one industry for each municipality during 1974, Belleville claimed a total of 11.

"We're not giving anything away," said Mr. Bemis answering why Belleville was attractive to industry.

"We can Mean retrieve the money we spend during the sale of each piece of land," he said. "We are careful that the taxpayer is not losing money by an industry locating here."

"On the other side of the coin, it's not financial profit we seek through the sale of the land either," he said.

"We're looking for the long term municipal profit of adding to the tax base and provision of jobs for city residents," he said.

Authority Sells Land For Road

The executive of the Moira River Conservation Authority has approved sale of a 10.2-acre parcel of land on the northeast corner of the 200-acre Potter property to the Belleville Suburban Roads Commission.

The property is required for construction of approach ramps to an overpass over the CN tracks at Wallbridge Road.

Selling price set by the authority is approximately $23,000, with the Suburban Roads commission cover legal expenses in the transaction.

Also, on May 24, in conjunction with the sale, a trust of chattels on the Potter property will be sold at public auction for sale. The successful buyer or buyers will have to offer to remove the cabins from the property.

Resources manager John Johnson said development of the Potter property would be held in abeyance until a master plan for the property had been agreed upon. Work is now under way on the plan, he said.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following call for assistance during a 24-hour period which ended at 8 a.m. Wednesday.

Wednesday, May 7, 12:31 p.m. — Fire truck and Fire Chief Stanley Jones, 27, started by inclinerator being loaded for Trenton to the dump, 100 gallons of water used, minor damage to 1957 Chevrolet stake body.

City Firm Gets Jobs

From The Ottawa Bureau
Of The Intelligencer

OTTAWA — Two federal contracts totalling $8.6M have been awarded to Buddy Electric, of 271 Coleman St., Belleville. Supply and Services Canada announced this week.

The firm will provide the department of national defence and the Canadian penitentiary service with electrical materials and supplies.

The two were among 362 unadvertised contracts, valued worth $10,000 or more, awarded to Canadian companies during the week ended April 30. Total value of these contracts was $45,415,387.

Turkey Out For Stroll

A Napanee area turkey may have been slaughtered sooner than expected early this morning.

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville were advised by a passing motorist that a turkey was seen loose in the westbound lane of Highway 401 just east of the service centre at Napanee at about 3 a.m.

Provincial police at Napanee were advised but no word on the gobbler's safety was known by press time.

Staples Go Wrong Way

The Quinte District Labor Council has bought a new stapler, following criticism from the Belleville Post Office.

It seems when council secretary Daisy LeRoe staples the letters closed, the staples ends turn out, not in.

Letter carriers are not allowed to handle mail which may be dangerous to their hands, a union spokesman told the council.

The council voted to purchase a new stapler.

German Craftsmen Making City Crest

German craftsmen are now fashioning large carved, wooden replicas of Belleville's crest in commemoration of the city's June friendship flight to Lahr.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey said Wednesday, city hall received an "urgent" call last week for a photograph of the city's coat of arms so that replicas could be made for mounting at each entrance to the German city.

A Boeing 707 full of Belleville's will arrive in Lahr June 9 to foster sister city relations there — a follow-up to original twinning of the cities through the Canadian Armed Forces connection between Lahr and Trenton.

"We don't have an official coat of arms so we sent them a copy of the crest," said the mayor.

"I don't know if Lahr intends letting us bring one of the wooden carvings back to Belleville," said Mayor Jeffrey.

The city crest is divided in four section depicting the logging industry, a lion for the city's United Empire Loyalist beginnings, a sheaf of wheat symbolizing the rural nature of the region and a fruit tree representing fruit industry in Prince Edward County.

Lahr Gets Slide Show

Belleville Mayor Robin Jeffrey will take a slide show of Belleville to twinning city Lahr as part of the activities connected with the Belleville-Lahr Friendship Flight.

Mayor Jeffrey said he has contacted the Belleville Camera Club for a collection of slides showing the highlights of Belleville.

"I want to show the people in Lahr what Belleville looks like," said the mayor.

Walter Yateman, president of the inside postal workers' union in Belleville, distributed envelopes at the Quinte District Labor Council meeting pre-printed with a slogan urging the user to refrain from using postal codes in mailing addresses. "We're not against people using the postal service but we want the right to negotiate the affects of technological change on our workers," he said. Taking a pack of the special envelopes is council president Doug Sword.

Interpreter Started Young

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

Louise Ford's parents say she started to use sign language at the age of seven months as a baby because she was deaf but because her parents were hearing they knew

By the time she started school Louise could use normal speech as well as communicating a good deal of ideas for which she learned from her parents, who both became deaf through childhood diseases.

Today, she is an interpreter at the Teachers Education Centre at Sir James Whitney School (OSD) and is the only certified professional interpreter in Ontario, and one of four in Canada.

Born in Sarnia Louise took her early school education here and after graduating from high school decided against a teaching career to work with the mentally retarded. Both Louise, and her husband, George, came to this area in 1972 to join the staff of Prince Edward Heights, a residential facility for the mentally retarded at Picton.

Louise and her younger brother and sister did not grow up in a soundless environment. She said her parents made every effort to provide a normal home. "The family dog would attract my mother's attention when I was crying in the crib," said Louise, who for a long period of her childhood was ashamed of sign language because she would get teased.

The teachers Education Centre currently has student-teacher enrolment of about 48 of which three of these students are deaf teachers. Louise acts as their interpreter during lectures.

"I interpret about five hours a day," explained Louise, "and then I'm available for tutoring after classes which is something I rarely do." Louise joined the centre last October after working with the mentally retarded at Picton for three years.

Louise said she interpreted for her parents during most of her childhood but never really became interested in the deaf until she went to work at a summer camp for the hearing impaired. "I learned my lesson that year," said Louise, who at since developed a keen insight into the problems of the deaf.

In the past few months she has been co-ordinating a committee to plan activities for Speech and Hearing Month. The committee has arranged for a three-day exhibition at the Quinte Mall setting the work being done with hearing impaired people.

As for the future Louise said she can see this type of interpreting field opening up into government and university work.

Dr. Potter Building Chairman

Dr. Richard Potter, Quinte M.L.A. has been named chairman of the building field committee charged with collection of donations for the reconstruction of the gutted St. Thomas' Anglican Church.

The decision was made during a meeting of the church council of the vestry Wednesday at which it was reported over $2,000 had already been donated.

A meeting of the entire congregation will be held Monday in the parish hall at 7.30 p.m. to further discuss the issue, followed by a property committee meeting next Wednesday at 7.30 p.m.

A Rare Skill

Flyers Do Everything But Sweep Series

Somebody Up There Likes Islanders

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (CP) — Denis Potvin of New York Islanders figures his team had a little extra help on Rs side Wednesday night.

"The good Lord helped us out a little bit and I hope we make Him proud. We thank him for it," said Potvin, grateful that the Islanders were still alive in the National Hockey League playoffs.

The Islanders, indeed, had a lot to thankful for in scoring a 4-3 overtime win on Jude Drouin's goal, preventing Philadelphia Flyers from completing a four-game sweep in their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final.

For instance:

—Bill Smith was awarded a penalty shot, only the sixth in NHL playoff history, late in the first period. The Flyer goalie, after shot too high, enabling r. Glenn Resch to get a piece of it and make a save-catching save.

—Bob Leach of the Flyers appeared to have beaten a 3-3 tie by scoring in the last second of play. Dave Newell quickly signaled "no goal" because the time on the penalty had ended. The green light flicked for a second or so and the buzzer had sounded just before the goal, the officials said.

The entire Flyer team was in a brief uproar, believing they had won the series in four consecutive games. The Philadelphia leads the series 3-1, with the fifth game tonight in Philadelphia.

"After the buzzer sounded, I thought everything was gone," said Potvin. "We really got a break."

Resch himself thought he had had the game.

"I don't know whether it was a goal or not," he said. "I heard the buzzer but my back was to it.

"I was upset. I thought I had blown it."

Resch said he had skated away from the net thinking he had scored.

"I just shot it and it went in," he said. "now I tied it up.

"I was maybe three or four feet away from him (Resch). It went in between his legs. I didn't think the clock ran out."

The Islanders won because they checked and skated with the Flyers most of the time and got the breaks. They had their first lead of the series when they piled up a 3-0 advantage in the first 28½ minutes of the game.

But New York tired on occasion and the Flyers jumped on every mistake they could, coming back to tie the score on Rick MacLeish's sixth and seventh goals of the playoff and a goal by Rose Lamberti.

By the end of regulation time, the Flyers had a 38-35 edge in shots.

But the Islanders needed just one shot in overtime to win.

Drouin was alone when he beat goalie Bernie Parent at 1:53 to end Philadelphia's unbeaten string at 21 games going back to March 8 in the regular season.

"It was me and the Flyers," said Drouin. "If I had missed it would have shot myself."

It was captain Ed Westfall who had created New York's first goal, who started the play that put the Islanders back in the series.

He carried the puck over the blueline himself, then flipped a pass to Drouin that bounced over his stick. J. P. Parise picked up the loose puck and passed it to Drouin, who was by then alone in front of the net.

"I noticed Bernie Parent was more on the lefthand side of the net, so I had to go to my backhand, which I did," said Drouin.

The 10-foot backhander rose over Parent's outstretched right pad.

Coach Al Arbour of the Islanders said there was "no doubt" in his mind that the period was over when Leach scored.

"I don't think there was too much argument about that, but the Flyers argued," he said.

Islander general manager Bill Torrey said the timekeeper caused the confusion by turning off the green light indicating the end of the period too quickly.

He said a videotape of the game confirmed that the green light flashed before Leach scored.

After Westfall's power-play goal early in the first period, defenceman Gerry Hart made it 2-0 when he shot a 25-foot after taking a pass from Andre St. Laurent behind the net early in the second period.

Ralph Stewart gave the Islanders a three-goal lead on another power play but Lonsberry and MacLeish cut that lead to one goal, scoring before the period ended.

At 4:48 of the third period, MacLeish pulled Resch out of the net on a breakaway and flipped a wrist shot into a wide-open net.

Barber got his penalty shot at 12:34 of the first period after the Islanders' Billy Harris, trying to catch him on a breakaway, pulled him down from behind.

Resch said that Barber almost had him beat on the penalty shot.

"I just kinda went with his deke and threw my legs out and he had me but he didn't shoot the puck up," he said. "It just hit my pad.

"I'd be had got the puck up three or four feet, he would have scored."

Arbour said his club will have to be at its best tonight.

"We can't make some of the mistakes that we made. We gave them the goals that they did get."

Sabres Save Energy for Ice

MONTREAL (CP) — Larry Carriere, a member of the young Buffalo Sabres defence in a rarity in the National Hockey League, being one of the few players to move directly to the NHL from Canadian college hockey.

The 23-year-old Montreal native played with Loyola Warriors for four seasons before being drafted by the Sabres with Jim Schoenfeld in 1972. Carriere was used to playing on a winner at Loyola and he thinks he will be on the winning side tonight when the Sabres meet Montreal Canadiens in the sixth game of their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final.

"I believe we can win. — We've got momentum, and we're playing the way we can, he said.

"We tried the emotion stuff before each of the two games in Montreal. We did a lot of talking off the ice, but we didn't do anything once we got onto the ice.

"We got mentally prepared for Tuesday game in a different way and decided we would do our talking on the ice rather than in the dressing room."

At one stage during his young hockey career, Carriere had the choice between college hockey and the juniors and elected to go to Loyola, one of the better athletic schools in Canada.

He played on two Quebec championship teams under coach Dave Draper, now with Hamilton of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series.

"I respect him," Carriere said of his ex-coach. "He helped me a lot. He's a great man and one of the known hockey."

Carriere and his team-mates know they will be in for a battle tonight as they attempt to finish the series. None of the Sabres is keen on playing a seventh game in Buffalo Sunday.

Canadiens coach Scotty Bowman said Wednesday he is sure his club will play a good deal better than they did in Buffalo Tuesday night—a game dominated by the Sabres and won 5-4 by Buffalo on Rene Robert's goal at 5:56 of overtime.

"Fundamentally, we made too many mistakes," Bowman said. "We had three or four breakaways and we didn't get good shots.

"I think we'll come back tomorrow, I hope so."

Calder Cup to Indians

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Sparked by first-period power-play goals by Paul Shakes and Bob Pofferoyl, Springfield Indians defeated New Haven Nighthawks 4-0 Wednesday to win the American Hockey League championship.

The Indians, who finished fourth in the AHL North during the regular season, won their fifth Calder Cup by defeating the Nighthawks 4-1 in the best-of-seven championship series.

Capitalizing on New Haven penalties, Springfield scored twice within four minutes in the opening period to nail down the victory. Shakes scored while New Haven was shorthanded at 7:31, and Pofferoyl made it 2-0 after taking a pass from Pete Haraszyn and cutting in on New Haven goalie Sam Clegg.

The Indians made it 3-0 in the second period as Phil Hoene stole the puck from a Nighthawk defenceman for his 12th playoff goal, one short of the AHL record.

4-goal Third Carries Bruins Past Marlies

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Coach Ernie McLean wasn't surprised at the way his New Westminster Bruins out-skated, out-hit and forechecked Toronto Marlboro in Wednesday night's Memorial Cup hockey game.

"That's the way we always play," McLean said moments after the Bruins, champions of the Western Canada Hockey League, scored four goals in the first period to defeat the Marlboros 6-3 in the third game of the first round of the Canadian major junior championship.

The win gives the Bruins a two into Sunday's 1:30 p.m. EDT final, while the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A winners from Toronto must play Sherbrooke Beavers in a sudden-death game Friday night to determine New Westminster's opponent.

Sherbrooke, representing the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League, lost both its games in the first round, a 5-4 overtime decision to the Marlboros on Saturday night, and a 7-5 Monday night loss to the Bruins.

Wednesday's game was supposed to feature the hard-hitting often-brutal tactics of the Bruins and the free-wheeling Toronto attack. The reverse was almost true.

The New Westminster penalty-killing unit continually kept the Marlboros on their power plays, directing the play and allowing Toronto few shots on goalie Cord Laxton.

And when the Marlboros did manage to get a shot away at Laxton—29 in all—the Bruins goaltender handled them easily.

McLean sees penalty killing as the key to his team's win.

"Toronto is supposed to have the best power play in the East," McLean said. "But we've got a fine bunch of penalty killers ourselves."

The Bruins had to kill off seven penalties assessed by QMJHL referee Marcelle Vaillancourt. Toronto had five minor penalties called in the first eight-free game of the tournament.

New Westminster took a 2-0 first-period lead on goals by Brian Shmyr and Clayton Pachal. Mark Napier scored the only goal of the second period and Lynn Jorgenson scored at 1:54 of the third to tie the game.

Steve Clippingdale put the Bruins ahead 3-2 at 5:08 of the final period and Mike Sharp, Fred Berry and Richard Shinske added insurance goals later in the period.

Toronto goaltender Gary Carr appeared unsteady at times, stopping 17 of 22 shots directed his way.

Laxton was forced to make several outstanding saves during the game, including a breakaway skate save on Napier when the Marlboros were shorthanded near the end of the second period.

Laxton said after the game he doesn't care which team he plays in the final—"we beat them both" — but rates Sherbrooke as the tougher team.

Garvin Leads Toledo To IHL Championship

SAGINAW, Mich. (CP) — A third-period power-play goal by Juri Kadrauva gave Toledo Goaldiggers a 6-5 win Wednesday over Saginaw Gears in the seventh and deciding game of the International Hockey League playoffs.

The victory gave the Goaldiggers and coach Ted Garvin, formerly with Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League, the series 4-3.

Garvin guided Port Huron to the Turner Cup—emblematic of the IHL playoff title—two years ago.

Don Westbrooke, Ian MacPhee, Jim McVabe, Dennis Craig and Michael Lanzendorf scored the other Toledo goals.

27 Athletes Measure Up

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has 27 athletes—14 men and 13 women—who have already equalled or excelled qualifying standards for track and field competition at the 1976 Olympics, the Canadian Track and Field Association says.

Technical director Lynn Davies emphasized that the records do not qualify the athletes for the Games, as they are 1974 and early 1975, performances and will have to be repeated in qualifying competition after the end of May this year.

But he added: "These are last year's performances and a lot of our athletes have improved a lot since then. So we should have quite a few able to qualify."

Following are names of Canadian athletes whose past performances have met qualifying standards (standards set by the International Amateur Athletic Federation in brackets after the name of the event):

MEN

100 metres (10.2): Marvin Nash, Toronto, 10.1; Hugh Fraser, Ottawa, 10.1; Claude Montminy, Trois-Rivieres, Que., 10.2.

1,500 metres (3:40.6): Paul Craig, Toronto, 3:39.3.

5,000 metres (13:48.0): Grant McLaren, Toronto, 13:34.4.

10,000 metres (28:48.0): Dan Shaugnessy, Toronto, 28:14.8.

110-metre hurdles (13.8): Daniel Tetu, Montreal 13.8.

High jump (2.18 metres): Greg Joy, Vancouver, 2.22; Claude Ferragne, Montreal, 2.21; John Beers, Vancouver 2.20; Dean Banck, Vancouver, 2.18.

Pole vault (5.20 metres): Bruce Simpson, Ottawa, 5.20.

Argos Sign Three

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts added Canadian strength to their 1975 Canadian Football League roster Wednesday with the signing of three players who received their early grounding in Ontario.

Signed by the Eastern Football conference club were:

—avid Whiteside, 25, a six-foot-three 245-pound offensive tackle from Peterborough;

—Peter Quigley, 24, six-foot, two 215-pound running back from Ottawa;

—Anthony Galle, 24, six-foot 220-pound fullback linebacker from Toronto.

Whiteside, who attended Queen's University at Kingston, was drafted by Edmonton Eskimos of the Western Conference and attended their summer camp in 1974 before returning to Queen's, where he was captain of the Golden Gaels while playing tackle, centre and guard.

Quigley attended the University of Western Ontario and was a college all-star in 1973 and one of the Eskimos final cuts last season.

Galle played junior football with Scarborough Rams of the Ontario Football Conference (1972-1973) and senior ball with Bramalea Satellites of the Northern Football Conference (1974).

Mortgage the Farm? Not If Habs Produce

Canadiens, you see me.

I'm beginning to wonder why I bother with you.

I've got more in common with Punch Imlach and his troupe, anyway.

Remember, it was the same old Punch who set such an impressive (to almost everyone except the one who counted most at the time) record with Toronto Maple Leafs before building Buffalo into a contender.

To think, I worried about missing most of Tuesday's game because of other commitments.

Could have saved myself the anxiety.

Except for Ken Dryden, most of you should have stayed at home in the Forum.

After all, that's precisely where you left your game.

How can you people put it all together for two games at home and mysteriously lose your touch on Buffalo ice?

Admit it.

You were terrible, Tuesday. At least you were white I was watching.

You were fortunate the game went to overtime.

What happened to the forechecking?

Where was the defence?

Playing for the gate?

(That's a common complaint when these things happen in sports.)

Hey man, you're costing me.

Atonement is the word for the day.

Just go on a two-game winning streak.

Then, all will be forgiven.

And I won't have to mortgage the farm.

SLICES — Effects are being made to raise some funds for an injured soccer player.

Pietro Vitalacie, injured during the indoor soccer season, recently had surgery to repair damaged knee cartilage.

He'll be off work for some time.

Sunday, May 25, a special benefit match is scheduled with Italo-Canadians and Quinte Hellenic footing up at Zwick's Island, at 2 p.m.

Plan to be there.

Olympics Held to 4-4 Tie by Moira

After three consecutive exhibition victories, Belleville Olympics suffered a minor setback Wednesday night at they battled to a 4-4 deadlock with Mitty Secondary School.

"We didn't play very well," said Kevin Kirby, team representative, "but that's not taking anything away from Moira because they played an exceptional game."

Moira is preparing for the Ontario Federation of Schools Athletic Association championship to be held in Hawkesbury, May 14-17.

Moira is presently ranked second in the Ontario Secondary Schools Athletic Association championship to be held in Hawkesbury, May 14-17.

Cleo Colling presents Mike Taylor with the Ken Colling Memorial Cup after Wednesday's running of the day Ken Colling Road Race. Taylor, a Trenton High School student, knocked 20.2 seconds off the former record to finish first in the four-mile race. Taylor has been running long distance for Trenton High for the past five years.

80 Compete in Ken Colling Road Race

Trenton's Mike Taylor Smashes Record

"If they're going to break any records, this is the day to do it," said Brian MacKenzie organizer of this year's Ken Colling Road Race. His predictions were right on target. The former record for the four-mile run, set by Peplar's Paul Cory in 1970, was 21:48.5. That mark went down by a devastating 20 seconds as Trenton's Mike Taylor sprinted across the finish line.

"It was a good day," said Taylor. "The weather was just right for running a long distance race."

The 21 degree celcius temperature (70 fahrenheit) is considered ideal for long distance running. That coupled with a very slight breeze made things even more ideal.

Taylor, a 17-year-old Grade 11 student at Trenton High School, finished the course officially in 21:28.3. Going into the event however, he was considered a long shot to win.

The two favorites, Dave Peckham and John Sheppard, finished second and fourth respectively.

Peckham, an East Northumberland Secondary School student, repeated his finish of last year. This time he completed the course in 21:33. Another Brighton student, Bill O'Sullivan finished at 22:34 to take third place and Sheppard, a Quinte representative came across the line in 22:41. Fifth spot went to Terry MacKellar of Trenton with a time of 22:46.

The next five runners came in rather closely together. Sixth and seventh went to Richard Burrowes and John Guthrie, both from BCI. Eighth was Peter Vessesen from Trenton, ninth went to Rob Peister from Brighton and tenth was taken by Carrie Richards, from Bayside.

Richards Lets Them Know Females Take It Seriously

Of the 80 competitors in this year's edition of the Ken Colling Road Race, 74 were male. At least 65 of those boys walked away from the finish line with their egos slightly deflated. For that matter, all 74 should have felt a blow to their pride.

While Mike Taylor won the 20th running of the four-mile event in record time, smashing a mark set by Paul Cory five years ago, he had to take a back seat to a young lady from Bayside Secondary School who finished 10th.

This is the first year the event has been opened to females and six were entered.

Carrie Richards, a recent addition to the Bay of Quinte area, was the surprise of the day.

"When I went out I was just aiming for the top 30 so I could get a crest," she said, "I never thought I'd finish this well."

"Everything was perfect though," she added. "the temperature was right, there was no wind, there wasn't anything to hinder any of the runners."

Carrie's finish was a surprise to everyone. What is even more surprising though is that she has only been running for the past couple of years. She is only 16 years old.

Her family moved to Bayside from New Brunswick in August. Last fall she represented the Maritimes at the Junior Olympics in Edmonton.

"I've competed against boys in a few other events," said Carrie, "but I've never done this well."

Some considered Carrie's 18th place finish a fluke. The highest any of the other girls finished was 54th. But Carrie takes her running seriously. She averages 44 miles a day on the road and has practised all winter.

Her official time in the Ken Colling wasn't registered only the top five girls were tied, but unofficially she did it in under 30 minutes — less than six minutes a mile on the average.

With the Central Ontario Secondary School Athletic Association track and field championships coming up, Carrie intends to work on her short distance running.

"I'm going to compete in the 800 and 1,500 metre," she said. "If they had a girls' 3,000 metre I'd like to run it, but they don't have one for girls."

In any event, people are going to find out soon that Carrie Richards is no fluke runner.

Who cares if CAN-AM* spells value? You should!

IF YOU UNDERSTAND THAT: CAN-AM* firmly believes in spending money to give you engineering excellence.
A no-nonsense rotary-valve engine doesn't come cheap — especially if it's only 10 inches wide — when its unique induction system permits precise inlet timing for high horsepower over a broad power band.
A rugged transmission featuring quick-in-gear starting. No chassis is worth its weight in high tensile steel unless it boasts extreme rigidity with a large diameter tapered backbone, perfect triangulation and the engine forming an integral part of the frame.
All the smoothest torque and power curves in the world mean nothing if your motorcycle doesn't handle. CAN-AM* gives it to you — long-travel rear suspension — adjustable steering head — improved chain geometry by using the swing-arm pivot bolt as the rear engine mount.
An injection system is vital to feed undiluted oil directly to critical crankshaft bearing and provide lubrication to the rotary valve and cylinder wall.
Making use of virtually indestructible, high density polyethylene for fenders and fuel tank is safe and functional.

INDEX OF PERFORMANCE: Beat the "ice" habit! — Learn about performance. — Divide the weight of your motorcycle by its usable horsepower. — The resulting power to weight ratio indicates how many pounds each horsepower has to carry.

That's what INDEX OF PERFORMANCE is all about. That's why CAN-AM* SPELLS VALUE!

Scott's Double Stymies Lolich

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Mickey Lolich of Detroit Tigers threw the pitch where he wanted—low and inside.

George Scott of Milwaukee Brewers hit it where he wanted—low and inside third base.

The seventh-inning blow put Scott on second and helped three Brewers to break a 4-4 tie Wednesday night and Milwaukee went on to beat the Tigers 7-5 in an American League baseball game.

In Wednesday's other American League games, Oakland A's scored nine runs in the seventh inning, the last four on Sal Bando's grand-slam homer, and topped California Angels 9-1, Kansas City Royals nipped Texas Rangers 4-3, Baltimore Orioles downed New York Yankees 4-3, Boston Red Sox turned back Cleveland Indians 4-2 and Chicago White Sox edged Minnesota Twins 5-2 with three runs in the ninth inning.

Darrell Porter opened the Brewers' seventh with a triple off the previously unhittable Lolich. One out later, walks to Don Money and Robin Yount loaded the bases.

Bobby Mitchell struck out but Scott laced his double down the third-base line on a 3-2 pitch—low, inside slider.

"To be honest," Scott said, "I think it was the type of pitch I would make an out on nine out of every 10 times.

"I wanted to hit the ball hard. It was a ball of a pitch, down and inside. I was lucky to get my bat on it. You go with him and he'll say he got that pitch exactly where he wanted it. The pitch was so good I don't think I could hit it again."

Despite his misfortune Wednesday, Lolich said he would rather pitch to hitters like Scott.

"It would have been a ball but most of my slider strikeouts are on balls," he said. "Scotty's a big, free swinger.

"I'd rather pitch to those guys. Usually a big swinger takes a big cut at that slider and they miss."

Phillies Are Building a Powerhouse

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Now that Dick Allen's back, how can Philadelphia Phillies miss?

Manager Danny Ozark was wondering the same thing Wednesday night, after the Phillies downed St. Louis Cards hals 4-1 in a National League baseball game.

"I felt awfully good about a lot of things tonight," acknowledged Ozark, who earlier in the day flew to Philadelphia to attend a news conference with Allen.

"But I could hardly wait to get back here to see (Garry) Maddox in the outfield," said Ozark.

Soothing to Ozark were the arrival of the first Maddox, who was acquired early in the week from San Francisco, the trade for Allen from Atlanta and Tug McGraw's tight relief pitching.

In Wednesday's other National League games, Cincinnati Reds pounded San Diego Padres 10-2, Chicago Cubs blanked Montreal Expos 7-0, Los Angeles Dodgers downed Houston Astros 5-1, San Francisco Giants beat Atlanta Braves 6-2 and Pittsburgh Pirates tripped New York Mets 6-1.

"Garry's not hitting right now, but he'll get his stroke," Ozark predicted after Maddox, who played centre field, went 1-for-4 at bat.

"I said before that Allen would hit third, but that could change," Ozark noted. "If Garry begins to hit, he may bat third with (Greg) Luzinski fourth and Allen fifth. We'll have to wait and see."

McGraw, appearing Wednesday in his fifth game since returning to action April 24 following minor back surgery, entered with Lou Brock and Ted Simmons on base for the Cardinals in the ninth inning.

He got Bake McBride to fly out to end a threat, then set St. Louis down in order in the eighth and ninth to record his second save.

In the absence of Allen, who is scheduled to join the team on Monday, Mike Schmidt hit his fifth home run to power the Phils' attack.

IN MEMORIAM

REYNOLD — In loving memory of my beloved father Ted who left us May 17, 1968.
Dad, you left a vacant place in our heart
Which no one can fill or take you place.
In everything I do,
You inspire me to do better effort dad.
So take this message to heaven
And let your angels know
How much we miss your longing.
That lies within my heart.
—Always remembered by daughter Christine.

REYNOLD — In loving memory of my mother Bessie Reynold Byrnes who passed away May 8, 1962.
Dad passed away May 20th, 1962.
Two important anymore,
My strength to face the daily battle,
Till I am with you in all I ask.
Sadly missed by wife Lillian.

REYNOLD — In loving memory of my dear father (Ted) Reynold who passed away May 18, 1968.
We miss his love and cheery ways
With his we lost a beloved father
Dad
In memory we see him the same,
Not as we live well checkin the room,
Sadly missed by daughter Vera and son-in-law Ken.

BERRY — In loving memory of a dear father Joseph Berry who passed away May 17, 1962 on behalf of his family.
In our hearts your memory lingers,
Gentle, tender, loved and true.
There's not a day, dear father,
We do not think of you.
—Sadly missed by son Ken and son-in-law Clinton and grandchildren Laurie and Jamie.

BRAND NEW
ONLY $34,900.. URBAN

We have a limited number of lots within the city where we can offer certain three bedroom homes at only $34,900.00. The down payment would be less than $2,000.00 and if it's your first home, you would get the entire amount returned in grants from the Government. These will be sold on a first come first sold basis, so call early and get the best choice.

10% MORTGAGE
AND $2,000.00 GRANT

is a combination pretty hard to beat in today's market. We have two houses in the East end, each of which offers just such a combination. You could move in at once. Everything is done — even the lawns are sodded.

INVEST WITH NO CASH

and make several thousands in a couple of years. Sound impossible? Not so! You can let the Government give you a down payment on a new Townhouse, live in it for a year or two and then sell at a profit. Ask those who bought townhouses a couple of years ago. Many have made large profits. You can too! You will never get another opportunity like this!

Cambodian Contrasts

Victors Executed Foes in Street but Were Kind to Evacuees

BANGKOK (AP) — Foreign and forced marches of people out of the kingdom of the victorious Khmer Rouge contrasted from the other after the Communist takeover of Cambodia in the first overland convoy that reached Thailand. The others reached Thailand early today.

The refugees said there were a few hours of relief, almost status, as the Communist-led Khmer Rouge rebels swept into Phnom Penh April 17.

But this was followed abruptly by alarm in the city, the entrapment of the foreign envoys inside the French embassy with little food, foul water and uncertainty about their fate.

And finally came the three-day truck odyssey through a war-ravaged landscape to Thailand and safety.

One old widow said it was only a few hours after Phnom Penh fell that Khmer Rouge soldiers were firing warning shots into the air throughout the city.

"They gave us short notice to move out of Phnom Penh," she said. "Those who attempted to resist were executed on the spot.

A French doctor said the Khmer Rouge ordered all the city's hospital vacated, even of the very sick and dying.

Peering over the wall of the French embassy compound at night, the doctor said, he saw patients being wheeled out of the nearby Calmette Hospital. Others hobbled out with canes and some carried their more disabled fellow patients.

The city of more than two million persons was reported by the evacuees to have been littered with cooking pots, mattresses, abandoned cars and motorcycles as well as expensive cameras and electrical appliances.

"The Khmer Rouge looted everything and everybody. They didn't want was thrown away," the old widow said.

"They said we had to leave our homes because they needed houses in which to work. They warned us the Americans would also bomb the city, but this was a pretext."

One Cambodian woman with a French passport was forced to join the exodus out of Phnom Penh, carrying her eight-month-old daughter in her arms.

The columns of refugees trudged out of the city, said the woman, with no more unfolded luxuries, shoulder sacks and some of their belongings along the way.

The French Cambodian mother said she walked north to join the exodus and was left in the bushes along Highway 5, in the scene of earlier fighting in the weeks before Phnom Penh's collapse.

She said she managed to break away from the main body of evacuees about 30 miles north of the city and made her way back along trails, taking her way through guard posts.

"I told them I was a French citizen and was looking for my husband who also was French," she said. "Finally I met the man. My husband is pure Cambodian. He left home earlier when the Khmer Rouge came, but he never returned."

The Khmer Rouge allowed her to approach the French embassy with her husband and her baby was within. The embassy gate remained shut.

"I shouted to the people inside for help. They told me to climb over the fence. I passed my baby over to them. I was so scared because I was not sure I could make it."

The woman reached the embassy three days after the fall of Phnom Penh and the compound was jammed with more than 1,000 Cambodian members, 250 French-passport holders, Western diplomats and reporters, employees of various international agencies and several hundred Cambodians.

There was little food and medicine. Water had to be drawn from a stagnant pond just outside the compound. Cambodians were being harassed by the Khmer Rouge and several evacuees said.

The wife of a former Cambodian government official said the Khmer Rouge soldiers who surrounded the compound looked "tough at first," but later became nice, giving us rice, cooking pots, sugar and salt. Anything you asked for they gave you."

"We ate little. Mostly rice, some rice gruel and but meat a day," the woman said. "The Khmer Rouge soldiers also helped us to get drinking water, but it was so dirty that many people got sick on it."

She and several other Cambodian-born French nationals said they got most of their food from the Khmer Rouge. Among the Westerners subsisted on rice and had been served a \[illegible\] the embassy.

Cambodia, a former French colony, was home for a few thousand Cambodians of mixed French-Cambodian and French-Vietnamese ancestry, most of whom carried French passports.

The evacuation of the foreigners began on the morning of April 24, with a long loading a 25-truck army truck convoy over rough backwoods trails. On the first day the convoy covered only 35 miles.

The evacuees—numbering 120 by the time they reached Thailand—were driven in rooftop trucks under a scorching sun or in open trucks.

The first night was spent in a village near the old royal capital of Oudong. The second night the caravan rested in the deserted provincial seat of Kompong Chhnang. From there the convoy rolled onto Highway 5 to the Thai-Cambodian border.

They passed through deserted villages and towns. Kompong Chhnang's civilian population had apparently been evacuated and most of the houses were charred "ashes of ashes, dust of dust," the evacuees said.

Cambodia's second largest city, Battambang, which the convoy passed through at night, was supposedly deserted by its 20,000 residents.

At 10 a.m. on April 30, the first group crossed the small bridge on Highway 4 which separates Thailand and Cambodia.

Most of the evacuees looked ill after two weeks battle Phnom Penh and 200 hard miles on the road. But one old woman and the eight-month-old child of the Frenchwoman died along the way.

Police Shows on TV Los Angeles Headache

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The letters come from housewives concerned about crime in the country, and always with the same gripe.

How can the Los Angeles Police Department (LAPD) allow those television folks to get away with such liberties in portraying policemen?

The LAPD gets asked become small fry the police are filmed on its turf and because the department lend its facilities to the company of them—Adam-12, Police Story, Police Woman, Get Christie Love and Columbo.

Usually and emphatically that is what most policemen worry about when they watch their profession depicted on the small screen. They are the small fry.

Richard Hickock, the technical advisor on S.W.A.T., is a former member of LAPD's special weapons and tactical squad. And Hickock is the first to admit the series is far from perfect technically.

"Police officers should realize it's all make-believe Hollywood and for entertainment only," said Hickock.

"We're not making this show for police officers. In one way it is going to be technically correct, because if they did it technically correct down the line, they'd have about five minutes before they exhausted the game.

By far the most realistic police show is Police Story, the only series that steers clear of the "supercop, happy ending" syndrome, presenting instead a few-key portrait of the job's daily frustrations.

Police Story producers listen to their technical advisor—who is a different officer each week, recruited from the LAPD on his own time or an expert in whatever field is being explored.

If a director refuses to heed the advice of the officer, the adviser need only call the producer's office for support. He usually will win.

Jack Webb, whose Mark VII productions produces Adam-12, has no desire to share the unappealing side of police work.

He said law enforcement needs a public relations boost on television. That's why Adam-12, like Webb's Dragnet before it, is filmed with full co-operation from LAPD.

The department gives Webb and his associates all the technical and story help they need and, in return, the department has full script control.

"We are censors on this show," Cooke acknowledged. "We can change character situations as well as technical points."

Adam-12 consequently is always seen from the police point of view. The officers nearly always are even in the best possible light, acting with the best of intentions and dramatic licence but regrets the effect it can have. He is commanding officer of LAPD's metropolitan division, of which the department's special weapons and tactical squad (SWAT) is a part.

After seeing the first episode of Spelling's S.W.A.T., the officer said:

"I was not very happy with what I saw. I feel it will tend to create a false image. This organization is going to suffer.

"We try to do everything by the law. On that program there were no constraints whatever. People are going to relate that program to us."

Richard Hickock, the technical adviser on S.W.A.T., is a former member of LAPD's special weapons and tactical squad. And Hickock is the first to admit the series is far from perfect technically.

"Police officers should realize it's all make-believe Hollywood and for entertainment only," said Hickock.

"We're not making this show for police officers. In one way it is going to be technically correct, because if they did it technically correct down the line, they'd have about five minutes before they exhausted the game."

By far the most realistic police show is Police Story, the only series that steers clear of the "supercop, happy ending" syndrome, presenting instead a few-key portrait of the job's daily frustrations.

Police Story producers listen to their technical adviser—who is a different officer each week, recruited from the LAPD on his own time or an expert in whatever field is being explored.

If a director refuses to heed the advice of the officer, the adviser need only call the producer's office for support. He usually will win.

Jack Webb, whose Mark VII productions produces Adam-12, has no desire to share the unappealing side of police work.

He said law enforcement needs a public relations boost on television. That's why Adam-12, like Webb's Dragnet before it, is filmed with full co-operation from LAPD.

The department gives Webb and his associates all the technical and story help they need and, in return, the department has full script control.

"We are censors on this show," Cooke acknowledged. "We can change character situations as well as technical points."

Adam-12 consequently is always seen from the police point of view. The officers nearly always are even in the best possible light, acting with the best of intentions and by the book.

Does Cooke find Adam-12 more truthful than Police Story?

"The way it happens is somewhere in between, really," he said. "Those things happen in both shows but the norm is more often in between.

"It's good to show the good sides and even the bad sides. We want the public to become aware of what the police department is—or should be—and that's always healthy.

"All we want is to try to direct these television people so that people don't get a warped view of what the police do."

Tommy Mason Makes a Comeback

Tommy Mason got his first piano from an order home and jokes that he learned to play by the instructions that came in the packing crate. In 1938 he put his musical skills to work by forming the Commodores. Wednesday night, he returned to the Commodores bandstand in Quinte Secondary School for the first time since he left his piano stool in 1975. Blowing Dixie with the band founder is present-day leader Jim Cathcart on saxaphone, Dutch Turner on clarinet and current leader Jack Mosely. Mr. Turner was member of the band in 1939 playing banjo.

Commodores Reunited with Leader

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

In 1938, Tommy Mason took an idea and turned it into the Commodores — a five-man dance band that in his words was louder than it was good.

Now 47 years later, Mr. Mason is reuniting a gift shop in the recreation community of Buckhorn north of Peterborough but the band is still drawing nods and aha from audiences eager to re-living the sound of the big band era.

The Commodores played at Quinte Secondary School Wednesday night as the final act of a school music presentation.

But the show stopper of the evening came when Tommy Mason made a surprise entrance onto the stage to work with the band he left in 1935.

"Back then, when we first started, no one knew how to read music," said Mr. Mason, following the performance. "The important thing was to be able to play loud and long."

Larry Brown, a saxaphonist and one of the oldest members of the remaining band, remembers playing Old Home Week in Trenton around 1930 when the band started at sunset and played its last tune at sunrise.

"I can remember driving back from Marmora in the snow with a candle on the dash board to melt the ice from the window," said Mr. Mason. "These were the days when band members got $3 a night and the leader got $5."

It was the enterprise of the band that gave Belleville the first Jitney Dance Pavilion, located at the fairgrounds.

"You could come in for free but it cost 10 cents to dance to three tunes," said Mr. Mason. "We'de play three or four nights a week."

The band numbers 14 now and still works busily in the Quinte area. Perhaps more on the go are two or three smaller combos, composed of Commodore bandmen.

"Oh the music sounds about the same but I think it might have been better when we didn't have the sheet music and we spent more time talking to th audiences to get them happy," said Mr. Mason.

Concentrating on the stated presentation barrier in the evening, he said, "usually speaking a parent coming to a thing like this expects to hear kids play out of tune — kids who are just learning to play."

"I thought tonight was incredible. I didn't hear one kid play flat or lose his beat," said Mr. Mason, "It was just incredible."

Original Angry Young Man Can't Match Early Success

LONDON, (Reuter)—A season of John Osborne plays at the Greenwich Theatre outside London has left a question mark on the chart of the 45-year-old playwright's career.

It is nearly 20 years since Look Back in Anger, hailed as the voice of rebellious youth, earned him the now-hackneyed label of the original angry young man.

Osborne kept his reputation of leading post-war British playwright, through the ups and down of critical approbation, while capturing headlines with his love-hate relationship with England and outbursts of scathing contempt for the critics.

For some time there has been a feeling in the critical world that Osborne has not produced a major work since Inadmissible Evidence, the 1968 play in which Nicol Williamson scored a hit as a middle-aged solicitor whose professional and private life are on the point of disintegrating.

The two new plays at Greenwich do nothing to alter this opinion, especially as the season opened with a revival of a major Osborne success of 1957, The Entertainer. Comedian Max Wall ably played the part that was memorably created by Sir Laurence Olivier.

The first of the two new plays, The End Of Me Old Cigar—the name of an old music-hall song—perhaps was suggested by past public scandals.

The scene is a grand country house run by a self-made tilted lady as a brothel for VIPs. The purpose is not profit but the overthrow of male supremacy with the help hidden microphones and cameras working for women's lib.

Their weapon is an array of hidden microphones and cameras recording their amorous encounters. The public relevation of these will pave the way for the girls by discrediting men in high places.

The first act consists mostly of a verbose briefing of the women by the mistress of the house. This allows the author to hit at some favorite targets with witty diatribes.

The pairing off with clients, who include a member of Parliament, a press mogul and a pop star, follows. But after this buildup, the bubble is pricked by the disappearance of all the incriminating evidence.

In between, the play switches to a bedroom scene showing one of the girls betraying the cause by falling in love with her partner.

Most of Act Two is a protracted love duet which gives is scabrousness and sentimentality.

No amount of good acting could turn The End of Me Old Cigar into anything but a self-indulgent exercise of dubious taste.

The second new play, an adaptation of The Picture of Dorian Gray, at least has the strong melodramatic plot of Oscar Wilde's tale of the Adonis who sold his soul to the devil to keep his youth and beauty.

Whatver chords Wilde's novel may have struck in Osborne's mind, the outcome is merely a workmanlike dramatization which came up against the stumbling block of the casting of Dorian. Though pleasant looking and competent, young Michael Kitchen could hardly suggest the fatal fascination of the character.

Even if allowances are made for the shortcomings of the Greenwich production, the play comes across as little better than an academic exercise.

Further critical judgment of Osborne's evolution must wait until the autumn when a new play, Watch It Come Down, will be premiered by the National Theatre Company at the Old Vic Theatre.

Preventing Disease

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Maple trees must be kept well fed with fertilizer and free from cuts or wounds or they may fall victim to maple wilt, says Ross Wood, horticulture co-ordinator for the Niagara Parks Commission. He said that maple wilt which is becoming more common in Ontario, is relatively weak compared with Dutch elm disease which has decimated the elm population in Ontario.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL
For Friday, May 9

ARIES (March 21-April 20) Late in the afternoon something of material value will come your way unexpectedly. It will put you in a good frame of mind.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You have seen direct control of your affairs slipping out of your hands. Don't be selfish, but keep your feelings to yourself.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Test your patience if you have not done so yet. It will very advantageously indeed. Your self-esteem improves in your dealings.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You will beautifully meet the needs of another first today. The person you help will not forget your sacrifice.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're coming into a brief, but very productive, achieving cycle. Concentrate on top-priority projects.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Issues you are expressing have won the respect of your contemporaries. This may not be apparent for a while.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You now stand to be revealed for by-bors of the past few days. If there is money due, it should be coming in.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 22) Today and tomorrow your greatest gains come through associates. Your ideas are recognized. Do your best as a team player.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're now up to handling tasks too tough for you a short time ago. Clean up those necessary jobs while you're in the mood.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 20) Something extra may turn up unexpectedly later in the day. Do labor, it will turn out to be fun.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you have a free evening, it's an excellent time to take care of a social obligation of long standing. Suggest a friendly gathering.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) A relative whose motives are obscure may offer you a small gift today. Accept it graciously. She has hidden delights.

To Your Good Health

Adrenal Function Easily Corrected

By G. C. THOMPSON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteer: at Can you please explain the term "low adrenal function?" Can it be detected by some test? Can it be controlled or improved with medication?—Mrs. E. S. A.

Yes to both questions.

It is also called Addison's disease (after Dr. Thomas Addison, the English physician who described it in 1849)—the adrenal gland is not producing sufficient hormones for the body's needs, as in maintaining proper blood pressure.

Before the discovery of cortisone drugs the disease was almost always fatal. Today, with available drugs, even severe cases need not handicap victims. Diagnosis is rather easy, both by chemical tests and classic symptoms—a brownish pigmentation of the skin and extreme fatigue. In blood tests, the level of the sodium level is found to be low and the potassium level high.

Treatment is by hydrocortisone, which helps replace the hormones not produced in sufficient quantity by the gland. Salt intake is increased also. Such therapy is continued for life.

Dear Dr. Thosteer: My husband has severe cramps in his feet and calves, especially during the length of the night hours. These come on both in the daytime and at night when he is relaxing or sleeping.

He is 51, not overweight, but he does work eight to 10 hours at a time on his feet. I have been told there is a vitamin that can be taken, but I don't recall, or which one, or offer any suggestions?—Mrs. J. E.

Dear Doctor: What can I do for the foot and leg cramps I have from time to time? I have heard that vitamin E is useful, but I cannot say it has helped me. I get the cramps usually at night.—Mrs. G. F. S.

However, my homeopathic friend has become vocal. The burning and the pain can bleeding (which is painful) and the continued misery, I would suggest that you consider that you have reached that point.

You can cure the chronicled with cistemaqua or a hot sitz bath. Both homeopaths are not curative. Some kind of surgical procedure will be necessary to remove the distended veins which constitute the hemorrhoids.

You certainly wouldn't want anything to be done without your sacrifice your health and wealth now by being forced to spend your money on unskilled surgeons. And you need not.

PC Wants Cuban Aid Explained

OTTAWA (CP) — A Conservative MP called Wednesday for an independent inquiry into federal assistance to Cuba.

Don McRae (Winnipeg-Souris) asked a special inquiry in the Commons after an Ottawa newspaper reported Canadian International Development Agency agreed to lend $11 million in aid to Cuba "to avoid direct aid" after government departments.

Mr. McRae said CIDA President Paul Gerin-Lajoie told a Commons committee last week that aid to Cuba totals $10 million, not and about $11 million in grants.

The Ottawa Journal, in a copyright story, says that the president's committee of CIDA decided in December to hide some of the assistance to Cuba which, the newspaper says, apparently was still going.

The newspaper published what it described as a memo from the president's committee in which the decision to hide some of the funds was apparently made.

Mr. McKenzie said the Journal report "leaves in no way the developmental agency should deliver $11 million to Cuba and publicly state it is only $11 million."

Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp said that if Mr. McKenzie or any party wants to question External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen or Finance Minister John Turner on a day in question, questions "then his curiosity could be satisfied."

Municipalities Do Not Want Small Inexpensive Houses

EDMONTON (CP) — One reason there are few inexpensive houses being built for buyers with moderate incomes is that municipalities don't want them, says the president of a prominent Edmonton real estate firm.

Garry Gaetz, president of Midtown Real Estate, also blamed, with contractors in the country, of which Midtown is a part, for a lack of building materials and homes but municipal restrictions militate against them.

"There are many difficulties in providing a lower cost house," said the Winnipeg-born Mr. Holmes, 41, who trained as a chartered accountant and was vice-president to the late Stanley Mathen, who "did" was of the firm's founder.

"There's the increase that you've had in the cost of land, the cost of services and the cost of materials, as well as the increase in standards that the municipalities are insisting upon.

"In other words most of them don't want small houses.

"I think they (people in the industry) have given up hope because it's a market they would like to be into . . . but We are difficult. The government is encouraging home ownership but the municipalities are not staying that with the basic tax structure under which they operate, they can't afford to have those lower-cost houses. They need a larger tax base."

Buyer references were another problem.

"If you have a lot that has to be in fast there is a cost attached to that and you can't build a 800-square-foot house on that lot. The ratios get all out of line. I think people are prohibited going in here to lower their standards a little. They're not going to be able to afford a 1,200-square-foot house to start."

Mr. Holmes said he was made president because of his over-all experience in the company, although he has never been a salesman. He admits that, as a chartered accountant, he had to learn how to manage people by experience. He joined Mathen in 1960.

Mr. Holmes said real estate is business everybody is interested in.

"You can't go anywhere without people wanting to talk about it, whether they just own their own home or whether they're investors. It's proven to be a good hedge against inflation and, here again, people are interested.

"It's a business that combines the requirement of having good people with being highly capital intensive so you have the best of both worlds.

"And it's a business where you haven't a lot of small dealings. Each transaction can be fairly major. We haven't a lot of investment in time in an inventory of a number of small items we have to be bothered with."

Housing prices in Eastern Canada appear to be recovering and a five-per-cent decline in prices in Alberta from a peak last spring has been recovered and the trend is back up, he said.

"It's not a buyers' market in Alberta."

The biggest danger, he said, is narrowing the market down to the point where it's too small and prices have to level while people catch up.

"The old 10-per-cent cut-off point for mortgage money, at which buyers begin to hesitate, has gone up to around 12 per cent and a lot of people are looking at home buying on a cash-flow basis.

"They feel that if they can afford to make the monthly payment then the interest rate really isn't as important as being able to get into a home and start to acquire the equity."

As a diversified company, Melton is subject to increasing government regulation, with land developments taking two years to get approval, stiffer educational qualifications being imposed on salesmen and rent control always in the offing, but Mr. Holmes said there is a place for government entry into the industry.

"The attitude of a lot of politicians is that they are going to be involved in housing. They're taking it more as a basic need. Going in and assisting people in the industry by providing the financing would seem to me the most effective and efficient way for them to become involved.

"With that there comes some controls. They're going to want to have a say in how those funds are directed. They're going to want to see them directed to the building of lower cost houses but that's not an inhibiting factor."

Businessmen Appear Inarticulate

VANCOUVER (CP) — Businessmen are unpopular because they are not telling their story to the public, says Frank Reinder of Trail, B.C., past president of the British Columbia Chamber of Commerce.

"To make matters worse, businessmen as a group seem to be singularly inarticulate," he told a meeting of the Vancouver branch of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy.

"Not getting their story to the public inevitably results in votes being cast in favor of any political party ready to act to a positive way towards business, and this places the whole problem in a political context."

Mr. Reinder said that increasing emphasis by business on the public's need to know is essential to the survival of an economic system incorporating the principles of free enterprise to any significant extent.

He said the complex process of financial reporting is not geared to present an understandable picture of the effects of inflation on price indexes and industrial costs.

Labrador Eskimos Organized

OTTAWA (CP) — Bill Edmunds represents the 1,800 Eskimos of the northern Labrador coast. President of the Labrador Inuit Association, he is learning the bureaucratic techniques he needs in the age of negotiation.

He said his first meeting with a federal-provincial committee was unsuccessful.

"It was a gamehorse. Everything was prepared before I got to the meeting and all I had wanted from me was a yes or no. It would have taken three or four days to look through the budget items, and I could do but agree. I'll have better next time, though."

He mentioned this difficulty during a recent Ottawa meeting with Northern Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan, who promised to try to improve the situation.

Mr. Edmunds was a heavy-equipment operator before he was elected to the presidency of his association. Now 41, he remembers travelling north by dog-team from Hopedale to Goose Bay at the age of 17 to look for work.

He recalls that the 200-mile trip, back in days, half of it spent riding out bad weather. He worked for seven months at a labour and then got hired as operator heavy equipment.

Ottawa's annual contribution to Labrador Eskimos was recently increased to 4.5 million from 1.5 million. Mr. Edmunds can think of a number of things to do with the increased funds.

He said housing on the northern Labrador coast is poor with about 25 young couples in-laws forced to share housing. The Newfoundland government was putting in some housing, but not enough to catch up.

He is also concerned with the medical situation in the area, saying there is no regular doctor on the coast and medical visits are infrequent. Seriously ill patients must be evacuated by air and wait for a plane on grounds the flights.

Poor communications compounded the medical situation, delaying expert advice to the communities.

In a meeting with telephone company officials, Mr. Edmunds complained that poor reception made it necessary to repeat messages on the radio-telephone and connect were bad if by chance of the call.

Mr. Edmunds traced the beginning of the Labrador Inuit Association to the origins of 1971, when Charlie Watt, president of the Northern Quebec Inuit Association, came to Hopedale to address a meeting.

That meeting convinced the Eskimos that an organization would improve their lives. A founding convention was held in October, 1971, and Mr. Edmunds became the group's second president in June, 1974.

Glass Sprayed On PEI Auto Adds to Safety

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — People would follow cars for miles wondering what it was, he said. You could see one coming for half a mile."

Mr. Thal, in the words of Neil Harphem of Mills Cross, P.E.I., was the initial reaction of motorists in his province to the sight of a car on the highway that had been overspraying with millions of tiny glass beads, reflecting like a road sign.

"They've used to it now," said Mr. Harphem—as used to it, in fact, that he has been having trouble keeping up with demands to treat other vehicles the same way.

School boards in the province have expressed interest in getting school buses treated with the beads and the provincial highways department is considering it for some of its vehicles and equipment.

Mr. Harphem said he has approached the New Brunswick government and it also is interested in the idea.

A 20-year-old high school dropout, originally from Edmonton, Mr. Harphem said he gave up painting landscapes and animals and became a car painter. The idea of coating vehicles with the glass beads came in a flash while he was sticking across Prince Edward Island.

He said a highways department co-worker dropped a drum of what looked like powder and he began to investigate. He felt the material, which has the consistency of fine sugar, and got the idea for covering a car with it.

He used a friend's shop to paint a truck and spray it with the glass balls, obtained from a milwaukee, Wis., manufacturer who supplies it to government for use on highway markings and road signs.

The balls give the signs a reflective quality without glare in the daytime but easier to see at night.

Later, Mr. Harphem applied the glass balls to two other vehicles he owned using 20 to 25 pounds of material on each. There are three grades of material, ranging in price from five cents to 15 a pound.

When he treats cars for other people, he charges $50 to $75, which includes labor and materials.

Mr. Harphem, who has patented his idea, paid a dollar-a-seller can treat a car for $10 plus material costs.

OSSTF Bills Two Teacher Groups

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The London district of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation has sent invoices to two elementary teacher associations for $1,759 each for services rendered in negotiations.

The high school teachers reached a salary agreement with the London board of education last March 7 after five months of negotiations and 48 hours of mediation.

The board granted its elementary teachers wages parity with the high school teachers April 14 even though they voted last December to accept a settlement lower than the average 25-per-cent increase won by the high school teachers.

Michael Mitchell, district president of the secondary school teachers, said the London Women Teachers' Association and London branch of the Ontario Public School Men Teachers' Federation each have been billed for one-third of the cost of negotiations borne by the federation.

Here Are Stories Told in Right Words

By PAT USHER
The Canadian Press

The test of a good story is whether it is true to life. Ernest Buckler meets that test in The Rebellion of Young David and Other Stories. Each of the 14 tales is about people in their relations with other people.

Each individual behaves as you would expect him or her to behave. Each incident strikes the reader as exactly right. And each is told in lean but absorbing style and with vivid imagery.

One story is about an author whose first book has just been acclaimed by the critics. He ponders the difficulty of getting his ideas onto paper "because there were a million ways to tell every one of them, and only one way for each of them was right."

Let it be said of Buckler that in these stories he has found the right way. It is as if none of them could be told in any other words. Buckler is 68 and has been writing since 1936. He is the author of four books, three of them novels, magazine articles, short stories and radio plays. He was born in Dalhousie West, N.S., was educated at Dalhousie University and University of Toronto and lives and works on the family farm near Annapolis Royal, N.S.

The Rebellion of Young David and Other Stories, by Ernest Buckler; 138 pages; $1.95; McClelland and Stewart.

Viking raids and feasts are the dominating themes in Egils Saga, translated and edited by Christine Fell. It is the story of a Viking warrior of the 10th century who fought and caroused in Norway and Iceland with forays around the Baltic and a period of service in King Athelstan of England.

Egil is a cruel and mean character with ugly features. But he is also a poet whose verses commemorate some of the major incidents in his life. The translator says in an introduction it is difficult to tell whether Egils Saga is fact, fiction or a mixture of both. Although the material belongs to the 10th century, it was not written in its present form until the 13th century. Similarly it is not known whether it is the work of a single author or a number of authors or whether it was originally a matter of oral tradition.

Whatever its origin, the saga is an engrossing tale about figures depicted on a heroic scale and involved frequently in impressive feats of arms. It is translated and edited by Christine Fell of the department of English at University of Nottingham. The poems are translated by John Lucas, also of University of Nottingham.

Egils Saga, translated and edited by Christine Fell; 221 pages; $12.50; University of Toronto Press.

Computer Used To Read Meters

TORONTO (CP) — Bell Canada is using an experimental unitless-size computer to read a 500 gas, water and hydro gauges in a section of North York.

Since last November, Bell has been experimenting with telephone lines hooked up to a small box in the residential basements in an attempt to find out if job usually done by a meter reader is ready for automation.

Sometime between 3 a.m. and 6 a.m. in the morning, the Bell computer dials through the telephone lines to the small boxes and receives a reading that it describes as accurate.

Unions Forecast

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — All university faculty associations in Ontario likely will become unions in a year unless the provincial government gives universities more money, the chairman of the Ontario Council of University Faculty associations (OCUFA) said Wednesday.

"The reasons for unionizing are mostly financial," Prof. Norma Sweet, chairman, said in an interview. "Unionization will give us more clout in getting money from the province because we could withdraw our services province-wide."

Firm Charged

TORONTO (CP) — Hoover Co. Ltd. of Burlington, Ont., was charged Wednesday with 16 counts under the federal Combines Investigation Act, a federal prosecutor said.

Patrick Duffy said in Toronto that the appliance manufacturing firm was charged after a three-year investigation by the federal corporate and consumer affairs department. The company is to appear in Hamilton court May 29 to face the re-sale price maintenance charges.

Floy Seen

WELLAND, Ont. (CP) — A campaign against permissiveness being waged by Premier William Davis and his government is nothing but a political ploy, Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said Wednesday.

He told the Welland South Liberal Association that the government could do much to restore confidence among Ontario residents but instead of taking positive action, it is backing the forces of permissiveness and law and order.

Gillespie Replied

OTTAWA (CP) — Industry Minister Alastair Gillespie said Wednesday the government "will do its utmost" to ensure that equipment sold off by Microsystems International Ltd. stays in Canada.

However, he told Max Saltsman (NDP—Waterloo Cambridge) in the Commons that if the company repays money it owes the federal government "it would have the right to dispose of the equipment as it sees fit."

Refugees Arrive

MONTREAL (CP) — A Canadian Forces 707 plane with 133 Vietnamese refugees, the first of some 3,000 to be admitted into Canada, arrived in Montreal at 8:15 EDT this morning from Honolulu.

The refugees, many smiling, some crying, and including a number of small children, were whisked to buses provided by the department of immigration, which were to take them to downtown Montreal for custom and immigration proceeding as well as medical checkups.

Can't Buy Homes

NEW YORK (AP) — A prominent American b a'ker says the average family no longer can afford to buy the average single-family house.

"We've been pushing the limit for years, but recent events have pushed housing costs over the edge relative to the average man's ability to buy," said J. Roz Dawe, president-elect of the American Bankers Association.

Trudeau Home

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau arrived here Wednesday after 14 days during which time he visited four countries and participated in the Commonwealth heads of government conference.

Bookings Slow

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says that because of an economic slowdown in Canada, some Canadian and foreign airlines are uncertain whether they will be able to fill seats offered this year for advance booking" charters from Canada to overseas destinations.

Airline spokesmen are optimistic they can fill most of charter flights but some major advance bookings are beginning to slow, the newspaper says.

Trent University Hunts for Bodies

TORONTO (CP) — The associate registrar of Trent University in Peterborough, Ont., said Wednesday that Ontario universities are so concerned about getting students that admission programs have become hunts for persons without regard for academic standards.

"I go out in my safari van full of posters and brochures and I expect to come back with cargo, or at least the promise of cargo," Gordon Pollock said at a conference of university admission officers and high school counsellors at York University.

Admission programs are intended to get persons who can be counted when the province gives universities money for each person enrolled, Mr. Pollock said.

Lakehead Grain Cars Plundered

THUNDER BAY (CP) — The theft of wheat, oats and barley is turning into a lucrative sideline for some area residents, officials of Canada's two national railways said Thursday.

John Ashley, railway police inspector, said there have been instances of people—sometimes groups with trucks—punching holes in the interior paper walls of grain cars and sneaking off with sizable amounts of grain.

The railways have been aware of minor thefts from unloaded boxcars for years "but we are concerned because thieves now are starting to punch holes in sealer walls."

Mr. McKay said that after a hole has been punched in the sealer and taken six or a dozen bags of grain, the spill continues.

"It is an unusual thing where you get a hole punched in the wall you can lose 15,000 pounds of grain."

The Weather

Synopsis: Little change in the weather pattern can be expected over Ontario for the next 24 to 36 hours, except over the northwestern regions of the province. This means a continuation of the sunny and warm weather today and Saturday in most areas.

No More VE Days For France

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing announced Thursday that France will never again celebrate the anniversary of VE-Day, the 1945 Allied victory in Europe, and hopes to replace it with an annual celebration marking European unity.

The president made the announcement after attending ceremonies to mark the 30th anniversary of VE-Day on May 8, 1945, when Nazi Germany surrendered unconditionally to Allied forces.

The Allied victory was recalled with celebrations in most of Europe, especially in the Soviet bloc countries. West Germany reaffirmed its policy of peace and renunciation of the use of force.

In a letter to the nine-nation European Council, Giscard d'Estaing said: "... It is our common aspiration that it should be the last of the wars which in vain long drenched the soil of our continent with blood. ...To show our determination to organize our peaceful future together, I and the French government have decided never again to commemorate this anniversary which thus will be the 30th and the last."

To replace VE-Day, the president said, the countries of Europe should jointly choose a date "which will mark in all our countries the foundation of

Fee Increase Urged

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Dr. Bette Stephenson, president of the 27,800 member Canadian Medical Association, Thursday urged doctors to seek a "sizeable increase" in 1976 fees. She told a meeting of the Ontario Medical Association that fee increases are "warranted and needed."

University Tests Urged

TORONTO (CP) — A new testing program for admitting high school graduates to university was urged Thursday by two Ontario university presidents. B. C. Matthews, president of the University of Waterloo, suggested that Grade 13 applicants be required to take mathematics and English tests and "reach a certain standard."

Politics Seen

ST. JACOBS, Ont. (CP) — Provincial Agriculture Minister William Stewart labelled the federal government's delay in providing money to Ontario farmers for improvements in housing for seasonal workers as a political move to embarrass the Ontario government in a possible election year. "I suppose its just the feds trying to play smart with us," he said in an interview in this community near Kitchener.

Union Curbs Introduced

Quebec Ignores Labor's Protests

QUEBEC (CP) — Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer introduced legislation today putting four of the province's construction unions back under Quebec government trusteeship.

The government also introduced legislation prohibiting persons with criminal records from holding union positions for a period of five years from the date of conviction.

The legislation would make it illegal for anyone to encourage or support a strike or work slowdown while a labor contract is in force. It would be up to the individual to prove that he had nothing to do with an illegal act.

Employees convicted of bribing union officials would be subject to fines from $500 to $10,000. Union members convicted of accepting or trying to receive such bribes from employers would be subject to similar fines.

More than 400 workers rallied in front of the Quebec national assembly building today protesting the legislation.

Most of the demonstrators were members of construction unions affiliated with the Quebec Federation of Labor (QFL), one of whose unions faced trusteeship.

But an estimated 150 were longshoremen, whose strike has paralyzed Quebec's major ports despite federal legislation designed to end it.

Both Louis Laberge, QFL president, and Fernand Daoust, QFL secretary-general, crossed iron old barricades set up outside the legislature and told the demonstrators they would try to meet Premier Robert Bourassa and Cournoyer to withdraw the legislation.

The two union leaders, however, succeeded in meeting Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer in his national assembly office. But Mr. Cournoyer almost immediately proceeded to introduce the bills they had come to protest.

About 20 police officers had an eye on the crowd, but there were no incidents as the workers gathered, coming by bus from Montreal and other points in the province.

Mr. Laberge and Mr. Daoust told the gathering they would demand that their grievances be heard by a committee of the legislature.

The demonstration marked another step in the growing clash between Quebec labor and the government over proposals to curb union abuses put forward in the Cliche commission report tabled earlier this week by Premier Bourassa.

Mr. Bourassa has said the bill "has absolutely no intention of giving in to blackmail" by some of the unions.

The fiery Mr. Laberge promised, on the other hand, to meet the QFL will "fight like dogs" against the trusteeship over its construction affiliates.

He has said such government action would trample on workers' rights and "emasculate" the unions.

Police Strike In Montreal Is Prevented

MONTREAL (CP) — A tentative agreement preventing a Montreal Urban Community police strike was reached Thursday between the city and the police brotherhood.

Both the public security council and the 3,307-member brotherhood said they were confident the proposed twelve-month pension plan terms would bring to an end 40 months of negotiations, which began when suburban and Montreal police department-wide contracts were partially integrated in 1971.

Price Index Rise Small But Sharp Increase Ahead

OTTAWA (CP) — The consumer price index was up a modest five-tenths of one per cent in April, the fourth straight month of relatively low monthly increases, Statistics Canada said today.

The report is based on a survey done a month ago and Beryl Plumptre, chairman of the Food Prices Review Board, said today she is more concerned about what has happened since.

"The real story is in meats," she said. Wholesale beef prices have gone from 27 cents a pound to about 52 and there has been an increase in pork prices.

This means a sharp increase is expected in the food price index when May figures are announced, she said. The May survey was being done this week and results are due out in early June.

A cut in the Ontario sales tax—to five per cent from seven—was part of the reason price rises were moderate in April, Statistics Canada said. Clothing and shoe costs accounted for about 40 per cent of the April rise, the index said. In April, the Toronto Transit Commission increased its subway fares to three rides for $1 from four.

Food accounted for about one-third of the April increase and increases in government services accounted for about a major factor. Statistics Canada said higher dairy prices caused most of the increase in the food price index. Higher prices for bread, buns, cereals and bakery products were partly offset by lower beef and sugar prices.

Clothing prices dropped on average by more than one per cent in April while costs for shoes were up by three-tenths of one per cent.

Turner Prepares For Labor Talks

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner prepared Thursday for renewed talks with labor leaders, saying time is running out for agreement on a voluntary wage and price restraint program.

It refused to say whether the government will use mandatory controls in the absence of a voluntary restraint agreement. But he said he wants a consensus before his new budget, expected by early June.

"Time is running out," he told reporters. "Our position is continuing to erode and we need a national response soon."

The new talks with labor, scheduled next week, were called after the Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) issued a series of tough conditions Wednesday as its price for co-operating with the government.

The CLC demanded a fairer system of income distribution and measures to hold down rents, interest rates, dividends and land speculation.

Mr. Turner, who released details Thursday of initial federal restraint proposals, said some CLC demands fall outside federal jurisdiction. He said he decided that Ottawa will offer a "fair share" of concessions when it meets again with labor officials.

Mr. Turner said Thursday the government committee will accept unless wage settlements and production costs are brought into line with those of other countries. Production costs have been rising twice as fast in Canada as in the United States, he said.

Mr. Turner also plans another round of talks next week with business representatives.

Postmen Won't Accept Curbs

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Union of Postal Workers will not accept wage restraints on matter what the Canadian Labor Congress agrees to, Joseph Davidson, CUPW president, says.

Olympic Work At Standstill

MONTREAL (CP) — Construction on work sites for the 1976 Olympics was at a standstill today as 400 construction workers affiliated with the Quebec Federation of Labor (QFL) arrived in Quebec City by bus to demonstrate before the Quebec national assembly.

The construction workers, who walked off the job Thursday, are protesting against recommendations of the Cliche commission report, which includes a proposal that four Montreal unions affiliated with the QFL be put under government trusteeship.

Confiscators in charge of construction at the Olympic site, Desourdy-Duranceau, said in a brief statement the events of Thursday forced closure of the Olympic site today.

QFL president Louis Laberge said "they may be holding the 1976 Games in 1977" if the workers' protest for recommendations of the report was aggravated.

He told a news conference after a walkout Thursday by more than 1,000 men behind most major construction sites in Montreal that the Cliche report was a "threat" to workers, and if implemented through legislation, could lead to a "takeover" of the Quebec labor movement.

Jeremiah Quinlan, Quebec minister of justice, warned he may order Quebec Provincial Police into Montreal if there is violence, and said he has instructed police "not to be intimidated by anyone."

Earlier this week, Premier Robert Bourassa said the government is "ready to declare war against the unions, if necessary" to rectify labor strife in the province.

But Mr. Bourassa promised Thursday to force striking construction unions into submission and said a bill to impose a trusteeship on four Montreal unions locals, as recommended in the Cliche report, will be tabled today in the national assembly.

1927 BGH Grad Retires

They Built Hospital Around Win Donaldson

By SHARON AIKHART
Staff Reporter

More than 100 persons gathered Thursday night to honor Winnifred Donaldson, head nurse of the post-partum maternity ward at Belleville General Hospital.

Mrs. Donaldson, who retired Thursday on her 65th birthday, began nurses' training at Belleville Hospital in 1927.

"One of the housekeepers said to me the other day, that she guessed I'd seen a lot of changes in 48 years," Mrs. Donaldson told the nurses, doctors and friends who attended the dinner at Education Hall. "In fact, she said, they built the hospital around me."

After completing training in 1930, she worked in Toronto as a children's nanny and private duty nurse.

"In those days, only student nurses worked in the hospitals and with the Depression, you just didn't go out and find a job.

"If someone wanted a registered nurse you went out in full regalia. But if they wanted a practical nurse, you left your pin and cap at home and went and cooked and cleaned and nursed, too.

"I hope we don't see days quite like that again; but I don't think it did me any harm either."

At the party, which was organized by the maternity ward, master of ceremonies Jr. J. R. Birchard said her co-workers were "overjoyed to be able to pay tribute to Mrs. Donaldson at the time of her retirement but nostalgic at the loss of a colorful and delightful staff member."

Dr. Bruce Cronk told the group that in the early days of the hospital "we had one instrument that cured patients if they were curable and contracted that if they died" and the "15 or 20 real nurses" who ran the hospital, among them Mrs. Donaldson.

Hospital administrator Phillip Richard, director of nursing Carrie Marshall and obstetrics-gynecology unit co-ordinator Dorothy Taylor also spoke and a presentation of gifts, including a "memory" book of photographs and documents, was made by Dr. Robert Allen.

WELLINGTON — A $1,183 grant has been made to Wellington Village by the Trenton 25 per cent of the cost for installation of lights for a baseball diamond and grading and constructing a second diamond at Wellington Athletic Field.

The announcement was made Thursday by James Taylor, M.L.A. Prince Edward — Lennox.

Mr. Taylor also advised that tenders will be advertised for the supply and delivery of trees and shrubs for grounds improvement at Prince Edward Heights, Picton. The work will be completed by June 10.

Old Church Made Centre for Elderly

FRENCHMAN BUTTE, Sask. (CP) —As people get on in by years, they like a little company and a group of pensioners in this farming community 135 miles northwest of Prince Albert have put in several months of hard work this winter to fill that need.

Vera Jarvis, who says she would be angry if anyone asked her age but admits to being about three-quarters of a century old and also be made available to other community groups as a meeting place.

"You can't miss it," she said in a telephone interview.

"It's right as you come down the hill into town. It's the first thing you see."

The 22-year-old Roman Catholic church, about the size of a small bungalow with a steeple, was never fully finished by its small congregation and fell into disuse because there weren't enough people to support it, she said.

It was sold to a group of Anglican church women.

The church tended to be cold and drafty until about 10 people met last down partitioning, lowered the ceiling, installed new lights, put down a carpeted floor and refinished the kitchen with the help of a professional carpenter, who Mrs. Jarvis said gave many of his time and effort for nothing.

The group worked steadily from December onwards and still has a bit left to do, especially to furnish the place and settle it with game tables and a carpet bowling area.

The work was made possible by the money for equipment is to get into town for the activities and Mrs. Jarvis said recently she was "sitting with mother and the children" while four girls who were all nearly four young teen-agers, they put taking all the grunt and un- The group is spread out in the town having such a good time.

Firemen Blame Vandals For 2 of 3 Alarms

TRENTON — Vandals are blamed for two of three minor outbreaks local firemen were called out to deal with last night.

Fire burning at an overhead door in a building on Bay St. formerly occupied by Trenton Machine Tools needed particular attention but it was extinguished. An investigator with the department is leaning on be possibility of vandalism in this incident.

No serious damage resulted from a smoky chimney fire at Doug Bertram's home at 126 Reid St. The trouble was traced to a bird's nest in the flue which caught fire when the fireplace was lighted to add warmth to the premises.

Smoke from a bonfire set in Centennial Park created considerable anxiety for park visitors until a fire truck arrived on the scene with a tank full of water to douse the source.

The Indian government is arranging the visiting Japanese on state guests.

"The guests will bring India and Japan closer," said General Pajiwara.

Bonds were issued by the Indian government as a national here, Gen. Pajiwara said. Bonds issued in 1946 and arrived in Berlin via Afghanistan and the South Urals. Reaching Singapore after its capture by the Japanese, he began organizing a liberation army.

Pajiwara's visit has aroused great interest among Indian people who want any information he might provide about Bose's fate.

The official Indian and Japanese position is that he was killed in a plane crash in Taiwan while trying to reach Tokyo after the Japanese surrender in Southeast Asia. Some Indians believe he might still be alive.

One theory current in Bose's native state of Bengal is that he is being held prisoner by the Russians in Siberia.

Pajiwara so far has said only that he was a private in work with the Indian nationalist leader.

A member of the visiting Japanese team said: "We will dig up the remains, which will be cremated with proper rites ceremonial. The ashes will then be collected and taken

ONTARIO ENERGY BOARD

PUBLIC HEARING

ONTARIO HYDRO RATES FOR 1976

TAKE NOTICE that the Ontario Energy Board will hold a public hearing commencing June 9, 1975, at 9.00 a.m. at the hearing room at the Board offices at 14 Carlton Street, Toronto, in order to consider a proposal by Ontario Hydro for an increase in its bulk power rates on January 1, 1976.

The Board has made a procedural order dated May 2, 1975, which sets out the procedures which governs the filing of interventions, submission of evidence and a pre-hearing conference. Copies of the Board's procedural Order, the reference from the Minister of Energy and Resources Section 21 of The Ontario Energy Board Act, to which is attached the proposal of Ontario Hydro, and the Notice of Hearing are being served, by direction of the Board upon Ontario Hydro's industrial customers having an average annual power demand of 5,000 kilowatts or more and to municipal corporations and municipal electric utilities. Copies of the Order, the reference and the proposal may be obtained by other persons from the Secretary of the Board on request.

The public pre-hearing conference will be held by Board counsel and Board staff at the Board hearing room on May 23, 1975, at 2.00 p.m. in order to assist interested persons in issue understanding the issues and in order to discuss any problems relating to the filing of interventions, the preparation of evidence and the general procedures to be followed during the hearing.

Ontario Hydro is directed to assist in support of the proposal in writing with the Board by May 15, 1975. By Board Order Ontario Hydro is to provide the bulk power customers referred to above with a copy of the evidence upon request. In addition, Ontario Hydro is directed to make the proposal upon request to the Secretary of Ontario Hydro, at 620 University Avenue, Toronto, upon payment of $18.00 each to cover the cost of reproduction. Copies of the proposal are available for inspection at the Office of Ontario Hydro at Toronto, and at its Regional Offices at the cities of Toronto, Kitchener, Belleville, London, North Bay and Thunder Bay and the Borough of North York.

Any persons wishing to make a submission to the Board or to participate in the hearings shall on or before June 9, 1975, file personally, or send by registered mail to the Secretary of the Board and to Ontario Hydro, a written notice of such intention containing a concise statement of the facts from which his interest and the nature and scope of his intended intervention or other participation may be determined, the name of his counsel, if any, and the address to which communications to him should be sent.

If any person notified does not attend at the hearing, the Board may proceed in his absence and he will not be entitled to any further notice in the proceeding.

DATED at Toronto this 2nd day of May, 1975.

Ivy C. Fidler
Board Secretary

Clean Sweep Returns

FRANKFORD — After a three-year hiatus, Operation Clean Sweep will again be swept into the public consciousness this summer as the Lower Trent Region Conservation Authority revives an old program aimed at cleaning the shorelines of the Trent River.

The one-day massive cleanup campaign will be held in August, on a date still to be set by the authority.

Cy Macdonald, water control board chairman, said Wednesday the clean-up program was discontinued the past three years because of high water levels on the Trent River.

Water had risen beyond the normal river bed, said Mr. Macdonald. It made access to the river shallows where debris collects, difficult.

In the two previous years the clean-up campaign was run — 1970 and 1971 — in May. This year August was chosen because the river water level had late in the summer had stabilized and shallows are exposed.

Operation Clean Sweep is an authority — backed by volunteer operated campaign to clean the shores of the Trent River along its 10-mile length between Rice Lake and Trenton.

The river is divided into 10 regions, each under a single co-ordinator, and is combed by crews of volunteers who remove anything and everything from old tires to tin cans from the river.

The only garbage left untouched by volunteers is that requiring a truck to be moved, said Mr. Macdonald. All refuse pulled from the river is taken to the nearest municipal garbage dump by trucks made available by the volunteer work force.

The haul is substantial, he said. In 1970, about 110 tons of refuse was pulled from the river. The following year, it was 70 tons. He attributed the smaller tonnage in 1971 to the clean-up operation of the previous year.

Mr. Macdonald said an extensive publicity campaign will be mounted about four weeks before the day of the clean-up in an effort to bring out as many people as possible for the work.

He said in the two previous years of the program thousands came out to help. He hopes the same will occur this year.

Any call for help in Trenton should be directed to the recreation Sharon Gaudaur will be met with quick response by the use of Action Trenton, a 78-page directory of services available to town residents. Listings in the directory, just completed and stacked in piles at Trenton Community Gardens offices, are broken down into 41 categories of various clubs and Quinte area organizations.

Mrs. Gaudaur said "Where there isn't a Trenton organization covering that type of service, then groups in Belleville have been included."

Originally, the Trenton Chamber of Commerce worked on the booklet before it was taken over by the recreation department. It was based in part on the resource pamphlet produced by United Community Services in Belleville.

It was prompted by repeated requests to the town hall, the Chamber, and the town recreation department from people wanting contacts for various groups in Trenton.

"Up until this book, there wasn't a central source of information," said Mrs. Gaudaur. "We also found that people coming into town wanted to know about various groups."

The directory will be sold at $2 a copy to only those who can fully make use of it. The limited edition presupposes wide distribution.

Most of the work on the directory was done during non-work hours by Mr. Gaudaur.

Director Deno Gettas estimated about $1,000 of voluntary effort was put into creation of the edition.

He said it will be sold only to those individual who have a valid reason for its use, or who will use it continuously.

People who only need several names for groups that prompt their interest can ask the contact people without buying the book, said Mrs. Gaudaur.

New Service Directory Keeps Trenton Informed

By AL ZARAS
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — A directory of services available to Trenton residents is now available in a limited edition of 100 copies to groups and newcomers to the town.

Collation of the 78-page booklet was completed by the town recreation department this week and distribution has now begun.

Sharon Gaudaur, assistant director of recreation, said Thursday the directory will be distributed to town service clubs, the Chamber of Commerce, town hall, and a variety of town boards and committees.

The booklet lists organizations and clubs that provide a service in Trenton and the Quinte Area. It is broken down into 41 categories, among them health, recreation, farming interests, women's clubs.

Planting Program Massive

More than five million seedling trees will be planted in eastern Ontario this spring in a program to turn 8,100 acres of idle and unsuitable for agriculture, into productive forest.

Administered by the provincial ministry of natural resources, the program will have rehabilitated about 28,000 ha. is done on private land. In the past six years when completed in early June.

During the two-week push, to take advantage of the spring growth spurt of seedlings, 250 men and women are employed as well as hundreds of volunteers.

Celebrities Scouts, Cubs and Beavers for example, planted nearly 30,000 trees on the property of John Cain near Read on Saturday.

More than half of the planting si done on private land. Owners put up approximately a cent a tree and enter into an agreement with the province to maintain the new plantation for at least 15 years.

Pat Atkinson Heads Group

Serving on committees are Betty McMurray, Donna Meeks and Winona Weyr, Mopes; Joan Tresner, badges; Marna Wilkerden and Lorna Demarbre, tests; Lillian Holmes, Marj Cassidy and Ruth Cassidy, music; Teresa Donohue, registration; Jane Adams and Carol North, publicity; Mary Gray, Janice Eames, and Donna Rivers and Susan McMurray, senior liaison.

Regions Don't Threaten Museums

PICTON — Prince Edward County has an opportunity to demonstrate that regional government poses no threat to museums says James Goodfellow, curator of the Prince Edward County Museum in Picton.

Mr. Goodfellow, speaking to Picton Rotarians, said museum personnel throughout Ontario have been concerned for their efforts to retain local identity in the face of regionalization.

He said under regional government townships and communities have lost their boundaries and museum workers fear that their work to preserve community heritages will be lost.

"In Prince Edward we have the opportunity to prove that regionalization, as far as museums are concerned, need not be a bad thing," he commented.

"We can think in terms of greater scope and retain our identity."

Mr. Gooding said Prince Edward County council has shown "tremendous initiative" with the county museum, with the development of the Macaulay House adjoining it.

Much also has been done to assist smaller county museums in other municipalities.

The curator said as a boy growing up in Toronto near the Royal Ontario Museum he enjoyed Saturday classes there and the activities of a junior field naturalists' association.

"It gave me an opportunity to work in a group and to meet in touch with things that were old and a part of natural history," he added.

Mr. Gooding suggested educational opportunities should be developed at the Prince Edward County Museum.

He will provide the space if anyone in the community wants to train them (that students) in educational things."

Mr. Gooding briefly outlined summer plans for the county museum including a special display on Queen Victoria to be exhibited from May 19 to 24.

He said the exhibit probably will be unique in Canada and will focus on Victoria, the woman.

"She was just a tremendous person," noted the curator.

A display of armour also will be on view at the museum, probably in late August.

Mr. Gooding said most of it will date in medieval times although some will be shown up to the time of Napoleon. The armor will be loaned in part by collectors and in part by the Royal Ontario Museum.

Circus Comes To Trenton

MIDDLETON PARK — The Royal Brothers Circus comes to town Sunday with two 90-minute, 15-act performances under the Big Top at 3 p.m. and 6 p.m.

Tickets for the circus, which will set up its tent north of Highway 2 at the 6-BD road, are available in Trenton for $1.50, but will also be on sale at the circus site.

Ride Sunday

PICTON The Prince Edward Horse and Pony Club will hold a trail ride this Sunday leaving the Way Stock Farms, Milford, at 10 a.m. The ride, originally scheduled for May 4 was postponed because of last weekend's rains.

No Definite Plans Yet For Gutted Gilbert

TRENTON — No definite plans have been made by the new owners for use of the century-old Gilbert Hotel.

Murray Page, a Toronto lawyer representing co-owners Quinte Realty Ltd. of Trenton, and Triangle Advertising Ltd. of Toronto, said Thursday "There are no definite plans until we know what the insurance proceedings will be."

Speculation over the use of the hotel, gutted by an early morning fire earlier this year, has been persistant in Trenton since it was announced the hotel had been sold in January.

Mr. Page said the Toronto and Trenton co-owners had plans to refurbish the building and continue its operation as a hotel However, the fire ended such plans.

Its predicted definite plans would likely be made in the next six months.

Gerald Weaver, owner of Quinte Realty Ltd. and co-owner of the hotel and its 1,200-square-foot downtown site, confirmed Thursday no definite plans existed for the hotel's future.

"We have many plans for it, but they are so hypothetic, said Mr. Weaver. He declined to comment on speculation that the site would be razed and a new three-story building would be constructed home a financial institution or offices for medical or business professional people.

"Once we get something jelled, the news of the redevelopment will be announced," he said.

The three-story brick building changed hands May 1. No one spoken to Thursday agreed to reveal the sale price.

The hotel was owned by the present owners of the Quinte Hotel, Abraham and Earl Steinburg. The brothers bought the hotel in 1959 for $130,000 and it has subsequently been valued at $340,000.

The building opposite the Trenton municipal building, contains 42 living units, a large kitchen, plus various rooms and lounges. Since the March 11 blaze, later confirmed as the work of an arsonist, it has been unoccupied.

$8,000 Crash at Glenora Ferry

GLENORA — A three vehicle collision causing an estimated $8,000 damage at Glenora Ferry shortly before midnight, Thursday has sent four persons to Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital.

Injured were drivers of the vehicles, Steven Leonard, 19, of Picton, who was treated for bruises and released, John Gendron, 21, RR1, Picton, admitted with head injuries, James McNicholas, 20, RR1, Milford, back and leg injuries. Also injured was Terry Lemon, 24, of Ernestville, who was admitted with head and leg injuries.

A police spokesman said the collision occurred when the Leonard vehicle, a 1974 model car, of unknown ownership, went onto the shoulder of the highway, bounced back across the road and collided head-on with the Gendron vehicle, a station wagon, as it was driving off the ferry.

The Leonard car then spun around and struck the front of the McNicholas vehicle with its rear end.

Described by police as a 24-year-old student, the Leonard car caused an estimated $2,000 damage to each of the other two vehicles involved.

No Threat

James Goodfellow, curator of the Prince Edward County Museum, says regional government need not pose a threat to museums where emphasis is on preservation of local identity. Although Prince Edward still operates under a two-tier system of government, museum workers feared that if the county should a switch to a one-tier system take place.

Education Brief Sent

BLOOMFIELD — A brief, outlining a proposed county oriented program of Community Education has been forwarded to teachers and community leaders by the Prince Edward County Board of Education.

Purpose of the brief is to survey the county as to interests and needs so that a suitable program may be initiated. Co-ordinator for the program is Susan Greenham who has been established in the program through a Ministry of Education grant.

Some of the topics which recipients of the brief are asked to review include a history of the county; agriculture in the county, government education, county industry, theatre and arts, conservation and the environment.

The brief states that the program will not require registration, nor will fees be charged.

Metcalfe Curator

PICTON — A former curator, of the Picton Prince Edward County Museum, Rose Marie Metcalfe has been named curator of the Marlowe' Park museum this year. Miss Metcalfe will staff a small building housing a wide variety of marine artifacts.

Information Available

PICTON — Mayor Donald King this week told the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce a tourist information centre should be established throughout the county, with the assistance of merchants in rural communities.

He said folders could be placed in country stores and possibly in service stations, with another model kit could be stuffed by a Chamber of Commerce member.

Deno Gettas Gets Award

TRENTON — Town Parks and recreation director Deno Gettas has been awarded a certificate of merit by the Ontario Red Cross Society for a 15-year continuous involvement with the society's water safety program and instructors program.

He was presented with the award of the society's provincial conference in Queen's University in Kingston this week.

Picton Picks Up

PICTON — Spring clean — up week will be held in Picton May 12 to 16 with special collections for rubbish, brush and lawn rakings.

The public works department has requested residents not dump building materials in the streets. All refuse should be property bound or bundled.

Nannyberry Unfamiliar

PICTON — Restoration plans for the Macaulay House adjacent to the Prince Edward County Museum may involve getting back to nature.

The project calls for duplication of the original landscaping to meet the requirements is Nannyberry tree. Curator James Goodfellow confesses he is unfamiliar with the species.

The Abortion Debate

"The great abortion controversy continues, and in any renewed discussion of the subject, it is appropriate to start with the equally controversial topic of sex education.

Ontario health minister Thomas Wells was right when he said recently that while not questioning the sincerity of those who believed the topic one for the home, "I think we have our heads in the sand if we stand back and blithely say to ourselves that the schools have no role to play."

The minister had announced a new high school curriculum for health and physical education that would place increased emphasis on the study of human sexuality. At the same time he encouraged more dialogue on the subject between parents and their teenagers.

Consider in this vein what has been described as "a pathetic set of myths" in the lives of teenagers, with regard to sex, discussed at a recent conference on the topic at York University.

Dr. Martin Wolfish, associate University of Toronto, referred to it as Russian roulette with regard to birth control, the teenagers offering such bizarre explanations as: "It couldn't happen to me", "a trusted new friend; I kept my eyes open all the time . . . it doesn't happen to nice girls . . . nice girls don't run the pill". The boys mean-while regard use of a male contraceptive as an insult . . . "except to keep away VD — it's for dirty girls."

Such is the extent of the problem in this "anything goes" society, that so many youngsters simply don't know the full facts, nor do not grasp the consequences of their actions at the sexual level.

What are these consequences? The horrifying one, according to Dr. Wolfish, is that a generation of emotionally starved people — the offspring of unmarried teenagers who decide to keep their babies instead of placing them for adoption — may result.

As for abortion, Protestant clergymen, in a recent letter to The Montreal Gazette, supported Justice Minister Lang's efforts to uphold the existing abortion laws. But the medical profession, which bears the brunt of the vituperation associated with the "new morality," is between the devil and the deep blue sea.

In a statement to The Ottawa Journal's Karin Moser, Canadian Medical Association communications director Doug Geekie, said: "The CMA is sick to the teeth of having to decide on which grounds other than medical ones, the public or the representative government wants to sanction a therapeutic abortion."

Then there are the Planned Parenthood people, such as Mary Mills, executive director of the organization in Ottawa, who said in a recent letter that "prevention is the key," adding: "Hopefully, all those opposed to abortion are in favor of safe, effective birth control."

Certainly all concerned must face facts and accept the prevailing behavioral patterns of society. The natural functions of men and women are unalterable; at the same time, if social mores are changing in a manner that threatens the moral and emotional structure, then society is correct in sanctioning such measures as sex education in schools and/or measures of birth control.

Housing in Doldrums

With housing starts down throughout Hastings county, this is a time to reflect once again on this paltry status of the industry and of Government policy.

There has seldom been a time in the past decade that housing has not been the target of complaints and hand-wringing, both as to supply and quality.

One of the latest to rail against the situation is Whitby Mayor Jack Newman who has charged that the industry is facing considerable chaos due to an "incomprehensible maze of government bureaucracy" and the welter of unrelated initiatives and programs."

Mr. Newman wants the province to cut through the tangle with a comprehensive strategy setting out a population distribution pattern for the province. This would be followed by an outline of required servicing for areas where population would be directed.

Beyond that again, the Mayor envisages an industrial strategy to produce a balanced economic base to offset the accelerated housing program.

If all this seems like pie in the sky, it is nevertheless a plan of action which, if implemented, could help lift housing out of much-needed accommodation.

Houses are being built; but the supply is far from meeting the demand. Again, the cost of those that are being built is often beyond the reach of many — a situation compounded by inflation as well as scarcity of mortgage money.

Indeed, Mayor Newman sees a relationship between "the very harsh housing market," the bureaucracy of the economic situation and the desire of people to have children.

He says the province's very low birth rate — lower even, he claims, than during the Depression — reflects disillusionment and uncertainty about the future.

An election is anticipated this year, and undoubtedly housing will be one of the issues. This being so, it would not be surprising if the Government tries to inject new life into this sagging and important facet of the social and economic scene.

Royal Commission Probe

The provincial royal commission established to investigate violence in the media, and particularly television, has been given further balance and authority with the addition of Toronto newspaper columnist Scott Young and provincial family court judge Lucian Beaulieu. They will join former federal cabinet minister Judy LaMarsh in the study.

Of the two new members, perhaps Mr. Young is the best known. Anyone familiar with his work know Mr. Young as a family man who has travelled widely and who writes with insight and compassion. And with equal facility whether he is dealing with human frailty in general or with such topical subjects as hockey.

Together with Judge Beaulieu, he undoubtedly will bring to bear, along with Miss LaMarsh, wide experience of the human condition and a keen perception of cause and effect when the dramatizing of violence through the media is concerned.

A Poor Mix

To the presumably harmless "coffee . . . tea . . . or milk" syndrome, add now the possibly sinister, from a health standpoint, "coffee . . . cheese . . . and bacon" element.

British scientists are saying a constituent of coffee might be responsible for converting preservatives in cheese, corned beef, ham and other pork products into cancer-causing agents.

It looks as if a fatalistic attitude toward life is increasingly necessary today.

Labor's Obstacles to Voluntary Wage-price Restraints

By VINCENT EGAN

Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

Just back from Europe, Finance Minister John Turner is once again hoping himself with a four-hopeless scheme for wage and price restraints.

The plan has reached the stage at which he has tentatively suggested as 12 per cent voluntary limit on wage increases.

But there has been nothing tentative about organized labor's immediate rejection of the suggestion.

That's hardly surprising. The labor movement has never given the government any reason to think it would agree to any guidelines or restraints on wage increases.

On the contrary, Big Labor has forcefully rejected them time and again.

The fact that Messrs. Trudeau and Turner are counting on a person a program of voluntary restraint (which failed in Canada in 1976, and in advanced form in Britain now) seems to mean only one thing—that the leaders can't think of anything else to do about inflation.

Yet they have been with us, to a degree, for the past 30 years. For some lucky groups—non-monopolistic businesses and strongly organized labor—it has been the best thing that ever happened.

(One simple example: Professional hockey players couldn't have multiplied their ticket prices, while players have multiplied their incomes.)

But in the 1970s, inflation has been taking on the characteristics of a human tragedy for countless Canadians on relatively fixed incomes. Retired workers have no bargaining power.

It is just becoming a tragedy for the national economy as well. Canada is in a recession (that is, economic growth has stopped because, for more than six months, our export trade is in a slump, because failures are probably high (the official figures have been strangely delayed), and unemployment is

Mindszenty's Death Is a Reminder Of 1956 in Rejuvenated Hungary

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

The death of the intransigent religious leader, Josef Cardinal Mindszenty at 83 is a personal tragedy as well as changing events in his native Hungary, of the radical shift in events in his lifetime. Since the "freedom fighters" revolution of his 38.

The Roman Catholic and ultra-conservative cardinal continued to represent the aspirations of the Hungary, (given the fact it has been Communist-ruled since 1948), which became more and more out of touch with reality.

Even the Vatican was deeply enough concerned with his determined views to denote him as Primate of Hungary within the hierarchy of cardinals and archbishops. This was an unheard-of thing for a prelate representing the Roman Catholic Church in a Communist state, underscoring the long-lasting cool and established Hungarian set.

The fact is that Hungary, more than any other nation in the still-Soviet-dominated Eastern Europe, is emerging as a partial bourgeois state, externally at least looking very much like the prewar Hungary the ancient cardinal never forgot.

The basis for this is rejection by the Hungarian Communist regime of the unworkable, rigid and inefficient centrally-planned economy. In its place came the so-called NEM, "new economic mechanism," which is in effect terms means the introduction of the limited market economy of the capitalistic world.

Hungary, the industrially small country, smaller since 1945 than during centuries of her past and historical history, had grown, probably the imposition of the market economy is easier to bring about than in a more geographically ample Poland, or a politically more Stalinist East German.

Budapest today is a city of smart shops, chic fashions, gourmet restaurants and with Hungarians of style and money-spending ability adding with their own places in the country.

This compares to a drab and beaten-down Prague, and vicinity to a barbaric Communism manifestly unpopular even in the USSR, or to Warsaw in Poland where, since the tragic city is still rebuilding 30 years after the Germans flattened it.

The reasons for Hungarian revolt were related to the excess of the NEM, establishing a realistic price policy for consumer and exportable goods as well as to the style and approach of Hungarian is gaudy.

They could not be put down by Russian tanks and secret police in 1956, though they had the political backing, then, and have since again to upset and punish by overturns the Hungarian imposed economic system.

But everywhere in the People's Republic of Hungary bought the "new economic mechanism," not the warring clients, see the Hungarian Socialist Workers' Party (the Hungarian Communist Party) who have largely put back and watched the change.

At the same time, Hungary's leader, the silent James Kadar who took over after the bloodbath of 1956 and during a recent visit of Soviet Communist Party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, that "the old one (dictator, ship) the proletarian dictatorship, will persist."

Comrade Brezhnev, III and ailing, was in Budapest at home replied that Kadar and Hungary were doing a good job, or words to that effect, during the 30th party congress of the Hungarian Communists.

Of course, the Russian people want more consumerism, more space rocketry and capital goods.

The Hungarian model, ex-Prague, whatever you call it, is not only being watched in Eastern Europe, but, and more and avidly by the cool, coldly ideological East Germany.

Allan Grossman Honored

By DON O'HEARN

Queen's Park Bureau

Thomson News Service

TORONTO — It is most unlikely that Allan Grossman will make the history books of Ontario, at least in any major way.

But he deserves his place in the record of the province as one of those backbenchers who seldom get much recognition but who are so important in the continuing business of politics and government.

They did honor to Mr. Grossman the other night here in Toronto.

The fact of the honor was not particularly surprising, as it was part of a very obvious PC good-will or election program.

Twelve new knights were bestowed across the province.

Their local associations are having colonial dinners, usually the people who are called cabinet ministers show up, and for one night good old Joe who happens to be the sitting member for the riding has his spot in the sun.

He is king for a day—or a night — no matter what whether his biggest contribution may have been to the party or to the riding.

The party knows who knows who deserves it.

In the case of Mr. Grossman, however, the honor of king for a night was well deserved.

In his standing application to duty he has been one of the most faithful and wonderful representatives in the province.

Corporate profits were off sharply in the first quarter of this year, as reported here a few days ago.

First-quarter 1975 wage settlements, according to newly published figures from the federal department of labour, produced average annual increases in base rates of 16 per cent, compared with 14.4 per cent in 1974.

In 20 of these 69 settlements, employees agreed to forego wage rates periodically in direct proportion to the increase in the cost of living, and to pay increases averaging 11.9 per cent, over and above the cost-of-living allowance.

Let it be granted that any finance minister, confronted with the powerful threat of 10-per-cent inflation, faces an almost impossible human task in trying to keep it from ruining the economy—especially when certain elements are so high and almost certainly going higher

Trees Damaged

Reg Blatherwick, president of the Bancroft Senior Citizens Club, and Bancroft Deputy-reeve Aubrey Donnelly examine the damage done to a number of willow trees in the seniors park. The damage was done by some snowmobilers during the winter.

Senior Citizens Ambitious In Operation of Own Park

BANCROFT — One of the most ambitious projects that the Bancroft Senior Citizens Club has attempted is the landscaping, management and operation of the club's own park in the North end of the village.

The park is located on reclaimed land on the York River and was given to the seniors' group by the village.

Although the land still belongs to the village, the Bancroft Senior Citizens have used little own funds and a New Horizon grant to grass the land and to plant flowers and trees.

The group is delighted with the park property and according to club president Reg Blatherwick, have great ambitions for a lawn bowling green, groups of shrubs and a series of pathways.

Unfortunately during the winter and early spring a certain amount of damage was done to the work in the park by snowmobiles and children.

"We have planted willows all along the lagoon and they've all been broken and smashed," said Bancroft Deputy-reeve Aubrey Donnelly.

"The snowmobiles running over and over the park and kids rearing around and kites have really done a lot of damage," said Mr. Blatherwick.

Plans are now underway by the Bancroft Senior Citizens to put farm fencing along the river and lagoon sides of the park and to put another fence along the highway frontage.

Bancroft village council has agreed to posts and planking is to mark the parking area.

However, according to Mr. Donnelly, there isn't much money in going to all this trouble to make the park attractive if it's going to be destroyed by other people.

The landscaping for the park was laid out by the Royal Botanical Gardens in Hamilton and a storage house and washroom will soon be installed for the use of the club members.

The Bancroft Cardiff Kinette Club have donated two new picnic tables to be used in the park.

Apsley Woman Directs Liberal Campaign

A housewife has been named campaign manager for the Liberal provincial election bid in Hastings — Peterborough riding.

She is Mona Caldwell, of Apsley, who will head the party's campaign organization for candidate David Holtom.

Meantime, says Jim Watson, president of the Liberal riding association, the Liberals are in "the process of establishing the rest of the campaign team."

Mrs. Caldwell is a neighbor of the Holtom family in Chandos township where the candidate has a beef farm. He also is a teacher at North Hastings High School in Bancroft.

Hastings Highlights

Plot Purchased

MARMORA — Marmora and Lake Township council has decided to purchase one plot containing eight grave sites at Elm Cemetery in Marmora Township for $100. The price includes perpetual care.

Objects to Trailers

MARMORA — Dr. Tom McCarthy of Ottawa and formerly of this village has objected to Marmora and Lake Township council against any commercial development at Twin Sisters Lakes, where he has a cottage. He was advised by Reeve Ritchie Wells proposed development of a trailer park in the area will not materialize. He said the area is not suitable for commercial growth. Dr. McCarthy recently returned from a three-month visit to Burma working for the World Health Organization on loan from the Canadian government.

Thompson Returned

MARMORA — Maurice Thompson has been reappointed for a three-year term on the committee of minor adjustment for Marmora and Lake Townships council. He served one year before his term expired. The other committee members are Jim Rahman and Ray Black, chairman.

Bancroft Game Club Fights Algonquin Plan

By NAN WHITLAW
Staff Correspondent

BANCROFT — The Bancroft Fish and Game Club along with the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters and the Pembroke Outdoor Sportsman Club have decided not to sit down and quietly wait for the Algonquin Master plan to become a reality as they're waging a determined war on the Ontario Ministry of Natural Resources.

One of the spokesmen for the local club, John Struik, has been angry about the Algonquin Plan for a year.

The plan would eventually eliminate the use of outboard motors in the park entirely with the exception of Opeongo Lake. Limitations would also be placed on carts used to convey boats over portages and on the use of bicycles in the park.

According to Mr. Struik, the hunters and fishermen of Ontario are "simply being forgotten about because of the demands being made by canoeists and naturalists.

"I can't see anything wrong with making a decision to limit the motors in five horsepower," said Mr. Struik. "You're talking about an awful lot of people who want them. There are about 300,000 fishermen who use the park each year."

Government figures indicate that approximately one million people used the park during 1974 and 70 per cent were canoeists, 20 per cent were fishermen and of those numbers, one per cent were senior citizens.

"This is a very serious thing to local people," said Mr. Struik, as he commented on the number of people who had voiced their objections to the plan.

"You can increase taxes and things like that and people will complain a bit but when you take away something like this they will get very angry."

The local club also feels that there is no evidence that the use of a small motor in the park would damage the environment.

Mr. Struik, who owns and operates the Bancroft Sport Centre, is concerned that there will be very few parks left to the serious angler.

"Where else can we go to fish," he queried. "They've restricted Silent Lake Park, Quetico Park, Polar Bear and Kilarney Parks."

The local club has set up another meeting on the Algonquin issue for Thursday, May 15.

At this meeting in Bancroft Public School, Hastings MPP Clarke T. Rollins and riding Liberal candidate David Holmes will take part in a discussion on the controversial issue.

Mr. Struik indicated that he had had correspondence from Premier William Davis indicating that the plan is again under review.

"I'm sure that a decision can be made so that all groups can fairly share the park," said Mr. Struik.

Mileage Approved

MARMORA — Marmora and Lake Township council has authorized payment of 16 cents per mile for personal carriage of township business. Reeve Ritchie Wells notified Hastings County is paying the same amount which he said is reasonable in light of today's inflationary prices.

Some Good And Bad News

MARMORA — The auditors' report showing a profit of $4,966 from 1974 operations is welcome news for Marmora and Lake Townships council.

However, the good news is tempered by reports from Reeve Ritchie Wells that the Hastings County demand for 1975 will be $53,147 compared to $34,846 last year. The large increase is due partly to the $7.56 million budget approved by county council last week. The budget for the county last year was $5.7 million.

An increase in the Hastings County board of education budget is $31.87 million — a 19.8 per cent increase over last year — is also a contributing factor in what is expected to be an increased mill rate for the townships.

Their share of the education budget is expected to be $121,919 — increase of $24,481. It does not include the demands by the separate school board which is also expected to jump to $10,000 from $7,500.

The auditors will meet with the council May 16 at 10 a.m. to discuss the proposed new budget.

Opposes Plan

The Bancroft Fish and Game Club and local resident John Struik have been adamant in their criticism of the proposed Algonquin Master plan announced by the provincial Ministry of Natural Resources.

No Censorship

Digest and Time Is Only Tax Issue

OTTAWA (CP) — State Secretary Hugh Faulkner said Thursday he is wise and wary of suggestion of censorship from citizens who claim it violates the tax privileges for advertisers in the Canadian editions of Time and Reader's Digest.

"It is no way inspire growth of Canadian publishing," he said in social policy of periodical publication he said, in the Commons bogus second-reading debate of the proposed tax law amendment.

Scattered cries of "censorship" from the Progressive Conservative benches during Mr. Faulkner's speech. Gordon Fairweather (PC—Fundy-Royal) said the House his party believes both magazines should be given time to increase their Canadian content.

There is no intention of applying Canadian content rules to publications, Mr. Faulkner said. He said he would protect Canada's cultural integrity and would try create an Canadian-than weekly news magazine.

The bill to amend the Income Tax Act would end the clause in fiction of Time, Reader's Digest and all other periodical journals as domestic publications.

Publishers of both magazines have said they would lose tax deduction for advertisers if the clause is dropped, would double their advertising cost and put their Canadian edition out of business.

Teen-agers Leave Home For Clothes

TORONTO (CP) — The mobility of community and social services should be more flexible by distributing allowances to the families in poverty where they live, Mr. Ellis Martin (NDP—Sudbury East) said Thursday.

He was speaking before the social development committee which approved the ministry's estimates of $444,376,000 for financial assistance programs such as Family Benefits and General Welfare Assistance.

The NDP critic of the ministry said that the money paid for child support to natural parents should be equal to support given foster parents.

Foster parents receive $125 to $145 a month for the care of a teen-ager while under Family Benefits the natural parents get $74.

Some teen-age girls are leaving home to live in foster homes just to get the clothing allowance, he said.

Monetary problems are at the bottom of most family breakups and there should be more flexibility to prevent the break.

"Don't you find this pretty reasoning in Family Unity Benefits?" he asked Hon. Brian Iselin, minister of community and social services.

Mr. Martel also suggested that the ministry investigate setting up a program to provide expectant mothers with the nutritional nutrition during their pregnancies.

A similar program in Manitoba has a $125 allowance for this purpose.

It is unfair to the unborn babies for mothers not to get the proper nutrition and would prevent possibly deficiencies or illness of the child, he said.

Mr. Martel said it is recommended that all single parents, the unemployed and families, receive an allowance for homemaking services.

Bail Allowed

TORONTO (CP) — Mr. Justice Arthur Jessup of the Ontario Appeal Court ruled Thursday that Paul Seskhers, 18, of Mississauga, Ont., will remain free on his own recognizance and $200 bail, Arthur Ed. Cop the youth's lawyer said.

Seskhers was convicted of manslaughter in June, 1974, in the death of Barrie Ross Cabby, also of Mississauga, Ont. who died after a fight with Seskhers Feb. 8, 1973.

On Tuesday, the Ontario Appeal Court dismissed Seskhers' appeal in a majority decision.

He is appealing this decision.

Similar bans would apply to a number of U.S. border television stations which compete for advertising with domestic stations in the Toronto, Buffalo, Rochester and Vancouver markets.

Mr. Faulkner said the U.S. editions of Time and Reader's Digest would continue to be treated as Canadian magazines expected that special editions would be printed in Canada.

Bill Benedict (NDP—Burlington) said the bill is long overdue. Canada's magazine is a legitimate claim to be a Canadian publication although between them they had 65 per cent of the Canadian magazine advertising revenue.

He noted that Time is wholly-owned by its U.S. parent while Reader's Digest has less than 25 per cent of its shares in Canadian hands.

Time, if they had 75-per-cent Canadian ownership, that would be helpful, he said. They would be boy in control of editorial policy and hiring.

It was doubtful the Canadian editions would be affected by the tax advantage and even if they were, Canadian content would be absorbed by the Canadian publishing industry.

Mr. Faulkner said that "only 19 per cent of the advertising revenue gained from this measure will go to Canadian industry."

Mr. Faulkner said the government is analyzing the recommendations defining what publications are domestic and what are eligible for the advertiser tax exemption.

One requirement is that publications must be "substantially the same" in content as foreign publications.

If the difference in content is 20 per cent or less and the difference is considered foreign, Revenue Canada will as per case by case consideration is given on an individual basis.

He noted that the attempt to change must above-referring to the proposed tax change would not guarantee a new-owned Canadian or foreign-owned publications, but would make it possible for those advertising until a license is granted for a third Vancouver station, Mr. Benedict said.

The situation of "the world view of Canadian readers being influenced by American periodicals" was opposed by the government.

Gutter Talk Is Film Norm

TORONTO (CP)—Violence in movies is not the only objectionable source of concern, D. L. Sims, director of the theatres branch of the ministry of consumer and commercial relations, reported Thursday.

"Gutter language and profanity seem to be the accepted norm today in film. Mr. Sims stated in his report for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1975.

"Sex continues to be treated in a demeaning manner."

He said that contamination occurs when farmers do not follow the instructions of agrochemical manufacturers and ship meat or animals without waiting a suitable time after the last administration of medicine.

Bob Brinn (PC—Kootenay West) said farmers might be deterred from shipping animals because of given strip if the meat department did spot checks at the stockyards from time to time.

They could single out an animal or a group at a basis—perhaps once a day or once a week at each stockyard—and test it.

Intentions of Air Canada Not Clear to Travel Agency

MONTREAL (CP) — A Montreal travel agency official said Thursday he is unsure whether he Air Canada plan to be invest in a country-wide string of travel agencies is still alive.

Raymond Tarbet, secretary-treasurer of McGregor Travel Co. Ltd., said Air Canada in company he was informed by one travel agency official that a deal for a nationwide travel agency would not go ahead.

But R. Y. McGregor, McGregor Travel president and Mr. Tarbet's boss, had been told by Yves Menard, former Air Canada vice-president, that the deal would probably go through.

Mr. Tarbet said he considered a $100,000 payment by Air Canada to Mr. McGregor last November as a "bribery" to McGregor Travel and a first step in a travel nationwide agency.

Mr. Justice Willard Estey, presiding over the inquiry, suggested Air Canada was getting a poor bargain if it was paying $100,000 for a 1.9-per-cent interest in a national agency.

"It looks like someone paid 10 times too much for a 1.7-per-cent interest," he said.

Mr. Justice Estey of the Supreme Court of Ontario is investigating the $100,000 payment as well as the financial control and management of Air Canada.

The hearing adjourned Thursday until next Monday. Mr. Justice Estey said he had a previous commitment in Toronto Friday.

Air Canada is not allowed under the Air Canada Act to own a travel agency.

Mr. Tarbet, opposing the payment to Mr. McGregor said the money was for his consulting services in influencing provincial, Middle Eastern and Latin American governments for Air Canada.

Mr. Tarbet told the inquiry these terms were a "total surprise" to him and McGregor Stations had concerned on Air Canada share in a national travel agency which would include McGregor Travel and Burton Wardwick Travel in British Columbia.

He said there was a "gentleman's agreement" that the $100,000 payment would give Air Canada an option on 10 per cent of McGregor shares.

This would, in effect, give the airline a 1.7-per-cent share in the larger national company.

Mr. Justice Estey noted that the market value of the existing national company would be $1 million but Air Canada would purchase it only 1.7 per cent of the shares with a payment of $100,000.

He suggested this was an limited price for such a small interest.

"THE WORRY WART"

Meat and Milk Often Contaminated

OTTAWA (CP) — A fair amount of meat and milk may be contaminated by drugs, a health department official admitted Thursday.

Dr. A. B. Morrison, director of the health department's health protection branch, was answering questions in the health and welfare committee.

He said such contamination is rare but it can occur but is difficult to trace to the farmer because of the complexity of the marketing system.

Don Blenkarn (PC—Grey-Simcoe) was raised the question, said he thinks that since farmers face little financial gain from adulteration, there is probably a big contamination problem.

Dr. Morrison said that most animal medicines is used on cows to break down into hormones reproduction and cooling. There was, however, concern about a few that might be dangerous.

Years of Peril End

Vietnam Buses Safe Once Again

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Long distance buses and trains are beginning service in South Vietnam where for years flying was the only safe way to travel.

South Vietnam's Liberation Radio, monitored in Bangkok, Thailand, said buses are running the 1,086-mile coastal route between Hanoi and Saigon for the first time since the war began and demand is so great that the North Vietnam transportation department is putting on more.

Ships plying the coastal route between Hanoi and Saigon now make the voyage in two days less than in wartime, the broadcast said.

Meanwhile, the Youth and Students Fecoration of Saigon appealed for more volunteers to provide security for the city, to take part in revolutionary cultural programs and to clean up the streets, a broadcast reported.

A Phnom Penh radio broadcast received in Bangkok said the armed forces and civilians in Cambodia are working energetically to rebuild destroyed bridges, roads and to clean up the wreckage of war.

New York Times correspondent Sydney Schanberg, in an article published today, related what he saw after the fall of Phnom Penh on April 17.

He described a forced march by perhaps half or more of Cambodia's seven million people into the interior of Cambodia — a march that many will not survive.

Perhaps million people in stunned silence—walking, cycling, pushing carts, carrying loads like a human carpet—relentlessly forced to abandon the capital.

Ontario Welfare Increased

TORONTO (CP) — Welfare benefits have been increased by 28.5 million to offset had purchasing power because of inflation, Hon. Brian Iselin, minister of community and social services, said Thursday.

Mr. Brunelle told the legislature the increased benefits, effective April 1, will mean each family benefit recipients and 18 people receiving general welfare assistance now.

The minimum for a mother with three children between the ages of 12 and 16 will get an additional $45 a month for a total of $422. Added to the federal family allowance benefit, the family's gross income will be $484.24.

Also included in the increase is a back-to-school allowance of $25 for each child between 6 and 12 years and $50 for children over 12.

Mr. Brunelle said the province, instead of municipalities, will pay for eyeglasses and hearing aids for families receiving family benefits or the General Assist Annual Income supplement.

Paychecques of mothers who have part-time work will be averaged over a three-month period instead of monthly so they also will be given work expenses for clothes and trans-portation.

Cash benefits for mothers will be phased out gradually over a three-month period while the recipients will continue to have drug, dental and Ontario Hospital Services Program cards during that period.

Richard Smith, (L-Nipissing) said the increase should be greater since family benefits and general welfare assistance are always behind the cost of living.

He said he does not know how much money is involved but it will also be in the thousands of dollars.

Published reports say the figure in question may be more than $200,000.

Ontario Owns Lodge In Mercury Country

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Government officials said Thursday a nothing-down-payment resort has cost taxpayers $500,000 over the last three years but the government, which owns the lodge, doesn't know how much more it will cost before the resort can be repaired.

NDP and Liberal members of the committee said the president and chief shareholder of Minaki Lodge Resort Ltd. had a conflict of interest when he first applied for a $300,000 provincial guarantee.

Minaki, located near Kenora in northwestern Ontario, was closed late last fall, almost a year after the government purchased it, "because its operating losses were too great," said Fred Kelly, minister of industry and tourism.

He told the legislature's public accounts committee the government bought the 77-room Minaki lodge—with its large lake and outdoor swimming pools, ski hill, golf course and dining rooms—in January, 1974, for just under $1 million to protect loans it had made to the operators for $520,000.

The first Filipino said he "wouldn't like to forecast" when it might be possible to reopen the resort or how much money would have to be spent before the operation might be financially solvent.

"I'm not certain Minaki Lodge operation in its area will ever be successful enough to pay off its capital debt."

The first Filipino loan was to Rod Carey, former owner of the lodge, for $300,000 in 1971.

Mr. Carey was a member of the board of the Northern Ontario Development Corp. (NODC) when he applied to the corporation for the loan to advertise and improve the resort. Stokes (NDP—Thunder Bay) told the committee.

J. H. Joyce, chairman of the Northern Ontario Development Corporation (NODC) which paid a total of $250,000 in loans to Minaki, said Mr. Carey submitted his application for an NODC director three weeks before the first loan was given cabinet approval Dec. 8, 1971.

Mr. Joyce said the resignation of Mr. Carey from the loan paid out by GDC rather than NODC "was a matter of suspicion of a conflict of interest."

J. S. Rae, NODC director, defended the action as a "perfectly proper . . . way of doing business."

Mr. Rae, advancing a further loan of $150,000 to Minaki Lodge Resort Ltd. on Nov. 8, 1973, for swimming pool work, and $100,000 on Oct. 17, 1974, for operating assistance, the province was forced to buy the property Minaki lodge—with its large lake, Mr. Pilgrem said.

The resort was in danger of being foreclosed to Frank Grinwald, a Minneapolis businessman and former owner.

The mercury pollution scare in the English River system where Minaki is located, and the resulting decrease in tourist business had Mr. Grinwald to sell the resort to Mr. Carey for $28,000 mortgage and an unknown amount of cash, the committee was told.

Mr. Pilgrem said that the only money he was aware that Mr. Carey invested was a $25,000 personal loan.

Medical Profession Called Health Threat

Written for CP

By PEGGY TRACY

Having lifted at the establishment windmills of Western institutions, education, industrial production and transportation, Iva Illich takes o the medical profession in his latest book, Medical Nemesis.

Subtitled The Expropriation of Health, the book makes the charge that the medical profession has become a major threat to the health of both the sick and the well.

Using the term iatrogenesis, meaning doctor-made illness, the author quotes copiously from medical journals.

The villain of the piece appears to be the industrialization of Western society, and the author's goal is the recovery of personal autonomy in the fields of transportation, education and medical therapy through political action coalescing an ethical awakening.

In his previous book, Deschooling Society, Illich said that the more schools there are in a society, the more people will somehow come to believe in progress — even though the main effect of school has been shown to be the production of dropouts as a majority.

In Nemesis he contends that the rituals of medical care in an advanced society have become so powerful that their benefits are overlooked — even though the coping ability of most people in fact decrease as a result.

Illich's sentence structure is never simple and a few examples to illustrate his arguments would be helpful.

One of his more easily understood sections concerns man's relationship to his "three most intimate and basic threats"—pain, sickness and death. Modern medicine, he contends denies the need for man's acceptance of these threats, and is planned and organized to kill pain, to eliminate sickness, and to struggle against death. Pain being essential experiences with which each person has to come to terms, these are transformed into accidents requiring medical treatment.

The author is a native of Vienna, has served as an assistant pastor in an Irish-Puerto Rican parish in New York City, vice-rector at the Catholic University of Puerto Rico and co-founder of the Centre for Intercultural Documentation in Cuernavaca, Mexico, and has recently been lecturing at a number of English universities, including Oxford, Cambridge and Edinburgh.

Now It Has Crime and Vice

Tel Aviv Meets Pioneer's Criterion for City Status

TEL AVIV (AP) — An Israeli pioneer forecast that Tel Aviv would be a real city until it had its first criminal and its first streetwalker.

Tel Aviv now is 66 years old; its residents are no longer pioneers but finally common criminals in their midst and ladies of the evening are so plentiful that when Arab terrorists raided Israel's largest city last March they shot their way into a red-light district.

Crime, in fact, is growing all over the country but this doesn't particularly shock modern Israelis, whose pioneer parents had hoped to build a model Jewish society.

What appals today's Israelis is that dishonesty, scandal and skulduggery seem to be commonplace.

"Look, now it's happening in a university," said an angry office secretary, throwing the morning newspaper in her boss.

An item reported that 70 percent of the academic staff at Ben-Gurion University, in the sands of the Negev Desert, took money for work they didn't do.

Some were paid for days when they played hookey and lecturers who were paid to give special summer courses for students of the term before were took the money and went on vacation instead.

The same newspaper recounted that Zvi Katz, treasurer of Israel's national housing company, had been detained on suspicion of theft, fraud and forgery involving more than $250,000.

Katz's trial starts this month but the scandal already is in full swing. One magazine charged that the missing money went to a political party.

Israel's Tel Aviv municipal tax collector being investigated for embezzlement recently hanged himself. Another head of the government company that supplies Lake Kinneret, the oilfields captured from the Arabs has been charged with income-tax evasion.

A veteran collective-farm worker has been charged with stealing bananas—50 tons of them. The dismissed chief of the Israel-British Bank, Yoshaiha ben Tzion, is serving 13 years for illegally embezzling about $47 million.

The early Israelis didn't even bother to hide their crimes. Since the prisons nowadays are full of white-collar criminals, the prison population in Israel is still significantly lower than that of most Western countries," said an official report, but it added that violence is increasing.

Only 30 murders were committed in all of Israel last year, but some recent cases were particularly vicious. A soldier killed six victims by throwing a grenade into a discotheque and a lynching party was butchered by a man in a masquerade mask.

Dr. Yitzhak Hadari, assistant to the minister of justice, said there has been an alarming increase in white-collar or common crime, but the crimes of a few prominent people has made things more serious.

Hadari said 5,500 serious criminal cases were before the courts in 1968 and 6,300 in 1971, the latest statistics available. No breakdown was available on economic crime and other offences. The population grew to 3.1 million from 2.8 million in the same period and Hadari said the crime increase was probably less than in most countries.

Finance ministry officials said low salaries, high taxes and confusing tax laws encourage illegality but they hoped a proposed new tax reform might bring what one taxman called "a renewed morality, a return to Israel's first principles."

Israelis consider themselves law-abiding, and some are pleased at what they call a "post-Watergate" mentality of self-criticism and "let's clean the country up" that began to appear in the shock following the 1973 October war.

Another scandal involves Halimah, the musical theatre. Three former public lives of the Habimah drama company have been sentenced to three to six years for embezzling more than $60,000. Judge Dov Levin concedes that "their activities—tax evasion, stealing funds and public associations — represent a widespread practice in Israel."

Michael Tzur, former head of the National Shipping Line and the Israel Corporation which promotes investment in the Jewish state—also is in jail, while police finish investigating the disappearance of more than $8 million, illegally transferred to companies in Liechtenstein.

New Mexican Oil Field Exploited Without Boom

VILLAHERMOSA, Mexico (AP) — At midday the town square lay empty under the hot sun. The sluggish brown river beside it stood almost still. Nothing seemed to have changed in the 27 years since Graham Greene wrote about the heat and the lethargy here.

But as the evening sky grew dark, the dead beast to grow an unnatural orange and the twin towers of the Tabasco Cathedral stood out against the flickering light from scores of new oil wells.

For in the last year, engineers for the state-owned oil monopoly, digging deeper than they ever had before, had discovered that this isolated city is sitting above a sea of oil.

Production has started at a feverish pace, even as exploration continues. Nobody knows how vast the field will prove to be, but already they are the largest ever in Mexico, once the world's second leading producer of oil.

Although the government has played down the extent of its discoveries, the finds in the Tabasco and Chiapas provinces are expected to be just the beginning. The most optimistic geologists are that they may stretch north to the coast of Mexico and east to merge with the Guatemalan oil fields.

Officials of the oil monopoly, Pemex, say there may be even more lucrative finds in northern and western Mexico.

"They could change the whole complexion of the world oil market," one foreign oilman said. "Mexico may well be sitting on one of the world's largest deposits of oil and all it needs to do is go after it."

But on the little alleys below Villahermosa's town square, the pale night sky and the distant geysers of flame rushing up from the wells appear to have had little effect on the complexion of life. Children chase each other through streets that are better than daytime with strollers. Aid from the open doors and windows comes the buzz of television sets.

Just a half hour's drive from the town, the flames are almost blinding as they flicker 100 feet from the jungle floor, beating against the dark night air.

Beside them, sandaled and bandaled laborers work around the clock, drilling increasingly as deep as three miles below the earth to tap the oil deposits.

In the last year, some 6,000 oil men and their families have gathered in the Villahermosa area to work on the exploration, drilling and construction of pipelines.

But they have not brought the kind of boom-town atmosphere that has accompanied most oil finds around the world.

Since all the work is controlled by the government monopoly, one Pemex official said: "There is no oil rush, no hundreds of prospectors crowding hotels, no company representatives lobbying with the government officials."

An aide to state Governor Mario Trujillo Garcia said he had not authorized the opening of a single new bar in Villahermosa since the new drilling began and that the few local bars of prostitution are doing a poor business.

The only apparent boom has come in the small village of Reforma, near the Cactus oil fields 20 miles from the city.

Here almost every house has become a restaurant and wooden huts have sprung up on either side of the jungle road to sell everything from beer and tacos to plastic sandals and straw hats.

When Greene visited Villahermosa in 1938—writing it later as the setting for his novel The Power and the Glory—he described it simply as "heat and flies, heat and flies."

It was in that same year that Mexico nationalized the British and American oil fields and created Pemex.

But the exploratory wells in Tabasco-Chiapas, first drilled in 1911, had not been greatly productive and it was not until 1970 that the Mexicans began their own explorations.

And it was not until new drilling techniques tapped deposits three miles below the swampy jungle floor in 1972 that Pemex officials realized that Mexico was oil-rich.

Drilling began in earnest last year and production in the region soared from 34,000 barrels a day in May, 1974, to more than 200,000 today.

Pemex officials have estimated that Mexican oil production will grow from the current 675,000 barrels a day to more than 800,000 by the end of the year.

Stepping Stones Nursery Gives One-to-one Care

Cathy Lodrow, a Bayside Secondary School student, works as a volunteer at the Stepping Stones Nursery as part of her field work in the senior psychology course. Here she plays with a young poil who would not be able to manage the swing alone.

At the Stepping Stones Nursery outside Trenton, 10 children enjoy the satisfying and creative experience of making and baking cookies, and then eating them all up.

What makes the occasion particularly worth notice is that these pre-schoolers are mentally handicapped. Through the encouragement and support of the nursery school's staff, these children are discovering a whole new world of things they can do.

Helping these children grow in confidence and in capability are Jean Voysey and two teachers Ruth Cubberry and Pam Bouchard. They are assisted by a team of 26 volunteers, so that the adult-to-child ratio remains at one-to-one. Secretary Vera Beale is part of the concerned staff too.

The Stepping Stones Nursery also depends on the student helpers from Bayside Secondary School and Trenton High School, who are allowed by their teachers to spend mornings working with the children. Students from East Northumberland Secondary School in Brighton come to assist in the weekly swimming program for which the children are taken to the CFB Trenton pool.

The love and attention that is lavished on these children yields rewarding results, says Mrs. Voysey.

"You can see the changes happening over the months," she says.

"What we aim to do here is to teach those kids to be self-sufficient. If they can learn the basics, they can learn socially acceptable behavior that will make life easier for them when they're adults.

"Given half a chance, these children can grow up to be responsible people who'll be able to help support themselves by working."

Mrs. Voysey has created what she terms a "very rigid program" in order to give the children a sense of security in getting to know the routine. Each morning has a carefully balanced schedule of free play and structured activity.

"During circle teaching, we may talk about colors, or shapes, or teach language formation skills. We sing songs and do things together at this time," explains Mrs. Voysey.

"During free play we spend time with individual children, helping them make physical progress, learning to walk, learning any number of activities.

"The children assist in the preparation of the morning snack, so that they are involved with the food all along the way. Teaching them self-feeding is important, since it'll make their lives easier outside of the school too.

"Children come here as young as two, and they needn't be potty-trained before they come," she stresses. "Visits to the bathroom are part of our routine here."

Although the nursery is geared to pre-school children, they may stay here until they're ready to move on to junior classes in a school for the mentally retarded.

The Stepping Stones Nursery has been in existence for more than seven years, but only this past fall moved into its present location — the former school for mentally retarded children — on Lafferty Road.

The school is spacious inside, with several carpeted and brightly-decorated rooms, furnished with a good variety of play-things and learning equipment. Much has been donated by local clubs such as the Trenton Kinettes, and many items have also been made locally, by involved parents or teen-agers. There are areas for every kind of activity, from sand and water play to finger-painting and snack-making.

Mrs. Voysey, who moved to the area with her husband who is in the armed forces, took over the job as head teacher two years ago. Her experience includes 12 years of public school teaching, plus work in a school for mentally retarded children in Halifax, and a Humber College course in this type of education to her credit.

One of the ideas I emphasize for the volunteers is that we do not think of these children as 'retarded'. Rather, we try to think of them as being at whatever age their present stage of development is," she says.

"For example, a child here may be four, but he may have the ability of a two-year-old. So we think of his progress being made from that point.

"If we can get these children early enough, there's almost nothing they can't be taught," she adds.

"I worry that there may still be families in the Belleville-Trenton area who don't know we're here. We still have room for ten more children, and since we're funded by the provincial government and the Trenton branch of the Canadian Association for the Mentally Retarded, we don't need to enforce even our $20 per month school fee.

"There are no parents with mentally handicapped children who need to worry about not being able to send them here. We have a bus service too, that does all the picking up and taking home.

"Children make such progress here. You know, some of the women and men who come to help are a little fearful at first. But before long they're enthusiastic, and really involved," says Jean Voysey.

"You just have to love these kids."

Pool Hall Image Changing

By RON HUSKER
(Loyalist Student)

In the last few years, "pool" has rapidly changed to the respectable title of "billiards." One reason for the change, says local pool owner, is to attract more women to the game.

"We've tried to change the image of the game to draw the girls into playing", says Peter Manis, owner of the Cue and Cushion, on Front Street Mr. Manis says he hopes pool will become as acceptable to both sexes as bowling is today.

George Poulos, owner of National Billiards, down the street, expresses the same view. "Right now, we have many couples who come in but rarely do the girls come in by themselves."

Both owners say they welcome female patrons, but add they feel it will take time.

A cross-section of some customers in both establishments showed a variety of opinions.

Arnie Donaldson, 21, says he brings his wife in "only when it's not busy. When it is busy, the language is pretty bad and it's not nice."

Shawn Sullivan, 15, says that he thinks girls do not "look good" when they play pool.

Pool players all admit that if they know a girl is playing nearby, profane laguage would stop. Both Mr. Poulos and Mr. Manis say that if male customers do not subdue their swearing habits they are asked to leave.

During the '30s, pool was closely associated with gambling and hustling, but this started to change during the '40s. Billiard halls now are well lit, and not the smokey dens of iniquity they were once considered to be. Many also have snacks bars, in the same manners as bowling alleys.

Quinte Directory: Forms Now Due!

The Quinte Women's Directory, published by The Intelligencer, is due to appear in June.

The directory, now in its second year, lists all the women's groups in the Belleville area. Each organization has its executive officers named. Also included is a description of its aims, activities, and membership requirements.

Photographs of executive officers, or of special occasions in which the group has taken part, may be included as well.

The Women's Department of The Intelligencer is now compiling the information for the directory, and will extend the deadline for submission of material and photographs until May 14.

There are still several groups that have not sent their forms, and we urge that this be done as soon as possible, since inclusion in the directory is the right of every women's club.

If your group has not yet held its spring elections, or if you have any queries about the directory's requirements, please phone the Women's Department between 8:30 a.m. and 2 p.m. from Monday to Friday, or visit the newspaper during those hours.

The vital role that women's groups play in the community's social, charitable and religious life is emphasized by the publication of the directory, and it is hoped that every organization will make an effort to be included.

This Grandma Doesn't Have Time to Grow Old

VANCOUVER (CP) — At 84, Lillie Parr is one lady who just has no time to grow old.

Since Mrs. Parr began volunteer service at the Children's Hospital in October, 1968, she has given more than 2,000 hours of her free time to provide various needed services at the hospital.

She says she had been bored and lonely, having moved to the uninvited city of Vancouver from Ontario.

Mrs. Parr has been a regular there for four or five hours, five days a week, since she began. The only time taken off was during the year ago she fell and broke her hip.

Yet even during her convalescence she managed to keep her hand in at magical sewing for the hospital.

Her hobby is as easy as most people half her age.

It requires three box tides and many hours at home sitting time for her to reach the goal of 1,745 each working. Part of that time is spent in her home with her friend, Miss Ann Landers.

Lillie Parr reads to a young patient at the Children's Hospital in Vancouver. She has been doing volunteer work there since October, 1968, providing needed services to the community as well as keeping her spry and active at the age of 84.

Mrs. Parr finds children, five grandchildren and five great-grandchildren, and lives with her son and his family. Her husband died about 20 years ago.

The hospital has almost become a home away from home for her. She still gets Christmas cards addressed to "Grandma" from some of the children from out of town who she visited and comforted during their period in the hospital.

Volunteers have less direct contact with child patients today but when Mrs. Parr first started she spent much of her time reading or playing games with the little ones. Now the nurses-in-training do much of this kind of work.

She spends her working time visiting children, folding diapers, sorting out the day's clean sheets, making swabs and doing similar chores.

Mrs. Parr remains a great believer in voluntary work. She has little time for those who complain that they "don't have time" "a dog to look after."

Ann Landers

No Booze for Bride's Baptist Folks

Dear Ann Landers: Our problem is one that has been causing a lot of anxiety in our family. We need an outside opinion from someone who is not a Baptist. You have been selected.

Our son is planning to be married on Aug. 8. The trouble is over the reception. The fiancee's parents are very strict Baptists. They do not drink any kind of liquor. Even spiked punch is out. The wedding will be held in the church and the reception which follows will take place in the church parlor.

Since my husband and I wish to respect their wishes we went along and made reservations at our country club for a second reception—for our friends. The bar will be set up and liquor will be served. We have engaged an orchestra for dancing. We think it will be a nice place, but we feel we have betrayed our son by not telling him that we had invited a lot of people who are not Baptists. We have also failed to tell our son that we had invited his fiancee's parents to the reception and that it would be considered a slap in the face by our future in-laws and their relatives.

How can we make him see our side?

Our son's fiancee is very anxious to please her future mother-in-law and is trying very hard to be a good sport. Our son is a very dull evening unless my husband and I entertain them in the manner to which they are accustomed.

Will you please come to the rescue, Ann?—Want To Be Right

Dear Want To Be Right: You have the wrong cage. It's a dead wrong.

The parents of the bride are putting on the wedding and reception. You and your relatives and friends should go along with whatever they have planned. If you can't get through the night without booze, then get plastered by yourself, after you get home.

Should you care to have a reception when the couple returns from their honeymoon, it would be perfectly proper to do so. You could then serve hooch and battery acid if you wanted to. It would be your party. But you would, I hope, have the Baptist beverages on hand for the bride's side—if they wish to attend.

Never Too Old To Learn

Contrary to what seems to be popular belief, you can teach an old dog new tricks. And contrary to the idea that old people have bad memories, there are many elderly persons who have beaten the rap of the years and who are doing thrilling failing memories to keep them going, and watching their physical well-being.

It may be hard to believe, but there are many elderly persons who have beaten the rap of the years and who are doing thrilling failing memories to keep them going, and watching their physical well-being.

Age and time go on there is some mental slowdown, but this is a slow-down, a slow down is so slight, so extremely gradual that it is hardly worth thinking about. You don't learn as easily at 80 as you did at 18 and better than you were younger than that.

Once at 80 you have learned something be remembered. Perhaps this may be because be concentrates when he is learning and he can relate it helpfully to knowledge gained through the years. All agree that you are never too old to learn.

Is there a community college in your area? Take a look at its fall calendar and pick out something you'd like to do one evening a week for a while. The variety of things you can learn about is fantastic.

Dear Doris: During the summer when many are enjoying aquatic activities it is not unusual that a minor problem occurs. In a number of the emergencies people stand and watch because they do not know what to do. Other times the incident may go unnoticed because those who are standing by do not recognize that the person is treading beside assistance.

Water rescue courses of the type offered through schools, YMCA's, summer camps, are in fact, places where an organized swimming program is in progress.

In an incident in Edmonton in January this year, the newspaper reported that good people just stood and watched while three people were immersed in very cold water at Rundle Park in Edmonton. The rescuers stood on shore, most of whom did not know what to do.

Finally, one man and a 13-year-old boy launched a boat from the ice and entered the open water to rescue two of the victims. Just watching does no good but participating in a program like ours and learning how to recognize someone in trouble and what to do will help avoid tragedy.—Joceelyn Pulm, Royal Life Saving Society Canada.

Dear Joceelyn: How awful to be one of those onlookers who feels desperately helpless in the face of tragedy! Readers will be writing in to you in care of the Royal Life Saving Society Canada, 550 Church Street, Toronto, M4Y 2E1, to learn how they can become a part of your program in training, right where they are. # Women's Week Program Improves Self Image

EDMONTON (CP) — The response to programs designed to improve the skills and self-image of Alberta's native women has been encouraging, says an agriculture department official.

Barbara Stroh, in charge of the programs under the department's extension division, said more emphasis is being placed on programs and services geared to the specific needs of the native people, which gives them in both planning and implementation.

Part of this new approach was the decision last year to use aboriginal women as home-economist aides to counsel the people who have been having in reaching native people with our traditional extension programs," she said.

The advisers and aides were chosen from people in Indian colonies and on Indian reserves who were familiar with the cultures and values of their communities.

The Blood reserve in southern Alberta, the largest in Canada, asked the department last year to hire an Indian woman as a home-economist aide and said they would provide the support and workers facilities required.

Blood Pelagan, Blackfoot, Hobbema Valley and Sarcee Indian reserve women participated in a five-day "live-in" personal development and science education course. Topics included building confidence, developing leadership skills, looking at values, potential personal development, nutrition, home management, home design and related subjects.

Mrs. Stroh said 39 women participated in the Metis Health colonies and the Saddle Lake and Good Fish Indian reserves took part in a regional program held in St. Paul area northwest of Edmonton.

It was the first time Indian and Metis women of the region had worked together on a common project.

At the meeting, one older woman told of delivering her own baby in the middle of winter. She said she was in the middle of extreme pain when the baby decided to appear. After she arrived she continued her planning.

Some of the women, shared information on native cures and remedies such as the use of birch bark for home which still is used today.

During Alberta Women's Week last May 200 native and native women took part both as crafts instructors and regular participants.

Mrs. Stroh said a typical statement at the end of the week was: "All my life I have disliked sewing. My experience during the last week changed all that for me.

"It was a real experience in self-growth."

The Women's Week program was so successful that two additional groups, the Saddle Lake Indian reserve have been requested to do the coordinating planning the 1975 program.

The trip up to Jean Smith's Boutique and Import Room is a trip in itself. Why not take your mother up to Actinolite and let her choose her own Jean Smith gift? It's a lovely drive and the selection of quality clothes and gifts is the best around. And from The West Wind and myself, a salute to those perpetual mothers-to-be — MOTHERS.

Special On Vacuum Bags

Gibbs and Son, 27 Albion St. are offering a special on all their vacuum bags. And aren't you all using a lot of them with our spring cleaning? Flower bags, which are regularly $1.25 a package are on for just 89 cents a package. And all other makes of bags are on sale beginning at 79 cents a package. Remember that Gibbs and Son, just as they can repair any kind of vacuum, stock every kind of vacuum bag, including those of department store makes such as Kenmore and Viking. While you're at Gibbs and Son, you can see all the changes they have been busy making in order to show you their wide range of consumer products — not just their vacuums, new and re-conditioned.

A New Face

We welcome a new face to our fair town today — Christopher V. Davies, the new manager of the Four Seasons. Mr. Davies was educated in Canterbury, Kent, and at the age of 17, left for the West Indies, where he began his career in the hotel industry. He attended the renowned Hotel School of Cornell University and worked in the Barbados where he was the manager of Sam Lord's Castle. In 1971, Mr. Davies came to Canada and joined the Four Seasons organization at The Inn On The Park. From Rooms Division Manager, he was recently promoted to the manager of the Page Boy Lounge and began his new duties just this week. Welcome Mr. Davies and his wife Cecelia. Being an avid cross-country skier, sailor and trap and skeet shot, Mr. Davies should enjoy our area. He'd like to extend an invitation to you to go and introduce yourselves to him the next time you're at the Four Seasons.

A Nice Surprise

I received a nice surprise when I called Moira Schaster this week. Her husband, who has been in the same hotel as now back in harness. And it was great to hear his cheery 'Hello'. You'll get a great surprise too when you visit the Aquafine Water Refiner from Moira Schaster and see what it does to your water . . . and in turn, to your skin, hair and clothes. With Aquafine's soft water, you don't need any miracle products to soften or condition; it's all right there in the water. And Aquafine Water Refiners have safety features that, particularly important to residents along the bay, or in areas where the water is not reliable. An Aquafine specialist will fit the right refiner to the right needs in your home. Just call 962-4594. Get a jump on that water before it gets the jump on you.

More About Eye Care

Despite the weekend's rain, we've had some marvelous days of sunshine. And if you haven't been wearing your sunglasses, you should be. But the right kind of sunglasses is very important. Sunglasses aren't merely a fashion accessory; they're a safety precaution. Trenton Optical, 24 Bridge St. E. keep eyes and they know sunglasses too. If you wear glasses, a visit to Trenton Optical soon is a must. You've only got one pair of eyes and Old Mr. Sun has been around for a long time and will continue to be. You wouldn't like him to get the best of you now, would you? See Trenton Optical and you'll always keep on seeing in the best possible manner.

The Men Behind The Meat

Things are pretty exciting down at Murray's Feed Market on Front St., what with the cashier taking over the produce department for a while. And the men behind the meat counter are feeling a little left out. And what's a great supermarket without its great meat department? Al Murray's, Carl Clarke, Michael Lynch and John Dell, handle only the best in Grade A Red Brand meat — they don't scrimp on quality — NEVER. At Murray's, you get the good old-fashioned butcher-shop atmosphere, with the smiles to match, right in the middle of a modern bustling grocery store. First time you're in Murray's, be sure and say hello to the boys. They'll feel better — and so will you!

In Case You Missed It

Roddy Electric's Consumer Division, 291 Coleman St., received some interest in the Kator Portable Electric Furnace I mentioned in last week's column. In case you missed it, here are the details again. And any person at Roddy would be glad to supply you with more. Just drop in or call 968-3141. The amazing little unit is for cottages, which is a concern uppermost in many of your minds. This little machine hooks up like a dryer and functions on one outlet. It's also a great idea for rec rooms. But if you're an early arriver and late stayer in your cottage, Kator and Roddy can make the stay a whole lot more comfortable. And if it's cottage lighting you need, Roddy can help you there too, of course.

It Shows New

Without the complementary blessings of the winter white of the snow, that house of yours which is in need of painting certainly shows it, doesn't it? And the fact that you need to paint it is more aggravating when you know you will have to do it again and again. Well, you needn't do it again and again. Al Iyoni need do is to call Highland Construction at 962-1181. They will install that wonder substance known as vinyl siding and you won't have to worry about the exterior of your home for the next thirty years or so. Vinyl is water-resistant, wear-resistant and child-resistant. Why not get that job done once and for all? And if you want to look at what you've gotten just visit Highland Construction's Home Improvement Centre at 257 North Front Street.

More People Needed

ServiceMaster is really serious about expanding its household services. And to do this, ServiceMaster needs reliable and conductious people who are interested in receiving stupendous rewards for the effort expended. If you are such a person, don't hesitate to call Mr. Teed at the ServiceMaster office at 967-1675. On the other hand if you are a busy person who requires the services of such a person to help you maintain an efficient household, then you should note the ServiceMaster number also and dial it too. I really don't see how anyone can lose in this operation.

Holiday Plans

If you don't own a car, or if the car you do own is not trustworthy for holiday travel, then here's the name that can help you get that motoring holiday safely and efficiently — Holiday Car and Truck Rentals at 11 West Moira St. You'll have a wide selection of the finest in Chrysler products at your fingertips. Or maybe your holiday is going to include a quiet time at your cottage, but in order to make that time comfortable, you need a truck to get your "comforts of cottage" where they will do the most good. Holiday can help you there too. One phone call or visit to Holiday Car and Truck Rentals may mean the difference between a vacation that works and one that doesn't. And who wants to wait until next year? Call Holiday at 962-8114.

Big Mining Firms Renew Search for Gold in Brazilian Wilds

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Big mining companies with mammoth budgets and teams are searching anew in Brazil for gold, which sent hirings about $180 an ounce on world markets.

The mining companies, both Brazilian and foreign, are spending millions in a search throughout Brazil's vast hinterlands.

Private prospectors with smaller sums are panning and sluicing remote rivers in the Amazon basin. A Brazilian news dispatch said some are flying over the jungle from the gold fever.

When Brazil was a Portuguese colony in the 18th and 19th centuries, it was a major world producer of gold. But Brazilian production now is dwarfed by international standards—4.5 tons a year compared to South Africa's world-leading 1000 tons.

But the rich colonial past and the fact that huge areas have yet to be fully explored give hope to many who have been bitten by the Brazilian gold bug.

"There really could be a lot of gold," said a foreign diplomat who specializes in mineral resources. "I know of at least half a dozen important foreign companies that are extremely interested."

"You've got literally thousands of these 'garimperos' or prospectors who just go to the river with a pan, like they used to do in the Yukon."

The richest gold-panning area is along the Tocantins River, near a new town named Rainha on the still-unfinished Transamazon Highway.

The government calculates that more than a ton of gold came from the Tocantins area in 1973. But it is known that much of what the prospectors find they do not report to the government—to avoid taxes.

The newspaper Jornal do Brasil said most of the prospectors in the Rainha area lead a hard life.

"They never get rich and they don't hesitate to kill for a few grams of gold," the paper said.

"Just to give you an idea, there are four cemeteries there already," said Walter Butler, an American minerals consultant in Brazil. "Some of the prospectors have gravel pumps. And some but do it with panning.

"It really just like 1848, with sluice boxes and everything."

Butler said many mining companies, including some of his clients, are hoping to find a riverbed with enough gold to justify full-scale dredging. A big dredging operation would require an investment of $3 million to $15 million.

The consultant said there are "interesting prospects" in several Brazilian states.

In an official sign of optimism, the government last year loaned a Brazilian company $700,000 to prospect for gold at the headwaters of two rivers in Parana state in Brazil's south. The national department of mineral production says it is taking many other steps to increase Brazilian gold production.

International interest in Brazil's gold also has perked up with rises in the price.

"Prospecting companies have been coming here steadily for three years," Butler said. "They're all looking for gold, even U.S. Steel."

U.S. Steel has bigger interests in Brazil than gold, but a vice-president of the company's main subsidiary here confirmed that it filed in 1974 for prospecting rights on 1,350 acres in the interior state of Goias.

The executive, Milton Rasende, said that because of increased gold prices, "there is a world of companies" filing similar claims.

One of those companies is the Anglo American Corp. of South Africa Ltd., a world leader in gold mining. Wyn Davies, an Anglo American officer in Brazil, said the company is developing a hard-rock claim in the northeastern state of Bahia.

Asked how much the company had invested in the project, he said, "You can certainly say several million dollars."

A foreign geologist with another company said, "I think those deposits that Anglo is exploring have something significant."

Currently, the Morro Velho mine in Minas Gerais state is the only underground mine in Brazil that produces significant amounts of gold.

Davies said Anglo American also is looking into the possibility of reopening old Brazilian gold mines that were closed as unprofitable before prices went up.

Other foreign companies reported to be actively interested in finding Brazilian gold include Brascan Ltd. of Canada; St. Joe Minerals Corp. and International Exc. of the United States and the Esso and Shell Oil companies.

Total gold production in Brazil climbed from 5.1 tons in 1971 to 6.8 tons in 1973, according to the ministry of mines. The 1974 figure has not been issued.

By far the largest portion of Brazilian gold comes from the Morro Velho mine, which turns out about five tons a year.

Its main shaft reaches a depth of 8,000 feet and known gold reserves are 140 tons, the company says.

Delio Matos, commercial director for Morro Velho, said the company hopes to increase its annual yield from five tons to eight tons within three years.

Colonial records show that more than 1,000 tons of gold were taken from Brazil between 1725 and 1823. It was shipped to Europe to help finance the Portuguese monarchy.

Brazil now imports gold to help meet the needs of jewelers and other users. It spent $6.3 million in 1973 buying about two tons of gold abroad.

Arthritis Often Met By Apathy

TORONTO (CP) — A research team is out to prove that rheumatoid arthritis is not an untreatable disease.

The researchers are in the middle of a five-year study to find out whether specially-trained physiotherapists and standardized assessment methods can help a family doctor do more for his rheumatoid patients in their own homes.

"That kind of apathy, by doctors and patients, that 'probably it isn't going to do any good anyway' is the biggest obstacle we face," said Dr. Hugh Smythe.

Dr. Smythe is head of the University of Toronto rheumatic diseases unit at Wellesley Hospital which is co-sponsoring the study with the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society.

The study team faced a major problem when it started research. Although 420 doctors in Toronto were asked to refer women with rheumatoid arthritis for the study, only 10 patients were found at first.

Dr. Smythe blamed the lack of response partly on the sense of hopelessness about arthritis that afflicts doctors and patients.

Arthritis is one form or another is one of mankind's commonest afflictions. There are more than 100 joints in the human body that can be affected by rheumatoid arthritis.

In Ontario, the total healthcare cost incurred for people afflicted with arthritic disorders is about 70 per cent higher than for the average patient.

Canada has about 125 rheumatologists, a great increase in the last decade. Even so, only three to five per cent of all arthritic patients in Canada will get to a specialist.

That's the problem challenged by the study.

"The family doctor has to be central to the care of the arthritic patient," Dr. Smythe said.

"It's useless designing a system around specialists when 95 per cent of patients are going to be looked after by general practitioners.

"The family doctor cannot be a specialist—there simply isn't time in his training for specialist knowledge in all fields—but we hope to be able to help him become more efficient at treating the rheumatoid patient.

"It will be better for the patient and more rewarding for the doctor."

The study aims to develop a program whereby physiotherapists and doctors work together, using a standardized assessment method, as "a stronger team than either one of them separately," the doctor said.

The 15-month study will cost about $156,000 — most of it provided by the Ontario health resources development fund.

Altered Fares Bring Him Work

EDMONTON (CP) — When taxi fares change in Edmonton, Walter Chorney goes to work.

The 43-year-old machinist estimates he will be changing the gears in about 600 taxi meters because of a recent raise in fares approved by city council. He has been working on meters since the 1950s when he had a company that specialized in fitting removable speedometers and dashboard instruments.

Mr. Chorney and his six sons of th ee worked in his basement for five weeks after their regular jobs and on weekends to change the meters following the last increase in 1973.

All the drivers want their meters changed first, but Mr. Chorney makes them wait their turn. Some offer the enticement of a bottle of liquor so their meter will get prompt attention, but Mr. Chorney refuses.

The 10 most asked questions about the new $1,500 Ontario Home Buyers Grant.

What does it take to be eligible for this new Grant?

Very simply, you must first be a resident of Ontario, 18 years of age or older. And second, the home must be your principal residence and the first housing unit bought or built by you, your spouse, your co-owner or the spouse of the co-owner.

You mean it has nothing to do with how much I make or how much the house costs?

That's right. There are no income restrictions, nor are there any restrictions on the price of the housing unit, as long as the purchase price is equal to the fair market value. As well, the grant applies to new and older homes alike.

What do you mean by "housing unit"?

A housing unit is defined as a unit suitable for permanent habitation that provides living, sleeping, eating and food preparation facilities for one family.

The housing unit may be:

a) a house containing not mor than two housing units

b) a condominium

c) a unit of a co-operative housing corporation

d) a mobile home that meets prescribed standards defined by the Canadian Standards Association.

I've been thinking of buying a home but I haven't done anything definite yet. Is there any time limit?

Yes. You must complete the purchase of the housing unit between April 8, 1975 and December 31, 1975 and reside in this housing unit as your principal residence by June 30, 1976.

Can we use the $1,500 for our down payment?

Not directly, since you will not receive the grant until after you own and reside in your housing unit.

How do I apply for the $1,500 Grant?

To apply, you must file an application with the Ministry of Revenue. You will be mailed the initial $1,000 cheque after your application is approved. If you continue to live in the house you will receive, upon reapplication, an additional cheque for $250 in each of the next two years on the anniversary date of your qualification for the initial grant. In all $1,500.

When should I file my application?

You should file it after you own the housing unit and reside in it as your principal residence.

if we qualify for the Ontario Home Buyers Grant, will we still be eligible for other housing grants?

Yes. This is a new grant from the Province of Ontario and does not affect participation in other programs.

How do I get the application form?

You can get applications by writing:
Ministry of Revenue
Ontario Home Buyers Grant
Queen's Park
Toronto, Ontario M7A 2C9
Also application forms have been made available through many realty offices and trust companies.

Just one more thing—how can I get more information about all of this, if I need it?

You can phone us, free of charge, by dialing "0" and asking the operator for Zenith 8-2000. Residents within Metro Toronto local calling area should dial 965-8470. Phone lines are open from 8 to 8 weekdays, and from noon until 5 on Saturday.

The $1,500 Home Buyers Grant is just part of the picture.

Ontario understands how important it is to have a home of your own. And we'd like to help out with a grant of $1,500 towards your first home. It's part of an overall plan to make more homes available in Ontario. And stimulate our economy. So it's good for all of us.

Ian Thomas Takes City by Storm

Ian Thomas is a Hamilton boy who made it good in the Canadian record industry and showed how he did it in Centennial Secondary School Thursday night. He was a Juno Award winner last year as Canada's most promising male vocalist. Despite his credentials of awards, three albums and two top singles, only a handful showed up for Thursday's performance.

Ian Thomas Great . . . Except for Small Crowd

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Everything was great Thursday night at the Ian Thomas show — everything except the size of the crowd.

The Quinte Arts Council this year added a rock concert to the year's slate of activities for Artfest — a move to give more focus to youth in the city.

The show held in Centennial Secondary School theatre, was poorly attended bringing at least financial failure, said Manfred Koehlin, representing the Arts Council.

For the band's part, it was a terrific evening.

Ian Thomas is something of a jack of all trades but what makes him special is he's Canadian and he's succeeding in the competitive business of selling talent.

A one-time producer with the CBC, Thomas brings an easy charm to the stage along with musical versatility and a strong voice.

The show opened with the

IN THE SPOTLIGHT

Linda Boyd, the Toronto classical guitarist, is in demand across Canada. She has engagements coming up in Vancouver, Montreal and Calgary and a Yukon tour in 1976.

COVERAGE OF GAMES

Sportscaster Bob Moir is to be executive producer of CBC's English-language coverage of the 1976 Olympic Games in Montreal.

PACKAGE TO BRITAIN

Grenada Television in Britain has purchased a package of 18 programs from CBC TV — all part of the network's Nature of Things series.

Thomas' most popular recording Painted Ladies and was highlighted by a stretched out version of Julia, the top cut off the band's third and newest album Delights.

A peculiar blend of folk, rock and ballad, the music is sentimental but lends itself to foot stomping and hand clapping.

Thomas's band is a well-rounded package that would do any singer justice.

Steve Hagg plays bass and jobs with Thomas to give terrific depth and power to vocal harmonies — all which were perfectly audible over the thunder of instruments.

Referred to as the band's token minority person," Josh Onderisin played tastefully in his role as lead guitarist — never crossing the line from classy to splashy.

Hugh Syme played key board for the band with Michael T. Obrie on drums.

The Juno Award — Canada's trubote to the music industry — was presented to Thomas last year for most promising male voce list.

He kept his promise in Belleville Thursday.

Tax Increases Held to Minimum

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Bellevilians left tonight will know how much they must pay to operate their city for 1975.

City council went into special session at 11:30 p.m. today in view of its proposed budget for the year.

Contents of the document were not publicly revealed until the debate began, although councillors have been studying the estimates distributed to them Wednesday night.

But indications are that if the budget is to bring a mill rate increase, the boost may not be as demanding as feared earlier at a time when provincial government authorities had warned against a crunch year in municipal financing.

The estimations are drawn from the comments — albeit closely guarded, of council members, initially reacting to proposals prepared by city manager Wilbur Purcell.

"I think he (Mr. Purcell) has presented a budget that the citizens of this community can accept," believed Mayor Robin Jeffery.

Ald. Jack Ireland felt the city manager had done an "excellent job in holding it down —in view of the increase in various estimates from all (city hall) departments."

Mr. Purcell's assignment has been to estimate how much the city could safely shoulder for its operation costs in 1975 — a year that has seen inflation — in wages, services and supplies — hit municipal treasuries.

Last year it cost $12 million to operate the city — resulting in a residential tax rate of $1.1 mills, the typical homeholder is assumed to pay an average $218 on such a rate based on $18,000 assessment.

But the final estimate for 1975 is up to this afternoon's budget session after council combs the estimates.

Despite general foreboding in the year started, the city budget draft was also injected with some optimistic effects:

Provincial grants were up; by its assessment; there is a $400,000 surplus; education demands, although up 2.28 mills for the ci ty, were not as high as feared earlier — again due to higher grants.

The relief brought by hoper provincial subsidies was expressed by Ald. Ireland in his budget reaction:

"I was scared that the tax rate was going to out of hand — and it said. But now the proposed rate is 'not as bad as I feared.'"

Ald. Paul Russell said from what he'd seen of the draft budget he wasn't "happy with it" and didn't know what he can do about it. I think we'll continue to live with it.

"But," he admitted, "to be quite honest, I'm surprised it is as good as it is. I had visions of a budget that was way out. I'm even better than I expected it would be."

Ald. Cox was reserved to the point: "I like the outcome. I can live within reason."

Added Ald. Wally Dever: "My initial reaction was very favorable. I don't suppose it's as bad as I thought it was going to be."

He said all councillors were striving "in holding the line.

How people will receive the budget, when it's passed, I don't know. But I would support they'd be pleased.

Ald. Arthur Keegan said he wouldn't vote for any budget that introduced a tax increase above five mills. High taxation is one of the threats to attracting new industry, he warned.

Ald. Ireland was among councillors indicating he would question parts of the estimates.

Mayor Jeffery agreed some changes needed discussing. But these would not affect the recommended budget "to any extent," she believed.

"I think it's a budget council likely will accept with a few changes," added the mayor.

Two Parties Await Date

Both Liberal and Conservative party associations in Belleville and Hastings Co. are common attitude these days

If a provincial election is called for early summer they'll wait until it's official before endorsing candidates.

This is the impression received by the legislature by Correctional Services Minister Richard Potter.

Gerry Brennan, president of the constituency's Progressive Conservative association, says his organization will wait until Premier William Davis has "a mandate" to call provincial before his party will call a nominating meeting.

Lyn Harrington, who heads the riding's Liberal association had the same response. "I'm in the dark" of an early summer election.

Potter, described as election not be called in mid-year, the federal association likely will hold a nomination meeting until closer to fall — possibly late September, said Mr. Harrington.

Mr. Potter, the only political party which has a candidate in the field is the New Democratic Party, Carson McLaughlin, 30-year-old Belleville railroad employee, has been campaigning since his nomination in mid-March.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following calls for assistance during a 24-hour period which ended at 8 a.m. today.

Thursday, May 8, 12:21 p.m. — Two men rescued from car in Mazda Motors at rear of 8 and D Motors at 248 Front St.

Thursday, May 8, 3:55 p.m. — Grass fire at George Vanier Elementary School, no damage, out on arrival.

The Educators

Bridge Work

Swing bridge on Highway 14 linking Belleville and Rossmore has been undergoing repairs again with return of fine weather. Work, below bridge deck, calls for reinforcing supports, here being welded by Wayne Dall.

Century Place Starts Going Up This Month

Actual construction of Century Place will begin in the latter part of the month with contractors hopeful for completion of a floor a month with the project noted in by next Christmas.

Allen Devries, project superintendent for Cornerstone Construction, said there are no special problems anticipated in the project and all should be completed with spacy available for occupatory by July of 1976.

At peak construction periods this summer, the project will employ up to 100 workers, including all be sub-trades required for completion of the $5-million development.

Century Place will have basement parking for building tenants, then two floors of retail space topped off with three floors of office space and finally a penthouse apartment, according to builder's drawings.

The building will stand 84 feet tall and will be highlighted by approximately 5,700 square feet of glass wall facing the intersection of Bridge and Front Sts., said Mr. Devries, "it's the biggest project I've ever worked on."

Check Cat For Rabies

A cat which attacked a two-year-old city girl at about 7 p.m. Monday has been located and is being held by the Ontario Humane Society (Quinte branch) for 14 days to determine if it has rabies.

A city police spokesman said today Denise Shields of 30 Octavia St. bent down to pet the cat near her home. The animal scratched her stomach and bit her on the neck, he said.

The spokesman said the cat was found at 58½ Catharine St late Thursday and the owners have co-operated fully.

The girl was treated and released from Belleville General Hospital.

Hearing Is Believing

A lot of Canadians are walking a round with hearing problems and they don't even know it, according to hearing specialists at the Quinte Mall this weekend. Brian Croft here takes a quick test to hear just how much he can hear with staff ready to advise him if he needs a check up at his doctor's office. The exhibit which continues through Saturday is connected with Deaf Awareness Week.

Lock Study Revealing

St. Thomas' Thieves Entered Basement

Investigation into the condition of locks on the basement and vestry office doors of St. Thomas' Anglican Church continues as unknown thief or thieves broke into the building via the basement door and exited through the vestry door, a police spokesman said Thursday.

Det. Sam Morgan, who is working with Paul McKercher of the Ontario Fire Marshal's office on the April 29 blaze which gutted the church, said in an interview the locks were studied by the Corbin Lock division of International Hardware Co. of Canada Ltd.

He noted the vestry office door and the basement door, situated on the north side of the church, are the least noticeable for anyone to quickly discover anything wrong.

Det. Morgan also pointed out two items which were discovered out of their usual locations after the fire were two metal gooseneck for microphones. They were found in the vestry office.

However, one was on a microphone sitting on the pulpit and the other was in a toolbox elsewhere in the church. No evidence of the microphone has been found but Det. Morgan said some microphones are made of plastic so it is difficult to determine if it was stolen also. The toolbox was consumed by fire.

A portion of candle, consumed at both ends, was found outside the east wall of the church following the blaze. Mr. McKercher has told St. Thomas' council of the vestry it might have been used for illumination by intruders.

Det. Morgan said it is of a type used in the parish hall and in other locations in the city. He emphasized it might have no relation to the fire and added efforts are attempting to determine where it came from.

He pointed out nothing has been established from a report by witnesses that the church organ was heard being played at about 6:15 p.m. on the evening prior to the fire.

He said there remains a possibility the organ was heard playing two days before by someone who had business in the church.

Church officials have accoumed for the whereabouts of everyone with access to the church and the ability to play that organ on the previous evening and none of those people was in the church at the time.

It has also been noted there are few people in the Belleville area with the sensitivity to play that type of organ.

Walls Key in Restoration

The condition of the walls of the gutted St. Thomas Anglican Church is a key factor in the restoration of the 150-year-old structure to its former elegance, says insurance adjuster Gerry Brennan.

He said members of St. Thomas' council of the vestry tests of the walls have been made and show "the mortar has turned very, very sandy" in the upper portion of the north wall and in the area of the tower.

Its exploitation the smoke went through the stone which has become brittle. He said it is unknown at present how far down the walls pitted will have to be removed before solidity is discovered.

Mr. Brennan said restoration hinges on the success of an application to the Ontario Heritage Foundation for funds. He noted it would be "a prohibitive expenditure" for church officials to attempt restoration on their own.

He remarked concern has been voiced in high places. "This structure that burned is a portion of the city of Belleville," he commented.

Public Advised to Keep Distance

Anyone not associated with St. Thomas' Anglican Church or not participating in the investigation of its fire last week is advised to keep a distance from the gutted structure at the corner of Church and East Bridge streets.

Members of St. Thomas' council of the vestry voiced their concern this week for the safety of persons who have an inclination to cross a snow fence barrier which has been erected around the church.

It was reported the walls and tower are in an unsafe condition and could collapse at any time. Councillors have particularly asked parents to warn their children to keep away from the area.

Student Centre Opens Wednesday

The Canada Manpower Centre for Students (CMCS) will re-open for another summer's activity Wednesday with an official opening at 10 a.m.

Located in the East Dundas St., CMCS will operate until around the end of August or early September. It will be open each week from Monday to Friday from 8:15 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Peter Fleming, student placement officer, said representatives are working at CMCS at present and inquiries can be made by visiting the centre. He said telephones will be installed and until the new numbers are announced, telephone inquiries can be made to the Canada Manpower Centre (CMC) at 968-8681.

Dignitaries invited for the official opening are Jack Ellis Hastings MP, Mayor Robin Jeffrey, Don Sellen, secretary-manager of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, Jack Sieveley of the Belleville Committee for Employment, manager Jim White and Hans Fraser of the CMC.

Groups Discuss Emergencies

CLOYNE — The Northern Emergency Organization will hold a public meeting at the township hall in this village June 3 at 7:30 p.m.

First aid people, nurses, firemen, members of snowmobile clubs and other interested persons are urged to attend with a view to co-ordinate all emergency services in the area.

Safety movie will also be shown by the Ontario Provincial Police.

Study Tweed Geology

TWEED — Twenty-six senior geology students from Brock University are in Tweed for two weeks, learning to make geological maps and reports.

One student is from Nigeria, while the others are from different parts of Ontario and Canada. This is the fifth year that students from Brock University have attended a field school in Tweed.

The party is accompanied by Dr. Jaan Terasmae and Dr. Peter Peach formerly of the University of Toronto, now of Brock University, and five instructors. Dr. Peach has been coming to Tweed with students for the past 20 years.

The students are doing field survey work in the Bogart, Otter Creek and Thomasburg areas. Classroom work is done at the senior public school, where they are travelling in operation from the staff.

The party is staying at the Peach Hollow Cottages.

Dr. Peach states that they were very happy to find the farmers most co-operative and that their help is greatly appreciated by all concerned.

Campaign Under Way

TWEED — Red shield canvassers are at work in the village and area with the proceeds going to assist the district of The Salvation Army in Canada and Bermuda. There will not be a special bite night held in the village this year. Campaign chairman and organizer is Mrs. Gerry Wilbenden.

Pellet Guns Illegal : Chief

City police are alarmed by the use of pellet guns by youths within Belleville, Chief Constable Chief Douglas Crosbie.

"I don't think the parents realize it's against the law to discharge these guns in the city limits," he said in an interview Thursday.

Chief Crosbie added, "a lot of parents are buying their children the guns unwittingly, not knowing it's against the law".

"They are considered a firearm," he pointed out.

Chief Crosbie said so far this year a young girl has been accidentally struck by a pellet while in her home, another youth was shot at and other youths have been shooting at each other in some sort of game.

"The most important thing is the safety of the people," he commented. "We were very fortunate that the one young person didn't lose her eye."

Swamp Fire

Amelissburg firemen were sent to a blaze in Mississauga Marsh Thursday. The fire, two miles south of Mississauga Public Shool, burned over about eight acres.

Late Starter

Ken Wormald, the 51-year-old superintendent of business with the Hastings County Board of Education, was a late-comer to education only joining the ranks in 1969 after 25 years in private business. Mr. Wormald said he wouldn't think about leaving the field now.

Man Holding Purse Strings Late-comer to Education

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is the second of a series featuring county educators. The personality sketches include teachers, administrators and trustees.

BY RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

The man who now holds the purse strings for the Hastings County Board of Education had nothing to do with education until 1969 — today, he wouldn't think of having.

At 51, superintendent of business Ken Wormald says leaving private industry to join the board of education has been one of the great stimulating experiences of his life. Joining the board in 1969, Mr. Wormald has seen the budget grown from $15 million the first year to $31.87 million in 1975. He claim he would rather not take credit for.

Born at Thorold, Ontario, Mr. Wormald was raised and educated in this area and later graduated from the University of Toronto in 1948 with a Bachelor of Commerce. He became a chartered accountant in 1950 and worked with an industry at St. Catharines before coming to Belleville in 1962 with Mead-Johnson.

"When the first board was formed in 1969 I wanted to be on a new developing organization and be a part of a pioneer spirit I suppose," said Mr. Wormald, who is married with three children.

He particularly enjoys the academic side of his position although he says it is not isolated from the financial and business aspects of the board. "We are included into the educational issues and problems which help set the tone in with the whole process," explained Mr. Wormald.

He sees the role of the business arm as supportive. "Our function here is provide service to the academic side which eventually gets on with the job of teaching children," he added. The board is now the county's largest employer with a total personnel of 1,578.

This is a very "people-oriented business, in fact about 70 per cent of the budget goes for salaries — it makes the financial work more interesting," he said. Mr. Wormald also said he finds the leadership of high quality at the board.

As superintendent of business Mr. Wormald also has to keep on top of the Education et as it applies to administration and the handling of finances. With new regulations each year governing education spendings and ceilings it keeps the finance arm of the board busy.

Foe of Commercialism in Sports, Avery Brundage Dead at 87

AVERY BRUNDAGE

GARMISCH - PARTENKIRCHEN, Germany (AP) — "Sports is a pastime and a diversion," Avery Brundage once said. "The minute it becomes more than that, it's business or work."

The man who used that credo to battle commercialism and politics in sports, especially the international competition, for a half century—finished by 20 years' service as president of the International Olympic Committee—died here Thursday. He was 87.

With the fervor of an old-time evangelist, at least one critic said, Brundage battled pay-for-play professionalism to protect his brand of amateurism from a materialistic world. His crusade often earned for him the images of a grumpy scold, often tactless and unsphmatic.

He ended two decades as IOC president at Munich's 1972 Summer Olympics which were scarred by the death of 11 Israeli athletes following an attack by a Palestinian terror group.

With one final fervent cry against commercialism, particularly the Winter Olympics and Alpine skiing, Brundage stepped down as president. Lord Killanin took over the leadership of the Olympics.

Weary and lonely following the death in 1971 of his first wife, the Detroit-born Brundage retired, admitting that years of controversy over such things as communism, racism, nationalism and, above all, commercialism, had taken its toll.

He gave away his collection of Oriental art, valued in the millions, to the city of San Francisco. He sold most of his holdings in Chicago and in the United States. And once again he set his sights on finding a wife he married at 18 in a German princess nearly 40 years his senior.

Brundage and his bride retired to the Bavarian winter sports resort of Garmisch-Partenkirchen in the Bavarian Alps, scene of the 1936 Winter Olympics.

It was here Thursday night Brundage died of a heart attack. He had been a patient in the small district hospital, so therfore said, for the last two weeks, after suffering another heart trouble. The second Mrs. Brundage, formerly Mariana Princess Ksaver, and other relatives

Sabres Advance to Cup Final

When It Counted, Habs Found Wanting

MONTREAL (CP) — Coach Scotty Bowman of Montreal Canadiens quietly pocked a lab coat a soft drink can in the Montreal dressing room Thursday night.

A group of reporters had chortled around him to hear the explanation of a 4-3 loss suffered by Montreal to Buffalo Sabres, which enabled the Sabres to win their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final series 4-2.

"I don't know," Bowman said in subdued tones. "We just didn't have it tonight. We just didn't put three good periods together, except for two games in the series.

"Buffalo played a very fine second period. That fourth goal (by Rick Martin in the second period) gave them a big lift. It was — eventually the winning goal.

The Canadiens, who won 7-4 and 4-1 Forum ice earlier in the series, started off with a furious offensive assault, but only Peter Mahovlich found the range against Buffalo netminder Gerry Desjardins in the opening period.

Meanwhile, Craig Ramsay, Rick Martin and Pete McNab scored forBuffalo in the opening session with Ramsay's goal at 2:-07 coming with the Sabres shorthanded. Lorentz got the Sabres goal of the period with Guy LaDeur and Mahovlich scoring for Montreal in the third.

"We had some pretty good chances," said Bowman. "Desjardins made some good saves."

Buffalo coach Floyd Smith agreed. "He kept us in first. He came up big for us all year. All season long, he made big saves for us. He made the saves when he had to."

While the Canadiens were strong in the opening session they faded badly in the second, scoring only three shots, two of them with less than 10 seconds to go.

Montreal kept making the fundamental mistcues that Bowman had complained about in the fifth game and in some way were lucky they trailed by only three goals entering the final session.

Many of the mistakes were made by veteran defenceman Serge Savard and several times during the middle session, many of the crowd of 18,126 booed Savard each time he touched the puck.

"I was happy with the way they checked in the second," said Smith. "We didn't give them a good scoring chance."

Ramsay, one of Buffalo's best players in the series, said the Sabres had decided to play a certain close-checking brand of hockey against Montreal Thursday and it worked.

"We waited for them to make mistakes," he said. "Sometimes we got an early load and we waited for the breaks and got them.

"It's not our usual style, but it certainly worked."

Buffalo played with not the services of Don Luce, out with a bad shoulder, forcing Smith to move Lee Fogolin and Larry Carriera in Luce's penalty-killing spot alongside Ramsay.

The Sabres now will have at least four days rest while they await the winner of the fifth final round. Philadelphia Flyers were hooked from the team for Milnes aboard the ship which ex-

Up to Their Old Tricks

Islanders Just Won't Throw in the Towel

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — Once again, the upstart New York Islanders have tarnished the pride of the Stanley Cup champion Philadelphia Flyers who suddenly have found themselves holding a tiger by the tail.

The Islanders cut Bernie Parent, the best goalie in the National Hockey League, down in mid size, scoring a 5-1 victory over the Flyers Thursday night in the fifth game of their semi-final playoff.

The Islanders have captured the imagination of those who have underdogs with their gritty comeback in the playoffs, first against Pittsburgh Penguins and now Philadelphia.

The Flyers had a 3-0 lead in this series but suddenly the Islands have cut that to 3-2 and the sixth game is scheduled Sunday afternoon in Uniondale, N.Y., and a seventh, if necessary, on Tuesday in Philadelphia.

New York capitalized on its power play for the first goal in the first period when J. P. Parise drove in a Pelyk shot that beat Parent in the far corner. From then on, the Islanders kept building their lead until it grew to 4-0 midway in the third period.

The Flyers finally broke through goalie Glenn Resch who was remarkable and lucky in the New York nets, taking away his shutout at 15:18 when Tom Bladon's shot went in off Bob Kelly's skate.

Even more humiliating to the Flyers was the fact that the fourth and fifth Islanders goals came on breakaways by Bob Nystrom and Gerry Hart.

The Islanders showed they had skate with the defending champions and do everything they do even a little better.

New York withstood a 17-shot attack in the second period and that, said Flyers coach Fred Shera, was the turning point.

The defensive minded Shera heaped special praise on the way the Islanders have been blocking shots and covering their own zone. "They're very good at blocking. They got four defencemen in the game and they are outstanding in that respect."

Billy Harris put the game out of the Flyers' reach after they had exhausted themselves shooting. Harris stayed a 4-0 foot shot that Parent stopped with his glove but he lost control as he turned and the puck dropped behind him.

But Dronin's picture goal stood out.

"It reminds me of the old days when I first broke into the league," said Dronin, who seemed for a while I had lost all these moves but I think they're coming back with me now."

On the play, started by Ed Westfall, Dronin sped down the left wing, beat defenceman Bobby Orr with a fake and fired the puck over Parent's left shoulder from about 15 feet out. The puck stayed in off the goal post.

Mets Get Even

EDMONTON (CP) — Spruce Grove Mets battered Guelph Biltmores 5-2 Thursday night to tie the best-of-seven Centennial Cup series at two games each.

Following Guelph's victory in the third game Tuesday night, Mets coach Doug Messier changed his lineu in search of more scoring punch. The move worked as Keith Hertz, Ron Turner and captain Kelly Bunz scored for the first time in the series.

Hertz, playing centre to help him shake a defensive slump, scored twice in the third period.

He set records for goals and points by a defenceman during the Alberta Junior Hockey League regular season but has been hampered in this series by a leg ailment.

Turner opened scoring early in the first period on a deflection with both clubs a man short. Bunz followed about a minute later, firing a short shot past Guelph netminder Rod Mears.

The winning Spruce Grove goal was scored by Paul Messier, son of the coach, in the third period.

Ron Lecuyer had three assists for Spruce Grove and his brother Tony helped set up two goals.

Wally Keating had a goal and an assist for the Biltmores, who played without forward Zane Forbes and defenceman Bob Stephanson. Forbes has a separated shoulder and Robinson was injured as was defenceman Gary Smith.

The series for the Tier Two Junior A championship resumes tonight and the sixth game is here Saturday.

WHA Names All-stars

LOS ANGELES (CP) — Kevin Morrison, a 25-year-old sinking defenceman with San Diego Mariners, and Ron Grahame, rookie goalie with Houston Aeros, have joined the elite of the World Hockey Association.

Both are first-team all-stars for the 1974-75 season, along with defenceman J. C. Tremblay of Quebec Nordiques, left winger Bobby Hull of Winnipeg Jets, right winger Gordie Howe of the Aeros and centre Andre Lacroix of the Mariners.

The first, second and third teams, announced today by WHA president Dennis Murphy, showed Morrison narrowly edging Paul Popiel of the Aeros for first-team honors, 175-164, and Grahame—who led all WHA goaltenders this season with a 3.03 average—outdistanced Gerry Cheevers of Cleveland, 136-112.

Balloting was conducted among 41 writers and announcers in the WHA's 14 cities. First, second and third team ballots were tabulated on a point basis of 5-3-1 for all positions except defenceman. They were tabulated on the basis of 10-7-5-3-1.

Lacroix, Hull and Howe are all repeaters from the 1973-74 team, and for Hull and Lacroix it makes the third time in his many years that they have gained first-team status.

Named to the second team, besides Cheevers and Popiel, were defenceman Barry Long of Edmonton Oilers, centre Serge Bernier and left winger Marc Tardif of Quebec Nordiques and Winnipeg Swedish import, right winger Anders Hedberg.

Third-team selections were goaltender Ian McLeod of Vancouver Blazers, defenceman John Schella of Houston and Lars-Erik Sjoberg of Winnipeg, centre Ulf Nilsson of Winnipeg, left winger Andre Hime of Houston and right winger Wayne Rivers of San Diego.

Willie's Hitting Helps

Davis, Martin Spat Helps 'Clear the Air'

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
What's a few words between friends?

That's the way Texas Rangers centerfielder Willie Davis feels about his spatting match with manager Billy Martin in the garden that did not lay them to repose.

"I know Billy, he's great friends," says Davis. "Argument clears the air of all arguments, comes the best understanding."

Martin is happy, too, as long as Davis hits the way he did Thursday night.

Davis rapped out four hits against Kansas City, including a two-run homer, to help the Rangers end a nine-game slight which touched in the process in the Rangers' 3-2 victory over the Royals.

Elsewhere, in the American League, California Angels beat Oakland 14-5 and Detroit 11-2 gave best Milwaukee Brewers 6-4.

The shouting match between Martin and Davis took place Wednesday night, when Martin kept the former Detroit star on the bench for about 15 minutes following a 8-6 loss to Texas.

One person said later that at the meeting, Martin cited a number of errors, including Davis' ninth-inning attempt to stretch a double into a triple with the fifth inning. He was thrown out, killing a rally.

He denied the shouting match ever happened.

WILLIE DAVIS

inspired his big day.

"I'm motivated all the time," Davis said. "Last night is gone and forgotten. I love Billy. We've known each other for many years. We don't spend 8 hour days. You can't throw all that away over a few words."

And Martin kept up his end, saying Davis "is playing his best ball."

"I dont single out players or anything. I don't get a word to him, I had something to say last night."

Davis' third home run of the season, with Jim Sandberg aboard, erased a 1-0 Kansas City lead in the seventh inning. Two innings later the Rangers broke the tie on one-out singles by Oscar Tuero, Tom Grieve and Davis.

Jeff Burroughs then hit a double, scoring Randle to make it 4-1. All Davis was thrown out at the plate.

Nolan Ryan stymied Oakland on four singles and struck out 10 in raising his record to 5-2 over Oakland. Ryan, the Angels' pitcher in the majors to win six games this season, joined Vida Blue of Oakland and Don Sutton of Los Angeles.

Mickey Rivers was the batting star for the Angels with a run-scoring single and a two-run triple.

Detroit rookie Dan Meyer blanked the Brewers in the latter of sixth inning for his second home run of the season, snapping a 4-4 tie. The Tigers got another run in the inning when Jerry Manuel singled, stole second, took third on a throwing error by Darrell Porter and scored on an infield out.

Rabel pitched Ray Bare into the victory, with a big save to John Hiller. Detroit scored two Brewers cold. Over the last three innings, Detroit had only one hit and one walk while striking out seven times. It was a close call, a close short of the major league record for relievers.

Measure of Revenge For Padres' Outfielder

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Gene Locklear, who has been carrying a grudge against Cincinnati Reds the last couple of years, made the most of his chance for revenge Thursday night.

The 25-year-old outfielder collected two singles and two doubles in three times at bat for San Diego Padres who snapped the Reds' nine-game winning streak with a 5-0 win behind Randy Jones' four-hit pitching.

REJEAN HOULE

Elsewhere in National League baseball action, Philadelphia Phillies pounded St. Louis Cardinals 6-2, Pittsburgh Pirates beat New York Mets 8-2 and Atlanta Braves edged San Francisco Giants 3-2.

Locklear's feud with the Reds dates back to 1971 when he was traded to the Reds after a 20-game tryout, managing five singles for a .135 batting average.

"I wasn't given a fair chance," he said. "The only thing I was doing was pinch-hitting."

Locklear isn't ecstatic in San Diego, either. The Padres acquired him from Cincinnati on June 13, 1973, and he spent the rest of the season with them, appearing in 47 games. But he only got into 39 games last season, speculated most of the year in the minors.

Locklear had to share honors Thursday with Jones, who swiped only four singles and faced 28 batters—one above the minimum. Three of Jones' four hits runners were erased on double plays. Dave Winfield hit his seventh homer for San Diego.

Newly-acquired Garry Maddox rapped out two doubles and a triple and drove in three runs for Philadelphia while Greg Luzinski had a double and two RBI singles and drove in the other three. Jim Lonborg of the Cards for seven innings before taking a blow off his knee and Ron Reitz's pinch-hit single for George Foster.

Bruce Kison scattered nine hits and delivered a tie-breaking two-run single in the fifth inning for the Pirates. Cincinnati was the Mets for the fifth time in a row.

Many meetings, Bill Robinson doubled and homered and scored the other Pittsburgh runs.

Kison's big hit came off Jerry Koosman after Manny Sanguillen walked and Dave Parker singled to start the fifth and they advanced on a sacrifice. Kison then bluffed a bent bat took a full swing and hit a bouncer up the middle.

Dusty Baker drove in two runs with a sacrifice fly and single for Atlanta and Tom House halted a ninth-losing San Francisco rally in relief of Ron Reed.

Reed blanked the Giants until the ninth when they loaded the bases with one out on singles by Chris Speier and Dave Rader, around a walk. Pinch-hitter Glenn Adams drove in two runs with a single, his first major league hit, as House relieved, struck out Von Joshua and Derrel Thomas grounded into a game-ending forceout.

Canadians Win

TEL AVIV (Reuter) — Canadian gymnasts Thursday defeated Israel 197-60 at the Maccabi Games. Over-all winners were Paul Gaul Hamilton and Mary Wilson of Toronto, each with 32.50 points, ahead of their team-mate Gail Wonderborn of Toronto and Ellen Bowling of Montreal took first place in the vaulting horse, while Tami Knight of Vancouver won the balance beam event.

Propose New Fee Scale

Three Junior Leagues Agree on Constitution

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP)—Officials from Canada's three major junior leagues announced Thursday agreement on a draft constitution under the Canadian Major Junior Hockey League's legal entity.

Then they put forth proposals for an escalating fee scale that will cost pro clubs up to $100,000 if they wish to sign a junior before his eligibility expires.

The new league—incorporating the Western Canada Hockey League, the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior League and the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League—will ask for a moratorium on all major players until they are 21 years of age.

Toronto lawyer Joe Kane, who was hired to draw up the constitution, announced a system of proposed payments that will go higher if pro clubs from the National Hockey League and World Hockey Association want to negotiate and sign a player before he is 21.

The CMJHL will also attempt to get the NHL and WHA to sit down at what Kane calls a "common meeting" to discuss a program where the rival leagues will choose draft choices alternately, then go back to their respective teams with the draftees.

In effect the CMJHL is attempting to get rid of the draft and will be acting a sole agent for their players.

Clarence (Tubby) Schmalz, commissioner of the OHA Major League, said the main thrust of the new league is that they will be changing the rules for negotiating rights to the players and a higher fee if the player is taken out of junior hockey.

The new league, under certain circumstances, will allow young players to return to the junior leagues for further development, even after they are bound to a pro contract.

Under the new league's rules-to-be, a player who is drafted by a pro team could go to training camp, play five regular-season games, then return to the junior league—at an additional cost.

At the end of the CMJHL season, the player—if the pro club thought he was good enough—could return to help the club that signed him in post-season playoffs.

The escalating fee scale goes something like this:

—a 20-year-old player will bring the new league $1,000 just for the right to negotiate with him. The team that drafts him will have one year to sign him, at which time he'll become a free agent.

—if they sign the 20-year-old, the pro club must pay the CMJHL $10,000. As soon as the player completes in 25 pro games, the club must pay the CMJHL an additional $10,000.

—It will cost pro clubs $20,000 just to negotiate for a 19-year-old. If the player is taken out of junior hockey, the team owes the CMJHL $40,000. As soon as he plays in 25 pro games, an additional $10,000 must be paid. It will cost an additional $10,000 to return the 19-year-old to junior hockey.

—The league is asking $20,000 from the pro leagues to negotiate with an 18-year-old. If they take him out of junior hockey, the pro team must pay $80,000. If they feel he isn't good enough to play in the pros, the team can return him to the CMJHL. For $20,000 a year in development fees for every year he remains in the CMJHL.

The prices are just what the pro leagues are willing to pay for talent, Kane said. What they pay the player is a different matter altogether.

The CMJHL has also set up another pay scale for a player who is signed to a pro contract and returned to the junior leagues farm club of his pro club.

Kane said that at the recent conference Thursday that the control men drafting for the NHL and WHA on a year-to-year basis, the CMJHL will charge less than the fees being paid in the current bidding war.

Kane said the proposed rules will ensure that if a pro team thinks an 18-year-old is good enough to play in the pros immediately, they'll have to pay him.

If they don't, then it will cost the pro club money to keep the player in the junior hockey league, developing for the day he can make it in the big leagues.

The drafting process by the new leagues will be kept by binding, says Kane.

Ben Hatskin, chairman of the WHA executive committee, said he did not want to make a big issue of the new CMJHL proposals until he had a chance to study them further. However, he said it looked as if it would cost the pro leagues more for their rights than before.

On the other hand, he welcomed the move because it meant the leagues were come up with something the professional clubs can look at now.

BEN HATSKIN

Marlies, Beavers In a Showdown

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Sherbrooke Beavers have learned their lesson but it remains to be seen tonight whether they have remembered it well enough to stay alive in Memorial Cup hockey playoff action.

The Beavers, Quebec Major Junior Hockey League champs, face Toronto Marlboros from the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series in a sudden-death match tonight. The winner advances to a playoff final against New Westminster Bruins to determine the national major junior champion.

The Beavers, suffering from what general manager George Gulbault admits was a case of over-confidence, lost both of their games in round-robin play earlier this week. In both games, they had big first-period leads and then faltered.

Gulbault said Thursday his team thought they could walk away with both the games after taking the lead.

Twins, Flyers In Key Contest

THUNDER BAY, Ont. (CP) — Confidence abounds as Thunder Bay Twins and Sorel Flyers continue a best-of-seven Allan Cup final to determine the senior amateur hockey team in Canada.

They have won two games each going into tonight's fifth game.

"I don't think they have the edge on us," said Twins' coach Siciliano, Thunder Bay playing coach.

"With two days rest we should be in good feeling," says Darryl Sly, Barrie playing coach.

Bulls Take Lead In West Final

OAKLAND (AP) — Chicago Bulls clamped down defensively on Golden State to score an 8-point victory over the Warriors Thursday night to take the lead in the National Basketball Association Western Conference finals.

The Bulls moved ahead 3-2 in the best-of-seven series, and the second game is Friday night.

Chet Walker scored 21 points, mostly on corner jump shots, to lead Chicago scorers. Jerry Sloan scored 18, including 11 in the first period.

Jack Ray of the Warriors scored 20 points but had only four by half time when Chicago was ahead 42-30. The Golden State star was one-for-10 shooting from the field in the first half.

Nothing Is Sure Thing

Many readers may think I might be in the frame of mind today to refuse to comment on Thursday night's Stanley Cup results.

Not so.

How about those Islanders, guys?

Don't they know when they're out of it?

Talk about refusing to say "uncle".

Coach Al Arbour's skaters are as accustomed to looking oblivion in the face and pretending it isn't there, they could go on for ever.

But it ain't here. Flyers have shot hell out of them upstairs.

A repeat of the Pittsburgh Islanders series?

Nothing is impossible but who's betting on it?

Matter of fact, who's betting on any of these playoff sets?

Only Montreal Canadiens who picked Buffalo Sabres over Montreal Canadiens would have the temerity to back up their prognostications with dollars.

And there were a few of those around.

I've had the pleasure of discussing the Buffalo-Montreal series with some of them.

They've even offered to watch while I cut crow.

The Bay of Quinte Soccer Referees' Association has been reborn, so to speak.

Heading up the grouping as president, is Norris Webster who was a Class 1 referee in England. Harold Hildebrandt is vice-president; Kevin Kirby, secretary-treasurer, and representative to the leagues, John O'Neill.

The association has a meeting scheduled for Royal Canadian Legion, Branch 118, Trenton, Monday at 8 p.m. If you're interested in soccer officiating, you'll be made welcome.

The Bay of Quinte Soccer Association will be a two-division operation this season.

Making up the Quinte section are Cobourg Tony's, Belleville Olympics, Trenton Citizens Finance, Belleville Parsons and Warkworth Institution.

In the Bay grouping are Trenton Canadian Forces Base, Trenton, Brighton, and Rale-Canadian.

The nine teams will play an interlocking schedule.

Warkworth and Cobourg pry the lid off the new season, Saturday.

Tony's finished in first place in last year's 10-team league, with 15 wins, two losses and a tie in its starts, to lead the way with 31 points.

Warkworth got on a late drive in 1974 to take over fifth place in the standings with 18 points.

Game time Saturday at Warkworth, is 2 p.m.

It is expected league play will move into high gear next Wednesday and Thursday evenings. A full schedule will be released shortly.

Travel, Practice Part of a Dream

Regyna Armonas wanted to travel. She also wanted to be a member of the Canadian Women's Senior National Volleyball team. Today she has both.

A few weeks ago, she and other players were given their Olympic Pin 76, officially making them part of the team which will represent Canada at the Olympics.

"I always wanted to travel," said the former Quinte Secondary School student, "and volleyball has been my first love. So I guess I got my wish."

The women's team's national program for '75-'76 was presented to the squad at the same time as the plan. During April, they were to practice out of their Vancouver base one night a week. In the early part of May practices were doubled up. In the middle of May the squad is off to Japan to train and observe the Japanese and Russian national teams. In the latter stages of May they go to Korea for a tournament and at the end of May they are back to Japan for game matches.

This is just the first two months. Their entire program calls for travelling, training, travelling and more training right up to Olympic time. The month of November is the only rest, the squad will be taking, except of course, a Christmas break.

Other highlights in the program include trips to Montreal, Quebec, Los Angeles, Europe, Romania, Mexico, Cuba and Russia, tying that time the squad will train with the Japanese, United States and Russian teams along with playing and touring in Canada.

National coach Moo Park has found that Regyna's greatest skill is her defensive ability.

"I have a lot of trouble with my blocks," said Regyna. "I never did like blocking. I guess I'll have to pull up my britches."

The 19-year-old Belleville girl will be part of the team hoping to secure a gold medal at Montreal in 1976.

4 Bantam Teams In Softball Loop

Bay of Quinte Ontario Amateur Softball Association (OASA bantam teams got a shot in the arm Wednesday night when representatives from Picton, Stirling, Belleville and Napanee got together and decided to form a four-team bantam league.

Terry Deflouche, from Picton, is credited with the idea. He felt that since all four teams are always looking for exhibition games they might as well meet each other on a consistent basis.

His idea went over enthusiastically and just the four teams are preparing for a season opener on May 25.

Picton, Stirling and Napanee are OASA C teams and Stirling was classified Quinte District Softball Association last season. Belleville is an A class team.

The four clubs will play home-and-home doubleheaders in a 12 game schedule. The schedule ends July 1 and from there the teams will play impromptu until OASA playoffs begin.

Plan All-star Squads

After a two-year absence from the soccer scene in Belleville, an all-star representative team may be making a comeback.

Vaughan Cameron, a newly retired resident of the Bay of Quinte area and one-time executive member of the 2,000 strong Toronto Olympic Minor Soccer Association in Toronto, is trying to raise representative teams in mosquito, peewee and bantam.

Mosquitos are those 12 and under as of January 1, 1975, peewees are those 14 and under as of January 1 and bantams are those boys 16 and under as of January 1.

Any boys from Belleville, Trenton, Thurlow, Picton, Stirling, Brighton and the rest of the Bay' of Quinte region wishing to participate, on teams may do so by attending trials on Monday May 12 at 4.30 p.m. at Frick's Island Park in Belleville.

If the turnout is large enough, Cameron hopes to set up a Bay of Quinte all-star league and have the league champions enter the Ontario Minor Soccer Association Cup championship.

For further information on the trials or the proposed league contact Vaughan Cameron at 968-2294.

Italo Whips CFB 9-1

TRENTON — With team captain Joe Iacona leading the way, Quinte Italo-Canadians made it two exhibition wins in a row at Centennial Park here, Wednesday, whipping Canadian Forces Base Trenton, 9-1. Both teams are members of the Bay of Quinte Soccer Association.

Iacona scored two goals and set up four others. Dario D'Anna, Nick Del Grosso and Oscar Nogueli also clicked for a pair of goals each. Sterling Wilson scored the other Italo goal.

After moving in front 4-0 in the first half, Italo gave up CFB's lone goal, early in the second 45 minutes. Goalie Enio Cordaini lost his bid for a shutout after making a big save earlier on a shot from the penalty spot.

Late in the game, Italo turned it on again and added three more counters.

Before making its first BQSA regular season start, Wednesday, May 14, Italo has another exhibition match scheduled, meeting Citizens Finance at Centennial Park here, Sunday at 4 p.m.

In league action next week, Italo hooks up with Brighton at Bain Memorial Park in Trenton and Parsons Cleaners plays CFB at Centennial Secondary School on Wednesday while Olympics and Quinte Hellenic are scheduled for their first starts, Thursday at Centennial Park. Kickoff time for all evening games is 6.15.

IN MEMORIAM

CRAIG, Wilfred and Margaret.
Dad your son Don left us.
Dad, you both were loved
Your Don, Ruth, Ruth, John,
Tom Mom, on May 9th.
He relieved your suffering.
He took you home to his care,
We miss you grieving.
Your Don, Ruth, Ruth, John,
Tom are together again.
—Remembered by daughter and son-in-law, Gladys and Tom.

YOUNG — In loving memory of Alice W. Young, who passed away May 9, 1974.
Today recalls and memories,
Of a loved one gone to rest.
Of a loved one gone to rest.
Are the ones who loved him best.
God called you home dear brother,
It was His will.
But in our hearts you lived still.
—Sadly missed, sister June, brothers Ken, nephew David, niece Sandra, god-daughter Heidi.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL
Saturday, May 10

ARIES (March 21-April 20) Your financial aspects continue to be promising if you use common sense. Don't take a flyer on anything risky.

TAURUS (April 20-May 21) Something may happen today that will slow your initiative on a big project for what is right. You'll have enough determination to carry on.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It may be awkward, but if you need something, rest based it turned, you'll have to make a quick switch.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) What a friend has to offer you today may be a bitter pill to swallow. Later, you'll agree it was for your own good.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be patient in pursuing your goals today. An event may overshadow your previous plans, but will cause only a temporary delay.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You'll encounter a small but difficult problem today. If you base your reaction on past similar experience, you'll resolve it easily.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) In business dealings today, don't be backward about insisting upon the quality you're paying for. Be ready to haggle.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 22) You and a partner will be faced with a difficult and crucial decision. It's up to you to stand up for what is right. Your partner may will under pressure.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Before you invest in a piece of property, don't make up your mind what you have. Your Yankee ingenuity could direct matters.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 20) Take some time today to weed out plans you now know to be unworkable. You'll be able to concentrate more on important goals.

To Your Good Health

Infant Unable To Digest Milk

By G. C. THOMPSON, MD

Dear Dr. Thompson: My baby is 10 months old and has been on a soy product since she was three weeks old. I have tried her on regular milk several times to see if she can survive the problem. My doctor says she is too ill.

The last time I tried to change I mixed only two ounces of cow's milk with six ounces of the soy formula. The reaction was just as violent, vomiting, etc.

Can you tell me what it is in cow's milk my baby can't tolerate? Is it fat, cream or what? Do you think skim milk or nonfat dry milk is the answer? I hesitate to try either of these.

I have also noticed that she becomes constipated if I give her baby food containing milk. Other than this she is in perfect health. Will she outgrow this sensitivity?—Mrs. L. R. D.

Some infants do not possess the specific enzyme necessary to digest the milk lactose (milk sugar). This condition tends to remain throughout a person's life, and the only answer is a milk substitute. The soybean formula is the one.

Other infants' systems simply do not adjust sufficiently to milk proteins, their as-yet-undeveloped digestive enzymes are just not up to the task.

It is the protein in the milk that is causing the offender. Thus, use of a non-fat or skim milk would not alleviate the protein problem since in these two products only the fat content is reduced. You are wise not trying to experiment beyond what your doctor has suggested with regard to whole milk.

In such cases, this should not be done without the doctor's knowledge. Usually patient on a baby's history of milk intolerance and would be in the best judge of what to do and when to do it. The little seems to be doing well on the soybean formula. She is only 10 months old and there is still time for her to kick her milk aversion if she's ever going to do it.

Dear Dr. Thompson: My gynecologist has diagnosed my problem as being a fibroid tumor about the size of a ping-pong ball. He said that if I wanted to have any more children (I have one) that I should have it right away. If I wait, my chances are a hysterectomy will be necessary.

Hysterectomy is the usual procedure for larger or multiple fibroid tumors. A fibroid the size of a "ping-pong ball" would fall into the large category.

Single cases can occur in the tissue layer of the uterus in which it, as you know, a sort of a pregnancy. Rather unusual a single one can also occur within the muscle itself or under the inner lining of it. It is the muscle or in the inner lining then pregnancy would be doubtful anyway.

An easily accessible fibroid, such as one under the outer layer, may be removed (a myomectomy) without removing the whole uterus structure. Whether this is possible in your case, I cannot say. Your own doctor would be able to tell you.

At 31, it would be wise to plan on another pregnancy now if you desire one. It is usually better than waiting a few years.

Dear Dr. Thompson: Would you write something about how long a stay in the hospital is required after having a cataract removed?—I. M. H.

It is not a protracted procedure. Most patients only mild inconvenience. The average hospital stay is from seven to 10 days in most cases.

Usually the patient can resume normal activity within six weeks.

You should be warned, however, to be particularly careful for the first few weeks, and not to bend forward for a week or two after the operation.

Purchase Film Rights

TORONTO (CP) — Charles Templeton's best-selling novel The Kidnapping of the President will be made into an international motion picture. Dermot International Films Ltd. has purchased the film rights to the novel and the screenplay, also written by Templeton and production costs are estimated at $3 million.

Belly Dance Craze

BRAMPON, Ont. (CP) — Belly dancing has become so popular that when the YM-YWCA decided to hire Donna Leistner to teach it in Brampton, the first class was filled in no time. So they scheduled a second class in the afternoon and the response was just as great.

Opening lead — Q ♣

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

Almost all bridge players feel that the gods of chance take particular delight in setting traps for them. The losing player falls or even dashes into these traps; the winner finds ways to avoid them.

South starts off by seeing Mommy's king of ♣ being clobbered by East's ace. Diamonds are continued and he ruffs the third lead.

The winning player notes that the hand will be a clash if trumps break 3-2 or the ace of hearts is held by West. Then he ask himself, "What can I do if trumps break 3-2 or the ace of hearts is held by West. Then he asks himself, "What can I do if he finds the king and 10 of trumps.

He sees he can afford one round of trumps just in case all four are going to show up in one hand. So he leads his ace of trumps and everyone follows. Then he leads a heart. East's ace captures dummy's queen and a club comes back.

South wins this and then starts a successful cross ruff. Heart to the king, ruff a heart, cash the second king, ruff a club, ruff dummy's last heart, unite and claim since with two tricks to go he still holds the queen of trumps and a club while dummy's two cards are the king and 10 of trumps.

CP News Roundup

MPs' Raise In Effect

OTTAWA (CP) — The controversial bill giving MPs and senators a basic 25% per cent increase in income was signed into law Thursday after passage through the Senate.

The bill, reduced from the 50-per-cent increase proposed by the government, before Christ Church, was approved by the Commons last week. Only Senator Ernest Manning (SC—Alberta) spoke against it in the Senate.

Review Ordered

TORONTO (CP)—A review by doctors of the 7,200 persons classified permanently unemployable and ruled ineligible for a $240-a-month provincial allowance was announced Thursday by Rene Brunelle, minister of community and social services.

In a memo to Premier William Davis last month, a senior civil servant said the permanently unemployable personnel were on the wrong side of an imaginary line that the government drawn between the physically disabled and permanently unemployable.

Guidelines Issued

TORONTO (CP) — Sidney Handleman, minister of consumer and commercial relations, announced Thursday new franchising guidelines for gasoline retailers and service station operators.

Mr. Handleman told the legislature the guidelines worked out by government officials in negotiations with retailers and operators would "greatly improve the relationship between (the parties)."

More Wed

TORONTO (CP) — The number of marriages in Ontario reached a record high in 1974, statistics compiled by the provincial registrar general show.

Marriage registration, which declined slightly in 1973, increased by 1.2 per cent. There were 75,198 marriage registration notices received last year.

Report Accurate

OTTAWA (CP) —The Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA) has accurately reported the amount of aid approved for Cuba, Mitchell Sharp, acting external affairs minister, said Thursday.

"There were no concealed amounts," he told Gordon Fairweather (PC—Fundy Royal) in the Commons.

On Commission

TORONTO (CP)— Arthur Wishart, former attorney-general and a special adviser to Premier William Davis, was named Thursday by Mr. Davis to head the government's commission on election contributions and expenses.

Edward Keenl of Toronto and Elizabeth Dreger of Brantan Ont., will sit on the commission as members of the premier.

D. Gordon Blair of Ottawa and Harold Young of Oakville, Ont., will sit on the commission as members of the Liberal party of Ontario.

Stewart Crooks of Toronto and Kenneth Bryden of Toronto will be nominees of the provincial New Democratic Party.

Rod Lewis, chief election officer for Ontario, will be an ex-officio member.

Need Guarantee

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — Stephen Lewis, Ontario NDP Leader, said Thursday a guaranteed income program is required to help stabilize the agricultural industry in Ontario.

In a speech to the Environmental Teachers' Association of Ontario, Mr. Lewis said such a program was hinted at in the speech from the throne March 12 but the provincial budget tabled April 7 provided a "piddling" $30 million for such a project.

Bill Tabled

TORONTO (CP) — A private member's bill to provide political rights for public servants in Ontario was introduced in the legislature Thursday by Mr. Cassidy (NDP—Ottawa Centre).

"The aim of the bill is to give Ontario public servants, except for those at the most senior level, the same political rights that are enjoyed by all other Ontario citizens," Mr. Cassidy said.

Freeze Ordered

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — Regional council adopted a development freeze on all urban growth of the region Thursday, reacting to a provincial decision to scrap a controversial garbage dump planned for the city.

Council said the freeze, which effectively stops all new subdivisions in Peel region, will remain in effect until there is a solution found to the garbage problem.

6-hour Day

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — The six-hour work day is a priority United Auto Workers (UAW) target in 1976 contract negotiations, Charles Bowker, UAW local 444 president, said Wednesday.

"The six-hour day is absolutely necessary in order to have people pay their own way instead of relying on unemployment cheques and welfare," he said.

Quebec Strikes Spread

CNTU Will Work If Men Protected

MONTREAL (CP) — About 3,000 workers were off the job Friday at 12 major construction projects, including the east-end Olympic Games sites, protesting provincial government action on recommendations of the Cliche commission.

Most strikers belong to the 75,000-member Quebec Federation of Labor (QFL) construction wing, although crushers, carpenters, bricklayers and laborers affiliated with the Confederation of National Trade Unions (CNTU) joined their QFL counterparts in the walkouts, which began Thursday.

A spokesman for the CNTU's Montreal Construction Union said "Our guys are not supporting this illegal strike at the moment but they also don't want to get their heads kicked in."

"Our men are ready to go back to work if the powers that be can guarantee their safety," he said.

QFL President Louis Laberge said Thursday men affiliated with his union had acted spontaneously in threats to unions in dens posed by the Cliche commission report, which recommended that four QFL-affiliated union locals be placed under trusteeship.

In Quebec City Friday, legislation was introduced in the national assembly to place the locals under trusteeship and prohibit persons with criminal records from holding union positions for five years from the date of conviction.

Outside the legislative building, 400 workers, mostly QFL members, demonstrated as the legislation was being introduced.

However, in a partial concession to QFL demands, Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer said a parliamentary committee will be established to study all other findings and recommendations of the commission.

Meanwhile work stoppages hit the stadium, Olympic hydrodrome, as well as construction on east-end petrochemical sites, the downtown Place Ville Marie project, and other major projects.

Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer has said union is essential in implementing the Cliche recommendations because "I don't want a revolution on my hands." But Premier Robert Bourassa and Justice Minister Jerome Choquette said they will deal firmly with the unions if a showdown develops.

Branding the entire report "repressive," the QFL has vowed "to fight to the death" against the trusteeships as well as against abolition of union hiring halls in favor of an independent "construction agency" that would regulate all placement, wages and working conditions.

The Confederation of National Trade Unions (CNTU), bitter rival of the QFL, and found by the inquiry to be without blame, also opposes the report on the grounds it would give the government too much control of union affairs.

Only the Centrale des Syndicats Democratiques, smallest of Quebec's three labor groups, supports the recommendations. The Centrale represents about five per cent of the province's 140,000 construction workers to the QFLs 70 per cent.

U.S. Fears Reds Plan Laos Grab

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States officials are privately concerned that the Pathet Lao, encouraged by Communist successes in South Vietnam and Cambodia, is attempting to take control of the government in Laos.

But they also have the impression that Prince Souvanna Phouma intends to remain as prime minister and preserve the coalition government whose formation a year ago brought a formal end to nearly 20 years of warfare.

These officials, asking not to be identified, said they expect a new wave of strikes in Vientiane and outposts of fighting particularly along Route 13, as the Pathet Lao steps up its sporadic campaign.

However, there is no confirmation at the state department that five pro-Western cabinet ministers have resigned, which would virtually eliminate the right-wing faction.

Government forces are known to have walked away from several military thrusts by the Communists in order to avert an escalation of the fighting.

Recent student demonstrations, meanwhile, are said by department spokesman Robert Anderson to have been "politically motivated" partly by "rightist elements."

None of the nearly 1,000 U.S. citizens in Laos was injured by the latest wave of demonstrations and there was no damage to the U.S. embassy, officials said. About 1,200 students, many shouting anti-U.S. slogans, were involved.

With the Pathet Lao in control of four-fifths of the country, the state department has had little choice but to work with the coalition government, which took over in April, 1974, after more than a year of negotiations following a February, 1973, ceasefire.

Officials here say they see no danger of the coalition breaking down in the immediate future, but are concerned about its long-term survival.

Truce Agency Quits Saigon

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer

SAIGON (AP) — Polish and Hungarian delegates to the International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS) have left Saigon, finishing off the watchdog agency created by the Paris ceasefire agreement of January, 1973.

The two other delegations—Iran and Indonesia—left before the Communist-led troops took over Saigon April 30.

The ICCS was set up to control the ceasefire in Vietnam and oversee the withdrawal of U.S. forces and prisoners of war.

Officials here say they see no danger of the coalition breaking down in the immediate future, but are concerned about its long-term survival.

More Arrive Than Leave

Rightists Gun Shops

BILBAO, Spain (Reuter)—Gunmen believed to be rightist vigilantes raked five shops and offices with machine-gun fire here early today, apparently in retaliation for recent attacks by the Basque separatist guerrilla organization ETA, informed sources said.

No one was hurt but the shooting caused fire in a grocery shop and shattered windows in several places, including the deserted office of a lawyer who has defended ETA guerrillas in court.

The lawyer, Pedro Ibarra Guell, 23, was shot up by three men at his home two days ago.

Four policemen have been shot dead, allegedly by the ETA, in the Basque region in just more than a month.

Accounting Bypassed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Braniff International airline admits using a complicated ticket sales procedure to bypass its normal accounting system and raise a $40,000 contribution for former President Richard Nixon's re-election campaign. Answering Civil Aeronautics Board charges, the airline said Friday it distributed airplane tickets worth a total of $750,000 to its sales officers and did not record the transactions on its books.

Boycott Suggested

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federation of American Scientists said Friday it will urge U.S. scientists to boycott a July conference in Moscow over the refusal of Soviet authorities to permit a Soviet physicist's wife to travel to Italy for an eye operation. The scientists called "barbaric" the Soviet refusal to permit the wife of Andrei Sakharov to leave for an operation to prevent blindness.

Policemen Fight

DETROIT (AP) — Judge Ralph Freeman ruled Friday that because many black policemen and women policemen are paid from a special federal fund they cannot be laid off, but seniority must prevail on the layoff of police officers whose salaries come from city funds. After the ruling, scuffling broke out between off duty black policemen William Green and six off duty white officers who had been demonstrating at the courthouse to support their union's demand that layoffs be by seniority for all.

Return Increases

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canada Development Corp. says that the rate of return on common shareholders' equity reached 12.3 per cent in 1974, up from 6.3 per cent the year before. This was "closer to the corporation's long term target rate of 15 per cent," the annual report released Friday said.

$100,000 Offered Policeman

MONTREAL (CP) — A police detective sergeant testified at a Quebec police commission inquiry Friday he was told $100,000 was available to him if he dropped an investigation into underworld financial dealings.

Sgt. Alphonse Gelinas was testifying at the inquiry into the suspected dismissal of Andre Guay, deputy police director of the Montreal Urban Community (MUC).

Information on the underworld's bribe offer was given to him by a special investigator for MUC police director Rene Daigneault in 1971, Sgt. Gelinas said.

Sgt. Gelinas was testifying on behalf of Mr. Guay.

The inquiry was ordered after the MUC-security council asked the Quebec justice department to rule on a recommendation by police director Daigneault that his deputy, Mr. Guay, be dismissed.

Director Daigneault's recommendation followed a police disciplinary board report which found Mr. Guay guilty of having ordered the burying of a meeting of organized crime squad officials on July 24, 1972.

Mayor Rejects Boost

Aldermen Raise Their Pay $1,000

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

During Belleville budget discussion Friday, city aldermen voted $1 to give themselves a $1,000 raise, bringing their annual salary to $4,000 each.

Ald. Brian Knudsen said council should wait until an election before giving itself any raises. He cast the only dissenting vote.

Earlier, senior alderman Ben Corke failed to get majority support of his motion calling for a $600 raise.

Only moments before the aldermen voted in their raise, the mayor turned one down.

The budget — as proposed by city manager Wilbur Purcell — included upping the mayor's honorarium from $9,000 to $11,500 annually.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey indicated she felt the raise was justified but felt the chair to recommend the honorarium stay the same until the next election.

"Just prior to the next election in two years I will make a resolution to modify the mayor's salary to what I think it should be," told the mayor.

Speaking on the aldermanic pay raise, Ald. Stu Meeks said "I think the raise is reasonable."

"Enough money must be paid to make sitting on council attractive to the working man," who cannot afford time off the job, said the alderman.

The suggested pay raises came after a municipal survey requested by the city manager which showed Belleville on the lower end of the scale for pays.

The mayor — in addition to a basic honorarium is paid for serving on certain boards including the police commission, and the public utilities commission, brings a total income of $12,042 annually.

Aldermen have received small percentage raises for the past three years (about seven per cent) and may also be paid for serving on the Children's Aid Society Board, the Quinte Planning Board, Moira River Conservation Authority and the Board of Health.

Bishop Mounts His Vicars On Hondas

NORWICH, England (AP) — The Bishop of Norwich, Right Rev. Maurice Wood, ordered on Friday a brigade of motorcycle-torne vicars to "Go ye into all the world" and spread the word.

Thirty-six of the helmeted clergymen roared off on their Hondas from the bishop's ancient palace in this quiet east coast city of a money-saving mission for the Church of England.

Norfolk County has only 200 clergymen to cover 700 parishes and the church reckons setting them driven jaunts from village to village every month is cutting too much in these inflation-bedevilled days.

Girls Set Afire By Abductors

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — One teen-age girl was killed and another critically burned over 30 per cent of her body today after they were abducted and set on fire, homicide detectives said. At least one of the girls was raped.

Killed was Tina Statzel, 16, of suburban Conshohocken. Her friend, Beverly Rodenbaugh, 18, also of Conshohocken, was in critical condition.

Logjam at Guam Backs up Refugee Traffic Across Pacific

AGANA (AP) — The Vietnamese population of Guam passed a near-limit 40,000 people today, with fewer evacuees able to leave than were arriving. The logjam backed up exile traffic across the Pacific.

At the Subic naval base in the Philippines, authorities temporarily halted today the departure of the last 2,000 refugees to Guam and Wake because of the logjam. Some camps in the United States were reported about full.

Officials on Guam expressed concern about the island's capacity to handle any more evacuees, with sanitation problems—there is no plumbing—already reported under the 28,000 refugees camped at sprawling Fort Allen.

Admiral George Morrison, commander of the Pacific Fleet, in the Marianas Islands, said the bottleneck was at processing centres in camps on the U.S. mainland where the refugees are being resettled.

"We've been told to hold" on Guam, he said.

With 30,000 evacuees expected Monday or Tuesday, "that will certainly bring us up to our 40,000 capacity mark," Morrison said.

Meanwhile, there were these developments:

—At Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., the planned arrival of at least three planeloads of Vietnamese today was expected to help bring the camp's refugee population to about 12,000 by the end of the weekend. A tent city at the base can hold 3,000.

—The refugee population at Camp Pendleton, Calif.—18,765—made the 164-square-mile marine base the biggest concentration of south vietnamese outside the mainland Vietnamese coast between the Los Angeles and San Diego areas. Including military personnel, 20,000 men, women and children filled every barracks, quonset hut, tent and house.

—In Manila, the Navy announced today a temporary halt in the movement of Vietnamese refugees from Subic, to Guam and Wake, with 3,000 refugees still left at Subics Grande Island tent city. No more refugees are expected to arrive at Subic, through which 72,000 persons already have passed.

—In Washington, D.C., meanwhile, the evacuation service told two U.S. airlines, World Airways and Flying Tiger, they face stiff fines for transporting Indochinese refugees who lacked proper immigration papers a few days before the Ford administration declared a blanket parole for those leaving Indochina. The fines could reach $1,000 for each stowaway. The number of aliens was not released.

The immigration service said the penalties did not cover the airlift of 216 orphans by World Airways.

On Guam, figures released today showed a total 18,295 refugees arriving on the island since Operation New Life began and 40,611 departing for the U.S. mainland.

When more than 7,500 refugees arrived by ship Friday, camps on the island were so full that more than 1,000 were immediately loaded onto planes and diverted to Wake Island.

John Thomas, director of the Intergovernmental Committee for European Migration, said said 340 refugees have left for other countries, mainly Canada and Australia.

He said France has agreed to take up to 1,200 refugees, and Belgium and Austria about 200 each.

Morrison said that so far three refugees have died on the island and there were two stillbirths. But there also were 37 births, including one today.

All children born on the island are automatic U.S. citizens.

Hasty Pees Remember Italian Campaign

By BASIL SMITH

Thirty years ago, on March 8, 1945, Canada's Armed Forces left Italy to participate in the final World War II battles in North-West Europe.

This evacuation culminated one of the more brilliant and least known pages in Canadian military history.

Troops of the First Canadian Division including our own Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and many other men from the counties, who served with various artillery batteries and other supporting units, participated in the assault landing at Pachino in Sicily on July 10, 1943. From that date until March of 1945, Canadian soldiers inched their way up the boot of Italy, to the valley of the Po River, fighting for every foot advanced.

The battles of Assoro, Orizzo, The Hitler Line, Coriano Ridge and the Lamone River are worthy of a place in Canadian History along with Vimy, St. Julian, Passchendale, Caen, Falaise and Dieppe.

By its very nature this Italian Campaign tended to be a forgotten front, as the entire purpose of the operation was to engage, maul and destroy as many enemy troops as possible, so that they would not be free to repel the Invasion Forces in Normandy. In this they were highly successful, as over half a million of Hitler's elite troops were pinned down in Italy, to contest the advance of the Eighth and Fifth Armies, in that country.

The price was high. Of the 91,000 Canadians who served in Sicily and Italy during this 20 month period, 25,398 were casualties and over 5,900 Canadian boys lie buried in 21 War Cemeteries, scattered from Agira, Sicily to Argenta, in the valley of the Po River.

It is particularly fitting therefore that on this 30th Anniversary a delegation of survivors should visit the graves of their fallen comrades and salute their sacrifice.

This delegation, which was officially a good-will mission to Italy, included The Hon. Daniel J. MacDonald, Minister of Veterans Affairs, Lieut.-General J. L. M. Ross, Commander 1st Canadian Corps, and Major General J. Chesmond, Representing Chief of Defence Staff, in the official party.

Special guests included Mrs. Alta Wilkinson, National President, Silver Cross Mothers of Canada, Donald Bedford, Vice President Royal Canadian Legion, William M. Mayne, representing the National Council of Veterans Associations and Victoria Cross winners John Mahoney, London, Ont., Paul Triquet, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Ernest "Smoky" Smith, Vancouver.

Veterans in the Italian Campaign, selected on a proxy basis of one per 100 men in a battalion totalled 107, representing all of the various units which participated in the War in Italy.

The Quinte area was represented among the survivors by Henry Charters, RR3 Belleville (Royal Canadian Engineers), Hugh Duffy, Belleville (Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment), and Basil Smith, RR1, Carrying Place, (Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment).

In addition to the Official Delegation a tour of Italy was organized by the First Canadian Corps Organization, scheduled to co-ordinate with the Department of Veterans Affairs, so that they could participate in the various ceremonies performed by the Delegation.

The following veterans and wives of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, took advantage of this tour and assisted in wreath laying ceremonies at the various cemeteries: Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gray, Marmora, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Ketcheson, Marmora, Mr. and Mrs. Gavin Scott, Belleville, Mr. and Mrs. Tony Baccione, Peterborough, Mrs. Helena Duffy, Belleville, Mr. Artie Sickle, Colborne, Mr. "Pilate" Martin, Deseronto, Mr. Angus Ross, now, Stirling, and Mr. Robert Draper, Kitchener.

Canada's War dead in Italy are buried in Cemeteries which are maintained by the Commonwealth War Graves Commission. Each of these cemeteries has been carefully planned and laid out to give the impression of a beautiful garden, with well-trimmed green grass and a scent of flowers everywhere.

Each cemetery is marked by a large stone Cross of Sacrifice, bearing a large, bronze Crusader's Sword. On the base of this Cross, or at some of the larger cemeteries, on a separate monument are inscribed the words "Their Name Liveth Evermore".

Followed Too Closely

MADOC — A 48-year-old Ottawa man has been charged with following a vehicle too closely after a rear-end collision on Highway 7 at the Queensboro Rd. junction about five miles west of here Friday.

Ontario Provincial Police at Madoc said today the man is identified as William Chrysler, the driver of a 1969 Plymouth station wagon which sustained $700 damage to its front end.

The other car involved was a 1969 Ford driven by Karin Gerlach, 19, of R.R3, Madoc. Her vehicle received $600 damage to the light rear corner.

Provincial police said the minibus accompanying the vehicle was making a right hand turn onto Queensboro Rd. There were three passengers in the Ford car and four passengers in the Chrysler vehicle.

Thieves Hit Two Cars

City police are investigating two thefts from vehicles parked in the city during the past 24 hours which netted thieves $187 worth of goods.

A city police spokesman said a $30 FM stereo radio, a $20 auto calculator, four eight-track tapes worth $32 and a $5 tape cleaner were stolen from a car owned by David Coe of 15 Marsh Dr. between noon and 1 p.m. Friday.

And some time between 2.30 and and 4 am. today, John Smith of 152 North Park St. had an $80 radio-cassette stolen from his vehicle which was parked by the sales barn.

Fans Save Energy

When was the last time you took a close look at the operation of the ventilation system in your barn? Chances are that if it has three or more fans you can save some energy and money by following according to Ministry of Agriculture and Food engineering specialists.

First, you must be sure the total ventilation capacity is designed to permit adequate staging of ventilation when they say. In some instances, one thermostat (or automatic controller) can operate more than one fan, but in most installations a thermostat for each fan will permit more efficient control.

They advise that you check the location and clearance of the temperature sensor — usually the coiled tube in the thermostat. This must be located to sense the average air temperature in the area of the building. If it is located between fans on the ceiling over a cow, or near a heating unit, it will be a misleading sensor. The sensing element should be mounted regularly to remove dust.

Set the thermostats controlling fans required for winter minimum ventilation at or below the desired building temperature, e.g. 35 C. Thermostats for the additional temperature control fans should be set at 2.5 C below the desired building temperature e.g. 32.5 C. This will ensure that the air flow through the building is increased as temperature increases. It will also avoid sudden temperature fluctuations within the building as outside temperature increases and changes in ventilation rate.

Check the ventilation system for unusual noises, which may indicate a bearing or other problem. Check the belts and sheaves for excessive wear or specific areas of the building. Check the air inlet system. The air inlet is responsible for good air distribution within the building. It may require adjustment or modification.

By adjusting the thermostat of a one-horsepower fan motor to stop when it has drawn 280 kilowatt hours can be saved per month. Not only is energy saved, but approximately 24.36 sq. m.

Dairy Workers On New Course

Co-operation between government and industry is the key to a new program for dairy plant workers at the Kemptville College of Agricultural Technology.

Although much of the program is taken at the college, it has been developed with help from the Ontario Dairy Council and the Ministry of Agriculture and Food, and will be given annually at Kemptville until just spring. He enthusiasm the new training plan has already received indicates it is filling a definite need.

Thirty-four dairy plant workers attended the program's introductory session from March 3 to 21. They studied the milk stream testing, dairy products grading, lactic culture, microbiology and other related subjects. In the fall, after to to 48 hours of on-the-job instruction and 72 weeks of supervised practical experience, they will return to the college for specialized courses in dairy liquid milk processing, cheese manufacturing, the manufacture of butter and concentrated products (such as skim milk powder). These courses will last either two or three weeks.

Who will Operate Trenton Docks?

By AL ZARAS
Staff Reporter

Trenton council found itself stuck into the teeth of a deadline this week and discovered it had little power to do anything immediately in situation not of its making.

The docks, built during the navigation season opens on the Trent Canal and acts like a magnet to Ontario and American boaters, the town finds itself without someone to operate the federal government owned, but town controlled, docks in Trenton.

Tenders issued earlier this year received barrens of bids. The town is inevitably stuck. It's without a dock operator.

In other years, council has been able to round up someone to run the small concession stand, the gas pumps, and assist incoming boat owners. This year, it wasn't to be. And the influx of boaters is around the corner!

Complicating council's predicament are the new fees Ottawa plans to charge boaters using its wharf.

Setting aside speculation to the move, its implementation the docks. Ottawa would succeed to worry over collection of its fees, a problem it seems it is now facing.

Both interests should be served with a minimum of the fuss and nonsense currently threatening an orderly opening of this year's boating season in Trenton.

Sadly, it is unlikely such an arrangement can be worked out quickly. As a result, town employees may end up operating the docks at least a part of the summer.

joint agreement could provide for both collection of wharfage and normal dock operation by town workers.

The reasoning here is simple. Town clerk Aubrey Sharp has indicated that profits from dock operation in the past haven't generated the expense of the operation.

He said town calculations — given labor costs in regular, overtime, and holiday pay for probable 12-hour days — indicate Trenton may use its own employees to man the dock, its simply too costly.

That's understandable. So why not negotiate to get Ottawa to subsidize the town the expense of manning the wharf with Trenton employees?

Town workers would collect federal wharfage. Manpower duplication would not be necessary. Council would not be forced to resort to guesstaxing and lose a private dock operator would suffer.

This way, the town would no longer face the dangerous embarrassment of searching and perhaps again not finding, someone to run the docks. Ottawa would succeed to worry over collection of its fees, a problem it seems it is now facing.

Both interests should be served with a minimum of the fuss and nonsense currently threatening an orderly opening of this year's boating season in Trenton.

Sadly, it is unlikely such an arrangement can be worked out quickly. As a result, town employees may end up operating the docks at least a part of the summer.

Mayor Wants End To Hot-Rodders

By MARG. HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Picton mayor Donald King has called for a crackdown on spenders who spread their tires and "burn rubber" on town streets.

This week he informed council he will not tolerate the reckless driver who is "plainly acting the fool."

Police chief Charles Pitcher has been advised by the mayor of the planned crackdown and mayor King suggests ample warning he has been issued to hot-rodders.

Mayor King stresses to the police are willing to act on any public complaint of speeding by hi-jinks if the caller provides a license number.

The solution to Picton's problem with amateur Fred Kalowski sounds simple. Its just a matter of drawing the line and taking a firm stand with the police alerted to jot down licence numbers.

How the homebuilder rudely awakened by a drag strip in his front yard is expected to obtain the licence numbers was not mentioned.

Most hot-rodders seem to tramp the pedals in the wee hours, out of high noon when a plate number can be read.

The concerned citizen expect to report a violator may get his licence in broad daylight but how is this possible from a bedroom window long after dark?

One Picton merchant discussing the proposed crackdown this week observed any transient hot-rodder chased by a hot rodder as he jots down a licence could be invited unfriendly feedback.

It is not the citizen's role to organize as a highway patrol to run hot-rodders out of town.

The man on the street who does see a driver endangering others with speed does have an obligation to report him if he can get a licence number. He does not have a responsibility to maintain continuous vigilance for offenders, however.

Picton fair grounds is a turnstile for two-bricks of Picton's fast wheeling, tire-squealing motorists with the brewers' Retail parking lot a close runner-up.

Surely, police vigilance at these and other popular "tracks" would eliminate hot-rodding there if continued on a regular basis.

Possibly, hot rodding at the fairgrounds could be eliminated if the grounds were closed off at night when all scheduled activities are ended. As it stands, the secluded grounds provide an open invitation to drivers with a six-pack and tire-squealers.

Picton's Main Street has several vacant gas stations where the nocturnal cruisers park nightly.

Four or five cars frequently are clustered on these lots with groups of young persons standing outside.

If these impromptu meets were dispersed possibly there would be less thoughtless driving on Main Street at night.

The gas station lots are not social clubs. To permit them to be used as a drive-in for the chronic cruisers is to encourage similar driving.

If there is no loitering by-law, then can be enforced to break up the clusters of cars on the lots, then perhaps the owners of the vacant stations could be asked to fence them.

Also, if the hot rodders' fan clubs that so often sprawl in the doorways of Picton stores at night and on weekends could be disbanded through an anti — loitering by — law, anti - loitering by-law, possibly the trouble-makers would cool it.

It isn't much fun to burn rubber if no one is watching.

Farm Gas Gadgets Must be Approved

Safe use of energy is the name of the game behind the Ontario Energy Act; it requires that all home, commercial, industrial and farm equipment and appliances that use natural gas or propane must be approved or certified by one of four testing agencies. Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food gas coordinator R. S. Winslade explains that the Act also makes it illegal to offer for sale, to sell, lease, rent, buy or install such an appliance unless approved.

How do you recognize an approved or certified appliance? It will carry a seal of approval, provided by the Canadian Gas Association, the Canadian Standards Association or by the Underwriter's Laboratory of Canada. In a few cases, the Energy Safety Branch of the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations issues its own label.

The next time you're shopping for a gas propane or oil-fired appliance, whether it's a gas dryer, broiler, tobacco kiln dryer, carbon dioxide generator, home heating furnace, space heater, water heater, clothes dryer or refrigerator, look for the seal of approval.

Insect Biological Control Is Effective but Limited

Take an insect that's not a serious problem in its native country because of natural controls, then introduce it accidentally into a country where these controls don't exist. The result: a field day for the insect, and a serious economic problem to farmers.

"It's this type of situation that had taken hold of alfalfa crops across Ontario when the alfalfa weevil gained a foothold," says Dr. J. G. McEwen of the Department of Environmental Biology, Ontario Agricultural College. "Certainly there are pesticides to bring it under control, but pesticides are expensive and scientists are looking in other directions."

A great deal of interest in biological controls has been generated in the past 10 to 15 years and they are being evaluated, not only with regard to alfalfa, but many other agricultural crops too. Taken many of these insect pests that researchers are dealing with have been introduced into Ontario, most of the predators must also be imported and tested for effectiveness and adaptability to Ontario conditions.

Perhaps one of the most successful biological control programs has been conducted against the alfalfa weevil. Over the past 10 to 15 years, about 20 different species of parasites have been evaluated; of these, only about four are able to survive under Ontario conditions. In cooperation with Agriculture Canada, OAC researchers released wasp-like parasites from southern Europe in weevil-infested fields. The parasites have been so successful in establishing themselves and controlling weevils that pesticide aren't generally required.

The biological approach is successful against alfalfa weevil; the techniques of biological control vary according to the pest involved and the crop. In the apple control in orchards, an introduced predatory mite has explored to get the best of both worlds; during the pesticides spraying is practised when infestations require it, and predators and parasites are used to keep population down.

Onion maggot too is a particular problem for commercial growers in muck gardening areas. If fields are not treated to control the maggots, growers face the risk of losing their entire crop. A experiment recently started at a section of the Bradford Marsh near Cook Bay, tests the use of sterile male onion maggot flies. They are released in the muck with normal females, with the result being fewer fertilized eggs and less crop problems.

"The biological control project on onion maggot has received an enthusiastic response from growers," Dr. McEwen says. "It has the potential of better control than pesticides since the sterilized males will seek out and mate with the normal females as they emerge in the fields."

While there are certain advantages to the use of biological controls, the OAC researcher points out that the concept will not work for every insect and every time. In corn, for example, it was found that feeding by resistant varieties is the best way to control the European corn borer. It also takes time for parasites and predators to develop and adapt to the habitat of becoming a pest themselves.

"It's a biological control project on onion maggot that has received an enthusiastic response from growers," Dr. McEwen says. "It has the potential of better control than pesticides since the sterilized males will seek out and mate with the normal females as they emerge in the fields."

Community Pastures Grow in Popularity

Nine ARDA community pastures consisting of 35,694 acres are supplying all or part of the summer feeding needs of farmers in both Northern and Southern Ontario to a total that they are unable to provide themselves on their own farms and still carry an economical herd over winter.

The Community Pasture Farm Program has been part of the Canada-Ontario Agreement ARDA Agreement in Ontario since ARDA was introduced in 1963 and its popularity increases each year," says R. J. Crowe, director of the ARDA Branch of the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food.

In all cases, the land purchased for the ARDA community pastures was found to be in need of renovation. Brush and thorn apple trees have been cleared out, old fence rows removed and stone piles buried. The pastures have been developed by reseeding to improved forage varieties to boost their productivity. Gains of beef cattle have been up to 1.5 pounds per head per day in season. Grazing fees have been approximately 11 cents per pound.

The Victoria County ARDA Pasture Farm is a typical example. Its 1,100 acres is composed of a wide variety of soil types ranging from sandhills to heavy clay loam from well drained, high quality, agricultural land to wet areas swamp and bush. Earl Trebilcox, Woodville, chairman of the committee responsible for operation of the pasture, says it develop over the past 10 years from yielding grazing for 300 steers and it will continue to do so for the future, even to the point where in 1975 it is planning to accommodate 1,000 heifers and steers contingent by 96 farmers.

The 821 animals accepted are less than half of the 2,128 head that 142 different farmers from the area requested to put on the pasture. The Victoria County ARDA Pasture Committee, composed of elected, interested persons, is responsible for planning the management of the pasture but much of its success is attributed to the conscientious work of the farm manager, Gerald Theobald, Woodville, who daily keeps an eye on the cattle and sees to it that they are treated well. Under the committee, is carried out, improvements and repairs on pasture farms are continuing," says Bruce Hodgins, ARDA's Rural Development Officer in Peterborough, "because there is a growing appreciation of the management of pasture farms as well as recognition by most farmers that they need tested and timely, the main forages to have their pastures fertilized, limed, rotation, fencing fields, pack on the ponds."

Military and Political Strong Men of the PRG Begin to Emerge in Vietnam

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

Men who have fought 30 years to win a war and for a cause have to be taken very seriously, even if they are still unknown to us as personalities or as leaders.

The reference of course, is to the new leadership in South Vietnam, about to be called a people's revolutionary government by the leaders of the Provisional Revolutionary Government or the Viet Cong.

The scholars of Indochina as well as the American military intelligence services have known about them for many years, though in a sketchy fashion, since they had purposely sought anonimity in the ranks of the Viet Cong to protect relatives in South Vietnam from reprisal.

Now all this is over for these largely French-trained Indochinese intellectuals of Marxism and the far left. They are in power in Saigon. And the once seemingly impenetrable conspiracy of presidential palaces are in their hands.

The line of Nguyen Van The, a native of Saigon, and chairman of the PRG's Advisory Council, Huynh Tan Phat, president of the PRG and Pham van Ching interior minister are some of Asia's toughest guerrilla fighters, will soon be familiar enough.

And we have seen the distaff side of the Viet Cong leadership close-up in the person of Mme. Nguyen Thi Binh, foreign minister of the PRG. She was in charge of the Viet Cong delegation during the long negotiations in Paris between 1970 and 1973.

As yet the first cabinet line-up of the PRG regime in Saigon has not been formulated. It is possible that General Tran Van Tra, who commanded the Viet Cong forces in the bitter Tet offensive of 1968, will have a major role.

The new junta in Saigon has announced he will be chairman of a new "military committee" to oversee security in that city and help return it to normalcy.

This assignment will be an indication of how ruthless or otherwise the new Viet Cong government will become. The Tet offensive was marked by mass executions of lawyers, journalists, civil officials and police working for the Saigon government in the captured villages and in the imperial city of Hue.

Americans and South Vietnamese saw General Tra at close quarters during the brief life of the Joint Military Commission in Saigon after the Paris truce of 1973 on which he sat as the Viet Cong representative.

The origins and early political life of all the PRG leaders are surprisingly familiar. They are all products of French institutions of the old Indochina, medical, law and engineering schools. Each made a personal decision to fight French colonialism, translating into political role against the wartime Japanese occupation of Indochina then continued in the struggle.

All of them worked with and have the late North Vietnamese President Ho Chi Minh. His current was identical to theirs, except his early academic training was in France itself.

Not all members of the PRG are Communists, some are members of left-wing but non-Marxist organizations, which probably explains why General Minh, the last president of the old South Vietnam had a number, could be in their first cabinet.

General Tra is also an associate and student of General Vo Nguyen Giap, North Vietnamese defence minister and the world's leading living guerrilla specialist.

Their departure from active political life in the south took place after 1954 and the formation of two new Vietnamese states, anti-Communist in the south, Communist in the north.

Mr. Tho, chairman of the PRG's advisory council was a practising lawyer in Saigon and was arrested by the French as far back as 1950 for protesting the visit of a US naval unit.

Mr. Phat, president of the same Viet Cong body, was a well-known Saigon architect, also imprisoned by the French. He later went underground in the south to direct the information operations of the predecessor organization to the Viet Cong called the Viet Minh.

Beneath these seven-to-ten prominent leaders are cadres of military and political officers who are already faming out over the part of South Vietnam not taken already in the encouraging sweep of early March and whose mission is "liberate" the villages and rural regions of the country will tell us whether the PRG in power will be humane or just another brutal South East Asian government.

"Reconciliation" is the word the PRG and its partner, the NLF (National Liberation Front) have used for about 15 years and now both the North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong jungle allies in the south the one all-powerful Viet Cong, have that chance.

Much has been said in the press about the end of a century of Western influence in Indochina. The fact is that influence remains strong in the French radical, left-wing university and professional personal histories of the new leaders.

Surely after three staggering decades of Vietnamese killing each other largely at the hack and call of outside great powers France, the USA, China and the USSR, they will want to rule with a humanitarian style. We will know their decision very soon.

Family Life of P.M.

Margaret Trudeau foresees the day when she will go out to work and her husband, Prime Minister Trudeau will look after children, and home.

It is not an unrealistic projection of events for the Trudeaus. The difference in their ages, Mrs. Trudeau still in her twenties, her busy husband in his late fifties, and the fact Mrs. Trudeau's life is very circumscribed at present, suggests some such ultimate arrangement.

Meanwhile the overall cause of women was given another boost with the visit to CFB Trenton of Ontario Lieutenant-Governor Pauline McGibbon. The occasion was accorded still further significance with the presence of an honor guard of servicewomen.

It was a very smart turnout and one which must certainly have presaged an increasing role for women in the forces, and not forgetting the entry of women into the ranks of the RCMP.

With regard to women's role in society, Lt. Gov. McGibbon noted that "what had been conspicuously lacking is the equal opportunity to enable all women to compete with men in all phases of business, religion, education, government, arts and industry."

The point might be arguable in the context of education and the arts, in both of which women play a prominent role, but in general her contention is correct.

One possible criticism with regard to the Trenton event — those fellows with fixed bayonets. If memory serves, even the Israeli women soldiers — whose role in any event is primarily non-combat — do not sport honor guards so fully armed. Wouldn't they have looked even more effective as a women's honor guard, without such props?

Steam Train Anniversary

This is a drawing by J. R. Brown of the opening of the Stockton and Darlington Railway in northeast England. Britain this year celebrates the 150th anniversary of the steam train (CP Photo)

Britain Is Now Celebrating 150th Anniversary of Trains

DARLINGTON, England (CP) — Britain this year celebrates the 150th anniversary of the steam train and many of the observations will be in northeast England where George Stephenson was born all possible.

Stephenson was a man whose faith in the future of railways was almost an obsession. He recalled in his dream Sept. 27, 1825, when he drove a locomotive through northeast colliery towns with 600 people inside the open coal trucks behind him while thousands more lined the 21 ½-mile route to watch the birth of the railway.

Stephenson said afterwards "The sun is a source of power; coal is bottled sunshine."

That first journey was made with Locomotion, an engine with four four-foot-diameter wheels coupled together and driven by two vertical boilers working at 50 pounds pressure.

The route was from Shildon to Darlington and on to the former port of Stockton.

It took Locomotion just over two hours to complete the journey but less than five years later Stephenson's Rocket clocked 9 miles an hour in the selection for the best engine for the Birmingham-Manchester line.

This year the three towns, Shildon, Darlington and Stockton-on-Tees will be the main centres of the festivities, but other towns throughout the north of England will also be helping to commemorate the historic day.

Exhibitions are planned for June to September, culminating in a massive banquet at Darlington on the anniversary day. Rail, close to where a similar banquet rounded out the days events in 1825.

Dilapidated buildings associated with the first railway line are being restored. The cottage in which Jack Stephenson, a railway pioneer, is being restored as a museum at Shildon and the last surviving buildings of the original Shildon Coke works of Jack Darlington, the first Stockton Railway will house one of his famous engines, Steady Ted.

A number of other old locomotives and rolling stock will be displayed at the Bank Hall Rail car works at Shildon with selected rolling stock on steam each day of the festivities. Brass bands and zoologists will give a bell ringing performance and a Queen Victoria look-a-like crowned.

Darlington's North Road Station is being restored to house a special exhibition. Special attention is being paid to detail because 1975 is also European Architectural Heritage Year. Hopes are high that Locomotion and the Darlington Railway Museum engines will be available for display there during the festivities.

Stockton is staging a display of locomotive locomotives on various working gauges and it is possible that narrow gauge working engines will be included. The world's first railway ticket office, which was in fact, never still be open to visitors who will also be able to see the Darlington and Stockton rail tracked on the original alignment. A 1 ½-mile section of Pre-stree Park of concentrated celebrations one of the most exciting exhibits will be the priceless solid silver model of Locomotion, its tender and directors' coach.

The model is owned by the Queen Mother, having been presented to her and her late husband — afterwards King George VI—at centenary celebrations in 1925. And she has lent it to the Bowes Museum, Barnard Castle, northern England, to be displayed until next summer. During the festivities it will be on display at Shildon, Darlington and Stockton for a week in each case.

As part of the celebrations in other areas of the north of England, the Laing Art Gallery at Newcastle-upon-Tyne will stage an exhibition of the life and work of George Stephenson.

The national rilway museum at York will open during 1975 as a centre where railway enthusiasts can browse over many types of exhibits. And railway enthusiasts are a lso hoping that by midsummer a 15-mile stretch of railway line through the North Tyne Valley between Haltwhistle and Alston will be open for steam trains.

The North Yorkshire Moors Railway, which runs from Pickering to Grosmont, is to get a Black Five—the only engine of its kind built with a Stephenson outside-link motion. It will be named George Stephenson at the 150th anniversary celebrations—a tribute to the man whose perseverance in believing in "bottled sunshine" helped to bring the world's transport systems to where they are today.

Alberta Farms Will Employ 8,000 Youths

EDMONTON (CP) — The provincial agriculture department's summer farm employment program has set a goal of employing 8,000 youths this summer for 8,000 Alberta farmers.

Established in 1973, the program is designed to provide farmers with needed help and to enable young people to earn money for their education by giving them employment during the May-August period.

The department, in a news release, said it also will provide youths without previous farm experience with a chance to find out whether they would like to pursue further training in agriculture.

Applicants must be 16 or older but if they are under 18 they must be accompanied. They must have lived in Alberta for the previous six-month period and be legally entitled to work in Canada. Prior to starting work they must attend a farm-safety orientation course provided by the department.

Farmers must be prepared to hire for not less than two weeks and are entitled to hire a son or daughter.

Wages are negotiated between the farmer and the employee and the province pays half the agreed monthly salary of $200 a month, whichever is less. The government also pays Canada Pension Plan and Unemployment Insurance Commission contributions.

Librarian Teachers To Train

SHEFFIELD, England (CP) — Teachers of library and information science from many countries will attend an international summer school on advanced information work in Sheffield this summer.

The school will be held from July 1 to 25 and will conclude with a fortnit week in London. Up to 25 students, chosen from more than 120 applicants, come from Africa, India, Latin America, the Middle and Far East, Greece, Turkey, Poland and Algeria.

The summer school will be financed by a $25,000 grant from UNESCO, supplemented by the British Council, the United States Council on Library Resources and other national and international agencies.

The school will be directed by Prof. W. L. Saunders, director of the University of Sheffield's postgraduate school of librarianship and information science, and the teaching will be carried out by five members of his staff.

The course will introduce teachers of library and information science from various countries to advanced methods and new developments in information retrieval, computer techniques and management.

Mountaineering Taught To Classes in Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — As the young men and women deftly lack down the vertical wall, suspended by ropes from a balcony, the scene resembles the action of daring cat thieves ready to pull a job.

The art of mountaineering is being taught to students of all ages. How to scale jagged rocks, descending a rock face and stopping a fall when the climber has plunged down the mountainside are all part of the class.

Brian Hibbert, David Moore and Orest Haras instruct in mountaineering courses in different schools. The first class started in suburban Etobicoke Collegiate in 1973. Since then, 400 budding mountaineers have been trained, in the dangerous sport.

"Actually, mountaineering is as-per-cent safe," said Brian Hibbert, 30, vice-principal of Hillcrest public school. "The one-per-cent hazard would be caused by either equipment failure or inexperience in using it."

Instructors Orest Haras and David Moore are both physical education teachers at Keiller Mackay Collegiate. The teachers show the different skills and safety techniques to the students. Students get additional lessons at Rattlesnake Point in neighboring Milton, scaling the rocks there.

Different class members had their own reasons for taking the course. Veteran mountaineers tell about their world above the world, a perch between heaven and earth.

For students John Freer and Hugh Magill it was the acceptance of a challenge in their 60-a quest for an adventure that could be found elsewhere in modern life.

A father and son were showing family togetherness in their joint enrolment. Kim Ricketts, 21, a student at University of Toronto, said about climbing:

"You can get into trouble very easily while climbing. That's why I'm taking this course."

When mountaineering courses were first offered, organizer Brian Hibbert noticed more males involved in the classes. Now, he said 40 per cent of the class are women and they may soon be in the majority.

Brian Hibbert said, "In the elementary stages of mountaineering, at least, women show a distinct superiority. The reason for this is our social philosophy. The male is supposed to be aggressive, stronger and always showing courage. In mountaineering, the male has more at stake and more to lose in self-esteem.

"Once he gets on a rock in a tough situation he can be ashamed to admit he is afraid and refuse to ask for help. Every good mountaineer knows fear. There is nothing wrong with that as long as it is controlled."

He finds women easier to instruct because they have superior balance and rhythm, two essential requirements in climbing.

"Without brute strength to fall back on, they have to rely on the skills that are basic to good body position and they do it very well."

The one thing to be afraid of in mountaineering, the instructors say, is to climb with someone who insists he is not afraid.

Scenery Is Grand For B. C. Prisoners

WILLIAM HEAD, B.C. (CP) — Devil's Island was never like this.

William Head institution, a federal medium security prison opened in 1959, is located on a Vancouver Island peninsula about 35 miles from Victoria. With its seaside location and extraordinarily lenient rules, it is a prison with a difference.

Off the 45-acre peninsula, there are migrating killer whales playing in the sea and nearby seals waiting to be caught. The insects are numerous and four wild ponies with the chew line for handouts.

There is no pallor on the faces of the 120 prisoners during the summer. Weather conditions provide them with tans that would rival those on a Polynesian island.

William Head is experimenting with the co-operative concept of prison industry. A marketing association is selling handicrafts through a retail outlet in Victoria called Can-arts.

Proceeds from the co-operative venture will be divided between the co-operative and the prisoner with the prisoner's portion applied to reimburse his victim, to help support his family or to be saved for his release.

The prisoner at William Head has other opportunities to better himself. Last summer, some prisoners went to Tofino, on the coast of British Columbia, under an arrangement allowing them to receive standard pay for the forestry jobs they perform. It is hoped the program will continue this summer.

William Head still is a prison despite its scenic setting and its location helps with its security.

John Mahoney, the prison's director, said although the topography of the area makes it difficult to put a chain fence around the prison, the area acts as a perimeter of security.

"It's a chilly body of water, the Strait of Juan de Fuca, and there are bad rip-tides on it," said Mr. Mahoney, although if a man were desperate enough he might make it across.

With its change to a medium-security institution from a minimum-security institution it is becoming even more of a prison that it was in 1959. Part of its chainlink fence was it topped by barbed wire.

100 Good Ways To Save Money

Great the inside of your furnace now and next year you can save about 10 per cent of your annual heating cost. That's just one of 100 useful facts you'll learn from "100 ways to save energy and money in the home," a free, 100 — page booklet published by Energy, Mines and Resources Canada.

The useful booklet will tell you how to use a plastic sandwich bag and a hanger to determine where your windows need caulking. It will tell you how to fix a leaky faucet, and how much that dripping hot water faucet costs you each year. It will even prove that a long hot shower costs less than a bath.

You'll learn that your electric clothes dryer costs $21.15 a year to operate but that your energy saving machine only costs about 24 cents. The iron costs $1.81 to run every year but the electric clock only costs 41 cents.

Did you know that there's no use in preheating your oven if food will cook more than an hour? Or that you can turn off the heat 30 minutes before a roast is done and there will be enough heat to finish the job?

Best of all, the book explains why you should save energy and other resources — not just what it will do for your own pocket but what it can do for the country's future.

It's expected to warm right up to 27 degrees today and if that still makes your head swim, here's more bad news. Metric-minded people require for more confusion as precipitation reports — snow and rain — are given in metric units after September. Canadian hospitals, which began the conversion years ago, will be completely metrified by next month.

Next year, car speedometers, sugar packages and reports of atmospheric pressure will all be metrically measured.

Farmers can look forward to conversion beginning in the grain industry February 1, 1977.

Prepackaged fruits and vegetables will be sold in metric units by 1978 and retail food store scales will be converted by July 1978.

By 1980, it will be all over and by 1981, I'll bet, you won't even remember how the old system worked.

Community Workers Hold Monthly Luncheon To Exchange Ideas

For about a year, the city's leading social workers have been gathering once a month for sandwiches, cookies and most of all, communication.

Known as the WHEEZE luncheon group — Welfare, Health, Education, Recreation, Employment — the 30 persons who attend are representatives of institutions and agencies from the public health unit to the Ontario Provincial Police, the Hastings County Board of Education to the Children's Aid Society.

The luncheon group was the 1969 brainchild of Family and Childrens Services director Bruce Kerr. After many successful years of operation it faded only to be revived last year as a service of United Community Services under executive director Gordon Mullin.

Each month, one of the agencies represented presents a program on its service to the community. This month, for example, Belleville's police chief Douglas Crosbie spoke about the police department.

New social workers or educators in the community are introduced and while lunch is being served, people exchange information and ideas.

Norah Cunningham of the Hastings and Prince Edward County Health Unit says "I've got to meet people this way; they're more than just a voice on the phone. These luncheons have given us a great insight into services in the community."

Reg Tucker, director of Hastings County Family and Social Services, puts it this way: "I want to know what other agencies in the community are doing. It's important that we all understand these things.

"I learn something at every meeting — and because we're able to learn it helps our own clients."

Lunch and Conversation

Rev. David Murphy, of United Community Service, chats with Belleville Police Chief Douglas Crosbie. Chief Crosbie was guest speaker at the monthly luncheon meeting of WHEEZE — a group of community workers in the education, health, recreation and social welfare field.

UCW Hears Korean Missionary

The spring executive meeting of the Belleville presbyterial, United Church Women was held recently at Frankford United Church.

More than 130 women attended the meeting chaired by Jeanne Williams.

Rev. W. Herbert and Mrs. Jean Beach were special guests.

At the meeting, Olive Payton reported on a stewardship seminar and a worship service was conducted by Margaret Thompson. It depicted the work and progress of women's organizations in the 50 year history of the United Church.

Rev. Walter Beecham, a Korean missionary, spoke at the meeting and showed slides of the progress in that country during the last 20 years.

'Police Must Have Co-operation'

"We make house calls," says Belleville Police Chief Douglas Crosbie.

Chief Crosbie was addressing the monthly luncheon meeting of WHEEZE, a group of education, social, health and recreation workers.

He told the group that the police departments close contact with the public — "we're on duty 24 hours a day, 7 days a week" — makes it natural for the force to become involved in community work.

"I think its important to get into the schools, for example, to let kids see we're human beings.

"We make house calls," if nothing else," he said.

Chief Crosbie said that the department investigated 17,016 occurrences last year, 25 per cent of which were criminal in nature.

The balance were service calls — hotel and domestic disturbances, landlord and tenant disputes, noisy parties."

He explained that the Belleville department has a full time strength of 71 persons in field operations and the 10 vicers branch along with 18 civilian employees. He said the city is divided into four patrol areas by the river and railway tracks.

"Since 1959 there has been an 11,000 per cent increase in the incidence of wilful damage in Belleville," Chief Crosbie said.

"Slowly but surely we're heading the way of the United States." He said there was a 16.8 per cent increase in crime in the city "and in five to 10 years we'll be as bad as the United States unless something is done."

Chief Crosbie recommended the government have a "look at preventive measures."

Specific measures the chief recommended included more treatment centers for alcoholics and more half way houses for criminals.

And, he added, help from the community is necessary.

"Wilful damage must be seen by someone as its happening," he said. "You can keep adding policemen to the force all the time but you're not going to decrease crime unless you get the co-operation of the public."

Social Notes

Mr. and Mrs. Barry McGarvey

Pigden — Burke

Janet Grace Burke and John Edward Pigden were united in marriage April 26 at St. Columba Presbyterian Church in an afternoon ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Burke; the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Pigden.

The Rev. David Murphy officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a crepe gown with high neckline and trimmed in lace and seed pearls. She wore a two tier veil with lace trim caught in a headpiece of lace and ribbon. She carried a bouquet of red roses and white stephanotis.

Mary Hawkins was maid of honor in a pink flocked dress; she carried a nosegay of white mums. Other attendants were Jennifer Hamilton and Catharine Pigden who were dressed in green.

Best man was Glenn Ellis, assisted by ushers Norman Pigden,Jr. and Neal Burke.

A dinner reception was held at the Quinte Hotel.

The couple resides in Belleville.

McGarvey — Lott

Elizabeth Rosanne Lott and Barry Frederick McGarvey exchanged wedding vows April 26 at Holloway Street United Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elvin Lott; the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred McGarvey.

Rev. J. Kellogg officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of polyester organza with an empire waist and wedding band collar trimmed with daisy edging. Her three-tier wedding veil featured a matching headpiece. She carried American Beauty roses.

The bride's sister, Carol Dennis, was matron of honor in a mint green with matching hooded jacket. She carried yellow mums. Brenda Wood, Janet Barron and Jean Lott, the other attendants, were yellow. Carrie McGarvey was flower girl.

Wayne McGarvey, the groom's brother, was best man assisted by ushers Rick Dennis, Ron Lott and Marc LaCombe.

A dinner and dance was held at the Elk's Hall. A wedding trip to Niagara Falls followed.

The couple resides at 421 Bridge St. E.

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Murphy and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis R. Kline of Belleville are pleased to announce the forthcoming marriage of their children, Mary Jo-Anne and Robert Thomas. The wedding will take place on Saturday, June 7, at 2:30 p.m. in St. Joseph's Catholic Church, Belleville.

Art Display in Ameliasburgh

Setting up paintings in preparation for an exhibition in the Ameliasburgh Municipal Hall, Florence Lennox assists Donnah Cameron, whose 44 night school students are showing their work Saturday, 3-10 p.m. and Sunday, 3-6:30 p.m. The classes, in oil, watercolor and pen and ink, have been given in the Redoorsville Public School during the winter for the Prince Edward County Board of Education. The art display is free, and refreshments will be served.

Grace Hartman

She Battles for Equality on Economic Front

OTTAWA (CP) — Grace Hartman seems to be friendly, a grandmother, a motherly with no easy laugh and a pair of glasses with thick colored spectacles.

She is all of these things but is nothing of the sort, by her, she is also likely to be the leader of one of the country's largest, most diverse and aggressive labor groups, the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE).

Mrs. Hartman, 56, is as ardent a feminist as she is a trade unionist. She is particularly irritated at a union that includes "a lot of women who are not unionized workers, school teachers, nurses, hospital aides, she is already a pistol-packing mama, she has to win high rank in the male-dominated labor movement.

Her CUPE involvement dates back to 1964 when she began work as a secretary in the Metropolitan Toronto hospital board. She worked her way soon found herself on the executive of her local.

Almost immediately there were allusions that set her apart from most of her union colleagues.

Mrs. Hartman was chosen as the first female delegate to the Toronto District Council, CUPE, recalls.

"I was considered an interesting reaction," she said. "Some of the guys would say, 'we have to finish our meeting here tonight, we can't adjourn yet, Grace is here.'

She also recalls that women were "a little shy" in the rank and file force. These were the days when jobs could be posted as male or female.

"It applied to one job that was posted for a male, I was doing part of the job and knew I could do the job but only other candidate for the job was a male and I had three or four years' seniority on me.

"They eventually declared they knew that I didn't get it, I would put up a real fight."

Those experiences helped convince her that the battle for equality of the sexes lies in the labor movement.

"More women are recognizing this and realizing that they have to fight not just for someone else to fight their battle for them. They have to get out and do something.

"The big fight has to be around equal pay for work of equal value and the closer we come to that, the closer we are a long way from it yet—the more progress we make. Once you win the equal pay battles the other ones will be easier to fight because women they will fight with greater confidence."

Although there are equal pay laws, Mrs. Hartman is skeptical of their effect.

"In some places they get around that by calling one job a heavy cleaner's job and a light cleaner and so forth. I'd like to bet there are men who could handle the light-cleaner job better than the heavy cleaner and vice versa for women.

"It's all right to have the legislation, but if you don't police it sometimes it is pretty ineffective."

The problem is that there are too few inspectors to enforce the laws. "And a great many women have not yet realized that there is legislation on the books."

Besides holding the second-highest rank in CUPE behind national president Grace Lillie, who retires next fall, she is president of the national action committee on status of women and a member of the federal Status of Women Council.

It is perhaps no coincidence that Shirley Carr, the first president of CUPE and the first rank of the Canadian Labor Congress, is also a CUPE member. Mrs. Carr is an executive vice-president of the congress.

"I would say without fear of contradiction that we've been in the lead in the way of putting our women forward, pushing our members and convincing them to take an active part, that other unions," said Mrs. Hartman said. About 44 per cent is female.

There not a lot of women in other unions who have been appointed to high office but not elected."

CUPE has begun a program aimed at eliminating discrimination in the work place. A "sex discrimination checklist" advises male and female workers to check for biases in wages, entrance tests, hiring, policies, classifications, job training, promotion and other job-related matters.

Mrs. Hartman conceded that CUPE has not yet fully eliminated sexism within its own ranks.

"There are people around who don't think a woman should be in the job," she said. "Probably someone will try against her because they don't believe a woman should be president of a union. It is up to us to show them otherwise.

"Women are 50 per cent of the population and yet the figure for set of protection to the female workforce.

"We have to remember that unions represent membership, made organization for about 40 per cent of the workforce, not no organization into the occupational areas where women predominated." This has changed with organization in the government, schoolboard and hospital sectors.

Mrs. Hartman is said by union staff to be a commanding leader whose tendency to dictatorship is to be said: "What does this mean to the local union?"

"She is strong on the per-son-to-person level.

Her leadership of a union loose touch with the membership we're in trouble, because if you don't know what they're talking about or what concerns them then I don't think you can effectively serve them."

Mrs. Hartman's involvement in the community, with poverty groups, senior people's organizations, improved housing and medical services is a sense that the CUPE should be more community-oriented.

"I'd like to see the union become more politically active, to use the clout we have to bring about legislative changes that will help others."

Grace Hartman, 56, is as ardent a feminist as she is a trade unionist. She is secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Union of Public Employees. By fall, she is likely to be the leader of the country's most diverse and aggressive unions made up of university professors, municipal workers, school janitors and hospital aides. (CP Photo)

Imagination Cures Boredom

What bores you? If you are blessed with good imagination and curiosity in match, you are unlikely to be bored by most any circumstance because you have the ability to rise above your surroundings.

Conversely, if you are completely unimaginative, you are unlikely to be bored by routine movements of your surroundings. Dogs, cats, goldfish and hamsters live little sense of time-lapse, being content to sit, eat, sleep and procreate. They require no horse or dog sports, or head stubbery.

It is the broad middle group of people who seek escape from boredom. They are usually suitable for stimulating diversions them selves, and so have to depend on others and environment to provide something. Where there is a TV television set, a trip is washed out, there is nothing.

Lack of social involvement is also a boredom factor. A person who has no contact with one or more clubs and associations that make up the community may lack interest, even the stimulation of getting mad at the clique that is running the show for butterfly wings.

Boredom has to be seen as a problem known to every employer. In the industrial world many boring jobs have been automated, but many are left. We know from the fact that some jobs will always be boring to some and not at all boring to others, that the job, not often because of the job holder's quality.

Imaginative people will be impatient with the same bored ones. List there will always be those who have never device ones — fitted to individual requirements.

Identifying the boredom factor is a big part of our work. It is the factor that is too many strike actions. If you can identify the boredom factor your value. Boredom factor is.

Classroom — Game Teaches Kids Being Different Isn't Bad

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The teacher holds out two packages to the first-grade class. One is neat and delicately wrapped, the other dirty and sloppily wrapped.

"One for this child and one for you," she tells the students. "Which one do you want?"

Invariably, the first children pick the pretty package. They are dismayed when they open it to find dirt, ashes and broken glass.

Inside the teacher's dirty package is candy.

"Now that shows you you can't judge what things are on the inside just by looking at the outside," she says. "The inside is what we are with people."

The demonstration is part of an innovative "individual differences" program that Madison school human relations coordinator Marlene Cummings has developed to get an early start to teaching discriminatory ideas that too often factor into adult bigotry.

"The goal is to help children understand and respect the differences in others and themselves," said Mrs. Cummings. Her new program is being used in kindergarten and first and second grades.

She said it seems to be serving a great purpose to report for fewer incidents involving name-calling and other hostile behavior.

By conducting extensive tests and interviews with students, Mrs. Cummings identified "the kinds of prejudiences" seem the most to children. Then she developed a training course to teach students how to avoid stereotyping and discrimination among youngsters. "It was amazing but the children we tested thought native Americans were the least American and least human of all," she said. "They see all these things on TV about Indians scalping and burning, and they can't get them out of their minds."

She said children also show strong prejudices against eyeglasses, handicapped, retarded, physically handicapped, poor, fat, skinny and minority children.

The thrust of the program, through classroom activities and displays, is that everyone is different in some way, and that "there is nothing to be ashamed of or ridiculed.

Cummings said the anti-discrimination indoctrination also extends to prejudices against girls and children with emotional problems.

"There's a lot of sexism in the first grade," she said. "For instance, Indian girls are not as bad as boys, because they just take care of babies and don't hurt anyone, and fat boys aren't as bad as fat girls because the fat boys are fun-loving, jolly. It's part of the whole beauty thing."

She said 70 per cent of the parents of the 400 children in the program this year have attended workshops to help them cope with juvenile discrimination at home.

"Not one parent has expressed misgivings about the program," said Mrs. Cummings. "They know what it's like to be ridiculed, too."

Other activities in the class include stories by teachers and children, and figures symbolizing both biased and unbiased attitudes. Students also help children to practice different types of religions.

"We just want them to have familiarity with the different religions so that they don't think Muslim is a disease," said Mrs. Cummings.

"We're not teaching them one thing is right and another is wrong. We just want to show them that being different isn't necessarily bad."

Is it necessary for lemon to be "all the sixter?" Not in your life. Even in a subdivision, the lemon picks up an individual look as soon as the owners take over.
Builders today are accused of using little imagination. They build for the market but try to vary their plans to escape sameness. The builders of yesteryear, while actually custom builders, tended to build one or, at the most two basic plans, they were limited only by and adding only customizing features.
"But they had character," you say. Yes, but that character has lived with the owners' taste in landscaping and changes over the years.
And so today — let's forget what the builder did or assumed — look at already the newer home has a sort of character in its own — no garden as a back drop for beautiful painting or sculpture.

Ann Landers

When Does Friendship Turn to Martyrdom?

Dear Ann Landers: I am such a nervous wreck I can hardly hold this pen. You can see how shaky my handwriting is. I just spent one hour and 15 minutes on the phone. I didn't say 10 words. This elderly friend of mine talked to my husband. She was giving me holy hell for not coming to see her in Miami. She said, "Why don't I spend at least 45 minutes on the telephone with her every day? She needs to talk to someone."

Does she give people the right to demand they be catered to? True, I've been sick for many years but I'm sick of her demanding attention. I am impatient, useless prattle, tuberous angry and I feel guilty as self-pity, which drives me up the wall.

This woman is not ill. She has money. She can do a great many things others her age can't. She has just been in run me ragged. I feel sorry for her because she has her only friend. The others have all had to leave her because it led her walkie-alone.

Ann, I'm going bat-er go on about my problem. I'm sick and tired of my cross to bear! What would YOU do?—Stuck

Dear S.: I'm not you and you aren't me. Only YOU know how much you can take and what you can't do.

Your friend (?) is not going to change. It's up to you to decide how much time and attention you want—or need.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a 17-year-old high school junior who must be told if I'm right or wrong.

I had an operation on my eyes last year. They were all sticky and like being-cup have a plastic surgeon did a very good job of cutting the cords in back and I can see a lot better now—close to my head. Mom has asked me to show people pictures of me, the way I looked before. I hate it when she does this. She says: "Ex-cuse me, I'm sorry, I haven't yet since you were a little boy, so what's wrong with it?" I STILL HATE IT. Do I have to show Mom step or not?—New Mo

Dear New Mo: It's quite understandable that a young man and-after caper would want to see "unscathed" face. You should respect your wishes. I'm with you, pal.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 16-year-old girl with a 7-year-old sister, a little sister, she is driving me insane. My parents don't know what to do with her. Her teacher has called on the phone whenever I talk to a friend. She says terrible things that to embarrass me. She pulls my clothes and books Once she wrote in my best friend's diary of the bath. I pleaded for two hours before she gave them back.

Dad says what Laura needs is a daily thrashing. Mom thinks psychiatrist is the right. Are all 7-year-olds like this? Will Laura grow out of it? The thought that I may inherit my sister's problems terrifies me. Help!—Scared

Dear Sta: One of the problems is that your parents can't agree on what should be done about that child. She needs to be "2-3-4 and one-one." Moreover, Laura has discovered she can be the center of attention if she misbehaves. Often young children will go bonkers (they'd rather be punished than ignored.

Stop, you are commiting—for Laura and your parents. They need to learn where THEY fit into the picture.

Feminists Claim Media Often Sensational, Silly

WINNIPEG (CP) — Sensationalism and distortion in the established news media are among the indirect reasons for formation of the Feminist News Service, says regional representative Pat Ainslie.

They capitalized on isolated, silly things such as burning as examples of what women's liberation is about, she said in an interview.

"It goes much deeper than that. There are so many good adjecting women today that women don't know the edge of."

At a news conference in Winnipeg, about 20 delegates from women's groups across Canada announced formation of a monthly, bilingual news service to provide women with women's issues. Scheduled for about May 20, it will include literature, poetry, photographs, hard news and editorials, all written and compiled by Canadian feminists.

As one of eight or nine regional representatives, Ms. Ainlow will assemble and coordinate feminist news in her area and file it to Waterloo, Ont., where it will be edited and distributed to women's groups, individuals and news gathering organizations.

Ms. Ainlow said the service will cost $10 a year to inform other women's groups of our services, encouraging them to write things that they think is important to women.

Ms. Ainlow said the service will not rely solely on subscriptions, will provide a faster and more efficient means of communication of women's news than the traditional news media.

"Newspapers can't devote enough time and space to go into depth on women's issues. It's improving, yes, but mainly to a lot of fine women working in some women's media areas.

"The important reason we get activist feminists and women that the feminist movement is nationwide. The Feminist News Service gives us a recognition that many women felt isolated from the rest of the women's liberation movement."

Ms. Ainlow said a communication network will enable women to be aware of feminist activities in Canada, avoid duplication of collective efforts.

"A movement without communication is a movement without power."

She said the women's liberation movement has made significant strides to improve women's place in society since the late 1960s, but she is critical of newspapers' attitude toward feminism during that period.

"For a while, women's lib was hot news and then it dropped. But the movement is still there and strong. We don't get flashy headlines, but an incredible amount is happening."

Ms. Ainlow said the service will not rely solely on subscriptions, will provide a by the United Nations as a major step for the cause of feminism.

"A lot of women fall for it a token gesture. A lot of the budget went to an elaborate advertising company to develop a logo and a slogan, the 'Why Not?' button instead of using the money for women's groups facing hardships. To think that so much money went to an elaborate logo and conferences while impoverished issues facing women at a basic standstill."

Lack of funds was one of the major hurdles the Feminist News Service will have to overcome. Ms. Ainlow said the service has no money at present, and its operations are volunteers except for chief coordinator Kate Millet in Waterloo Ont.

Disruption A First

OTTAWA (CP) — For the first time in the history of Canadian Parliament, the House of Commons had to adjourn five years ago this month, on May 12, 1970, when 30 women chained themselves to seats in the House creating a disturbance. The women were protesting Canada's abortion laws and were participating in a sit-in-in carsvan.

'Survival Food' For Disasters

TORONTO (CP) — An atmosphere of fear pervades the premises of Toronto's first dehydrated foods Ltd., opened years to provide food to survivors of strikes and lay-offs, coup-takings or even the ultimate nuclear holocaust. They don't mind trading on customers' fears to get them to buy the survival packages in which can be purchased in three-month, 15-month or 15 month units.

The food, which the two men say has a shelf life of 10 to 30 years, is sold in nutritionally balanced units. A three-months' supply for one adult costs $180, year's supply is $420 and a dozen 15-month supply goes for $945.

The diet goes from beans to bannaise to tortillas, but most of it strictly soybean-based "meat" Mr. Vacirca and Mr. Vacirca also offering freeze-dried filet mignon, pork chops and cooked chicken.

Also included in the package are a five-gallon can of water and purification tablets.

The idea is catching on. A second survival food store is scheduled to open here in a few weeks.

Shunned by Mennonite Church Man Sues in Pennsylvania

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "We hope to grow potatoes this year."

Robert Bear, 63-year-old Mennonite farmer in Cumberland County, Pa., says he's glad for using "we" instead of "I."

"I lived alone for five years until I married, and I hope I seldom slip back to saying 'I,'" he explained.

Bear described himself as a lonely man, lonely because he became he is ostracized. His wife of 19 years and his adult children have left his 400-acre farm; his neighbors will have nothing to do with him, and his ordeal has caused him to neglect his profitable farm work, he said.

He is the object of shunning, a practice of the Reformed Mennonite Church, which estimates it has 400 members in the United States and Canada. Bear was a member until his excommunication in June, 1971.

The church, in what it says is a command "based on love," ordered its members in 1972 to sever all relationships with Bear. Even his wife, Gale Bear, obeyed the order under threat of her own excommunication.

"She says I'm repulsive," Bear lamented.

Bear, in his enforced solitude, is fighting back. His spring's potato planting may be delayed because he is busy with a suit filed against the church in the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, and with a book he has written about his "gruesome punishment."

Bear was excommunicated for publicly criticizing church doctrine. He also criticized two church bishops, one of whom, Glenn Gross, is his brother-in-law.

"I accused a bishop of cut-and-dry lying," he said. Bear accused his brother-in-law of giving communion to two church members who had sinned and then denying he had done so.

Bear said he also broke with the church's strict stand against religious television. Devoted to church doctrine, they are not to own a television set. They expected me to walk out along front of the church member at the funeral of a friend who had become minister of another belief.

Bear said they would excommunicate a Reformed Mennonite if he didn't refuse to hear that minister to go into another room while he preached.

"I thought they weren't going enough for anything like that," he said.

Last Dec. 2, Bear asked the state Supreme Court to overrule a lower-court ruling which permits the Reformed Mennonites to shun him.

He said the punishment has destroyed his marriage because his wife cannot tolerate his presence, alienated his children through his wife's influence, and ruined his business because his hired hand of 10 years, another Reformed Mennonite, refused to work for him.

Lawyers for the church argued in court that the state should not interfere with the excommunication of a church member accused of heresy. Bear's lawyers contended that shunning "exceeds the bounds of social order and morality and constitutional protection."

Bear said the command was issued before he was given a chance for a hearing or due process under the 14th Amendment.

The Supreme Court took the case under advisement.

Until December, 1974, Bear lived apart from his family in a trailer less than a mile from his farmhouse. He saw his six children only by chance. The Mrs. Bear took them away to live with her mother.

"They had to obey the order. They don't need to obey the second relationship." Bear, a member of the Mennonite sect since 1946, said. The order but my wife said to treat of the church, "I didn't wouldn't ever believe anything I said.

"They can't see any end to this. And they stick to the church pretty much. I believe."

The Reformed Mennonite movement broke away from the Mennonite Church in 1812 because it objected to changes in practices that had existed since the church was founded in 1600. Reformed Mennonite theology is based on literal translation of the New Testament.

Some members still wear 19th-century clothing.

Excommunication or shunning is frequent among Reformed Mennonites, ranging from five or more a year sometimes, but Bear is the first to challenge the practice in the courts. Shunning was one of the practices Reformed Mennonites insisted upon maintaining when the sect formed.

Glenn Gross grows vegetables, tends a nursery, and serves as one of the sects nine bishops.

"If Robert were to repent, he could return to the church," Gross said. "Nothing has it intended to help a person see his error."

But Bear is not interested in returning to the church.

"They weren't being honest and I didn't believe in their doctrine. If they weren't breaking up a family the corruption wouldn't matter to me but I want to expose them. This will be the last family they destroy."

Bear has hired lawyers and a public relations firm to publicize his book, The Book, Defeated Unto Satan, came out in January, Bear published it himself.

He said that if the state Supreme Court decides in his favor, the church will "take a martyr stance," claiming interference with freedom of religion.

Gross said he is worried neither about the book nor the coming court decision.

"When the whole truth is exposed or revealed, I can see it isn't entirely as it has been publicized. The Scriptures teach us to believe in God. We want to believe in God. We want to believe in the powers that be, but if our rights are judged unconstitutional, we would have to follow Christ."

"A year or so ago, I said I would move away if I lost my court case but the situation has changed. Since my wife left, I've moved away. It's been such a relief not to have that burden of the closest people to you thinking so evil of you."

"I really would have to consider calling if I would leave now. This is where I've lived all my life."

Bear said most shunned Mennonites accept their lot as just punishment because they believe the church doctrine.

"Every member knows that shunning is a certain penalty and they are afraid to step out of line."

Incomparable Legacy Bequeathed by Wesley

by
Dr. Gordon C. Smyth

One night in 1709, a gang of ruffians set fire to a thatched cottage at Epworth, England, where the vicar lay sleeping. Rev. Samuel Wesley and members of his family escaped to their night-shirts.

Recall that John was put left behind to the rush. A valiant effort was rescued him. When he restored to his members, Susannah uttered prophetic words that echoed Amos 4:11. "Is he not this a brand plucked from the burning?"

In due course, John Wesley was a graduate from Christ Church College, Oxford, and became his father's curate. After two years, he returned to the university to take up duties as a Fellow in Lincoln College.

The name "Methodist" was a sarcastic barb aimed at early participants in the movement started that year (1729) by Wesley, involving strict rules of daily study, worship and service to the city's poor.

When, in 1735, a clergyman was wanted to go to Georgia in order to convert Indians and regular chaplain for the colonists, John Wesley responded. After several years, he went home to England, deeming his mission a failure.

On the historic night of May 24, 1738, he went to a Moravian meeting in Aldersgate Street, London. He listened to the reading of Martin Luther's preface to the Epistle to the Romans. "I felt," he wrote later, "my heart strangely warmed. I felt I did trust in Christ, Christ alone, for salvation; and an assurance was given to me that he had taken away my sins." That evening was the watershed in his life.

Wesley became the busiest man in the realm. He travelled more than 250,000 miles, mostly on horseback, and preached more than 40,000 times. Although he made about $100,000 from his publications, in 1791 he left less than $20.

But he bequeathed to posterity an incomparable legacy. The spiritual awakening that he caused affected the nation widely and deeply. The Christian conscience that he aroused abolished the institution of slavery in England and its colonies, reformed bloodshed, and inspired movements associated with the names of John Howard, Florence Nightingale, and William Booth.

Were John Wesley here today, I am sure that he would have no blessing for revivalists taking the public for $100 million a year, just to buy TV time.

I am of the opinion that he would not applaud Rex Humbard's announcement that he presides over "the largest television network in the world." I cannot imagine him nodding in approval when Oral Roberts says, "Something GOOD is going to happen to YOU!"

No doubt Wesley would use the media to best advantage. You would see a man of God in the kind of cassock he wore wherever he preached the Gospel, a learned man, a man with a heart on fire to call you for the renewal of the church in which you were raised, in a costly mission on behalf of the skeptical or destitute, offering you the joy of a great Companion and the strength of a wonderful Redeemer.

Parks, Recreation Take Biggest Cuts in City Hall Budget

The budgets for Belleville parks and recreation took the heaviest hammering Friday in council's battle to hold the line on the city's 1975-76 budget.

Both departments had $25,000 chopped from their budgets — marking the only substantial budget changes made by council during six hours of wading through the 84-page document.

The city parks drew the heaviest fire in discussions — a board which had already been trimmed by more than $18,000 by city manager Wilbur Purcell.

The budget reflected a $138,000 increase over 1974 for a total budget allowance of more than $800,000.

"Can we afford to spend this much more on parks this year?" charted Ald. Joe Cox.

Parks board chairman Paul Russell explained: "We've really been hit by inflation and labor increases." This budget was the first to include salary for parks staff. He also explained the board is completing a study on the west river bank park and improvements to the Alemite ball field.

Ald. Cox initial vote which lost calling for a $50,000 cut, the second motion for $25,000 was carried.

Appropriate cuts in the budget, the $25,000 has been left in the hands of the parks board.

Recreation, working with an initial budget proposal of $668,444 also took a $25,000 bringing its budget to $643,444.

"We're happy with the budget," said Ald. George Zegouras, chairman of the recreation committee. "Council made some constructive comments.

Council disagreed with one recommendation forwarded by the city manager that $38,000 for the Memorial Gardens be removed from the budget.

"It was important that we get the work on the arena contract completed," said Ald. Zegouras. It has been on the books for more than a year.

Commenting on the parks and recreation discussion, Ald. Ben Corke said, "parks and recreation are the two favorite targets of every alderman".

Council Holds Tax Raise To Four Mill Increase

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Belleville home owners will pay an average of $40 more in residential taxes this year as the result of a five-day city budget session in which council authorized a four-mill increase of which only 1.7 mills is attributed to increased municipal spending.

The remaining 2.3 mills — the lion's share of the tax hike — comes as the result of a 10-per cent increase in public school board spending.

The average individual increase is calculated on one the hands of city manager Wilbur Purcell.

The budget reflected a $138,000 increase over 1974 for a total budget allowance of more than $800,000.

"Can we afford to spend this much more on parks this year?" charted Ald. Joe Cox.

Maintenance Study Program Stays in Public Works Share

Belleville's $2.2 million public works budget passed council approval with scarcely a comment during current budget deliberation Friday.

Counting as the city's largest current budget expenditure, the public works budget had the heaviest cuts before it came to council at

Y Grant One of Four Reduced by Council

Four Belleville organizations had their council grants reduced or erased completely during curtailed budget talks Friday.

The four agencies are the Central Volunteer Bureau, Highlands Of Hastings Tourist Association, Belleville YMCA and the Citizens Bureau.

In the current budget — before approval — 18 city groups or institutions were slated to receive some municipal support for a combined sum of $52,000 — $3,000 more than in 1974.

The volunteer bureau, a member of the United Appeal, lost $1,500 from its $4,500 request. The tourist association which doubled its request this year to $1,600 took a cut of $500 from its request.

The YMCA, also a United Appeal member, was reduced from $18,545 to $11,000 and a request for $15,000 on behalf of the Citizens Bureau was erased completely.

The motion for reductions which totaled $12,658 was made by Ald Ben Corke.

Meanwhile, the Chamber of Commerce received $18,000 — $500 more than in 1974.

Fire, Police Pay Hikes Reflected in Budget

It will cost $150,000 more this year for Belleville fire protection — the bulk of the increase going to improved pay and fringe benefits for firefighters.

The budget approved in council current budget discussions Friday is set at $1,168,000.

Of 19 budget items, the substantial increases occur in salaries, pension and workmens compensation and fringe benefits.

Salaries are budgeted at $868,385 for 1975 — compared to $798,185 in 1974 — the pension and compensation contributions climbed to $71,796 from last year's $60,541 and fringe benefits went from $44,976 to $59,361.

Expenses for minor variances, all other fire department budgetary items remained actual spending in 1974.

With only one or two exceptions, labor costs tell the story for city police protection which will also cost substantially more this year. The department's budget is set at $268,727 for a total budget of $1,587,001.

Of this increase, salaries account for $180,700.

"We paved and paved and paved the budget," said Mayor Robin Jeffrey.

"We can't do no more manoeuvring room."

Phone Rate Debated

Debate is expected to be raised during Monday's city council meeting at 4 p.m. on a proposed Bell Canada telephone residence rate increase for the Belleville exchange.

On council's agenda is a letter from the company informing the city Belleville's total telephone count has increased by a post where transfer of the exchange to a higher rate group is warranted.

Also on the agenda will be the appearance of a delegation from Local 2007 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE). A city hall spokesman said Friday a "grievance" will be presented but there were no further details.

A letter has been received by council from Donald R. Irvine, provincial minister of housing, stating he approves in principle the city application to the Ontario Home Renewal Program (OHRP).

And Bylaws will be presented authorizing the purchase of certain lands required for the northerly extension of Bridge St. and authorizing the execution of a certain amendment agreement between the city and the Ontario Humane Society.

No Showers For Boaters

City council Friday approved an $8,000 budget for the city's Harbor Improvement Committee and a $3,500 grant for the construction of shower facilities at Victoria Park.

During discussions, Ald. Sta Meeks suggested the city purchase one of the cabins that is being auctioned from the Potter property. He urged council to approve a motion to purchase the cabin by sending a municipal employee to bid up to $400.

Members of council contered that a wooden structure would be at such risk of vandalism and voted against Ald. Meeks.

"It's one thing to build docks, but I don't think showers are beneficial," said Ald. Joe Cox.

The number of the budget will be spent on construction of more docks, renovation of an existing boat launching ramp and employment of a full-time attendant.

Nine-year-old Susan Nicholson of RR 1, Madoc, who has had her left leg amputated below the knee as a result of a farm accident in 1968 near Campbellford, offers her appreciation to Bud Farrell of Havelock, Kingston branch president for the War Amputations of Canada, for the assistance the branch has given her by providing an artificial limb, during the branch's annual spring dinner at Sun Luck Gardens here Friday. Seated at each side are her parents, Maree and Gerald Nicholson.

War Amps Help Madoc Girl

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

Susan Nicholson is nine years old. She attends Madoc Township Elementary School, plays with her brothers and sisters, climbs trees and rides a bicycle.

Sounds just like any other child her age, doesn't she?

But Susan is somewhat special for she is an amputee — the result of a farm accident when she was three years old in 1968, living near Campbellford.

Susan, the daughter of Gerald and Maree Nicholson of RR1, Madoc, caught her left leg in a grain auger (a pulley) and had her leg amputated from about three inches below the knee.

She uses an artificial leg which has no toes but the War Amputations of Canada (Kingston branch) has promised her a new one with toes.

The Kingston branch, which comprises a triangulated area from Trenton to Perth-ville and Tweed, has adopted Susan as its "daughter" and this year gave her funds at the branch's annual spring dinner Friday at Sun Luck Gardens here.

Mrs. Nicholson said War Amputations paid the cost of Susan's present limb and has pledged the total cost of a new one.

Reader Charges Sports Writer Slapped Insult at Volunteers

Dear Editor:

On Wednesday May 7, your self-anointed "Sports Writer" slapped an insult at the volunteers in our minor hockey system. The "Sports Writer" decreed that all Belleville hockey coaches should be coaches for pay and that the coaches did not respond. Yes I know that I sound rather odd and most noticeable the prepared "Big Intelligence" and CIBG are giving to the commercial hockey school operating in Belleville this summer. Too obvious and noticeable is the attempt to intimidate coaches to register. Where was the "Sports Writer" when the Coaches Clinic sponsored by our local Stephen Leacock Share that past winter? A clinic held at a time when coaches could attend — where were you at that 7 AM start?

The Belleville volunteer hockey coaches involve themselves for exactly no profit, by joining with our youth in the game of hockey. Not only do they give of their time and money but also sacrifice a certain amount of their family time. Today family life is most important, but should it be valued as something to be cherished. Along with the outfit with ideas of profit and demands that coaches provide that profit.

Instead of ridiculing the coaches, the "Sports Writer" should compliment the local volunteers.

Silver Lad Is Tops

By DOUG JEFFRIES

Silver Lad, driven by Brian Belleau, won Friday night's feature race at the Quinte Exhibition Raceway. His time of 2:11 was a lifetime best for the one mile oval. It was a purse of $175 and owner Russ Millbrook and Millbrook couldn't have been happier. It was the second consecutive victory for the horse.

Overall it was a good night for individual records, as the track was very fast.

Mil Ross broke it's lifetime record by running the mile in 2:13.4. It was driven by Gary Walker of Colborne. Tootsie D. Direct ran four seconds faster than its previous best in a time of 2:15.3.

Coastal Beauty broke its record in the mile under the guidance of Jerry Robinson of Peterborough in a time of 2:15. Robinson drove three horses to finish as he piloted Bart Starr for another first, and Joe Stash for a third place finish.

Two other horses broke their own race records for the mile. They were Moondance Pete, driven by Larry Zebedee in a time of 2:11.3 and Silver Lad in the feature.

Steve Keenes finished at Kingston on Friday night's successive victory covering the distance in a time of 2:14.1.

A local winner, Jack Harry won the fastest race in a photo finish, timed at 2:15.4. It was the first Moondaisie Pete driven by Larry Zebedee in a time of 2:11.3 and Silver Lad in the feature.

And Thank You, Too Mr. Zdenek Kvarda

A letter from Zdenek Kvarda has been on my desk for sports page. Since it's addressed to the "editor", there is the possibility, gentleman meant to have his views in print on the editorial page.

If that was his aim, I beg his pardon. But the letter did find its way to my desk.

Explanations out of the way, I'm glad Mr. Kvarda has done the sports department a favor. While the "sports writer" he refers to is enjoying (I trust) his weekend off, I feel obligated to offer some comments.

In my opinion, the "sports writer" was making an effort to draw attention to the fact that hockey coaches in this area were passing up a gone-in-a-lifetime chance, right on their own doorstep.

Mr. Kvarda's reaction leads me to suspect that "sports writer" accomplished what he set out to do.

Turning to another subject brought out in the letter, may I ask what is odd about the season? The Intelligencer is giving the Tam O'Shanter Hockey School?

Seems to me, the school is a business which has a beneficial effect on the economy to a degree. We view with alarm when anyone business which is headed for oblivion in the Bay of Quinte area. And we do our best to make sure this business or any other which is making a contribution to communities in the district, is not forced to move on.

"Where were you at that 7 a.m. start?" asks the letter writer while referring to a coaches' clinic.

If it was a Saturday, Mr. Kvarda, the no-duty member of the sports staff was at his desk . . . had been for 60 minutes and is ready to carve out the day's news.

Seems to me I remember the clinic referred to. Like so many others, that particular endeavor was sponsored by this department simply because the time required to let us know it was taking place.

It's the same old story. If you're upset because you've been neglected, look no further than yourselves when searching for whipping boys.

"Sports writer" and yours truly have spent an hour or two and (now that you've brought up) a nickel or a dime ourselves while tending night's pro wrestling card at Memorial Arena.

But the popular Italian did get the bell, in a way.

Looking for a pat on the back?

I'll settle for the realization that I'm making a contribution. Sure, some parents appreciate the efforts of those persons involved in minor sports. But there are other mothers and fathers who make life miserable for the volunteers.

Ridiculing the coaches?

Poppycock, sir.

These columns have praised the efforts of more than one Belleville resident who is involved with the youngsters.

So Mr. Green is paid for his efforts.

Do you work for nothing, Mr. Kvarda?

Playing the game?

I suggest you learn the rules.

But, and I mean this sincerely, thank you very much for writing. Too many would let off steam with anonymous telephone calls and "house talk".

On behalf of "sports writer" may I offer my compliments.

ZDENEK KVARDA

Stasiak Loses Match but Keeps Belt

By DOUG WALSH
Sports Editor

Officially, Tony Parisi failed in his bid to take the North American Championship Belt from Stan Stasiak. But Stasiak was out of the ring when referee Wilf Jennings raised Parisi's arm in a victory salute.

"To take the belt, a challenger must pin the champion," explained Jennings.

Parisi didn't seem impressed with the explanation.

But he did get his wish. The same two will book up in an Italian Death Match when Big Bear Sports Promotion presents its second card of the season, at Memorial Arena May 23.

Earlier, the fans (1,500 announced promoter Conrad Gargus) saw Billy Red Lyons take advantage of a glaze of events to gain the nod over the Canadian Wildman; twin Billy and Benny McGuire (all 1,200 lbs. of them) smother Hell's Angel No. 1 and Bad Boy Nevins, and popular Duncan MacTavish prevail over Terry Yorkston.

The Wildman made the mistake of enlarging referee Jennings by a length of chain. And that led to his downfall.

Lyons chased the bearded one out the fruit door in a speedy footrace that would have made some track stars sit up and take notice.

Tony Parisi, on his knees, and Stan Stasiak spent much of their time out of the ring during Friday night's main event in opening wrestling card of the season at Memorial Arena. Parisi was declared winner but didn't get Stasiak's belt.

Hell's Angel and Nevins had little chance in their abbreviated match with the McGuirs. Once they got into the ring the brothers simply leaned on their opponents and it was over in a hurry.

MacTavish, who raises thoroughbred race horses at Hillier, when he's not busy at the wrestling circuit, showed early that he'll be a favorite with the fans. His defeat of Yorkston was greeted with approval.

In the final bout, midgets Bobo Johnson and Dirty Dutch Mitchell put on the fireworks. But when they decided to continue hostilities outside the ring, Jennings called it no contest.

Busy Weekend for Macs

The Belleville McDonald's will be hoping to get off the ground this weekend when they travel to Oshawa, this afternoon, and take on Newmarket at home on Sunday in doubleheader.

The locals are really reaching for a top this weekend. Oshawa is the defending Canadian Football champion and Newmarket was the same title in 1973.

The McDonald's were all set to take off last Sunday, but rain negated any chances of a first scheduled Ontario Football League exhibition doubleheader against Oshawa Wildcats.

While they'll have their hands full today facing the pitching of Paul Wassmanber, Steve Colley and Harry Timbers. Sunday's 2 p.m. start at Alemite Park is going to be a tough one too.

Newmarket finished first in the OFL East Division in 1974, but bowed out of playoff action to Niagara Falls. In regular season play they won 29 and lost only 15 to finish six-and-one-half games up.

Bob Dorink compiled a fabulous 20-3, won-lost record to capture the league's best pitching award. Another member of the Newmarket pitching staff, Bill Lunney, finished with a 10-5 mark and Larry Marshall, who pitched 19 games finished 9-4.

While Dorink, Lunney and Marshall were holding the opposition off the bases, shortstop Les Downing was leading the swing attack for the Newmarket squad.

Downing batted .352 in 1974 to capture the OFL batting championship. He scored the third most runs (28) had the third most hits (41), led in doubles with 18, was se'on'd in home runs (4); second in walks (20) and finished se . . . in runs batted in with 27. All this in 49 games and 161 times at bat. His statistics were down slightly from 1973 when he batted .352 and led the league in all departments.

Right behind Downing, adding to the Newmarket attack, was teammate Wally Cooper. He finished with a .274 average, fourth in the league, and he and teammate Bill Eves belted out six home runs apiece.

Admission to the doubleheader is $1.50 for adults, 75 cents for children.

TIES RECORD

WINTER PARK, Fla. (AP) — Houston McTear, 18, equaled the world record in the 100-yard dash Friday with a nine-second clocking in a preliminary heat of a high school track and field meet. The wind gauge showed two miles an hour, under the allowable 4.47 m.p.h. The time shattered the national high school record of 9.3 seconds, and tied the world mark of 9.0 set by Ivory Crockett last year at Knoxville, Tenn.

PRACTICE DISRUPTED

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Police said one of the largest crowds ever—estimated at up to 15,000—for an Indianapolis 500 practice session was disrupted by unruly elements Friday afternoon and Mace was used to quell one disturbance. No injuries were reported. The Speedway police cruisers were damaged by debris and beer bottles after police arrested a young man for public intoxication.

REAL SUPREME WINS

NEW YORK (AP) — Real Supreme held on in a long stretch drive Friday to win the 107th Times Tested Purse at Aqueduct race track. The four-year-old son of Iron Ruler-Queen of the Jury, ridden by Ron Turcotte of Grand Falls, N.B., won by a half-length over Ratchet Man in 1:22 2-5 for seven furlongs.

Flyer Captain Makes His Point

Harder to Keep Cup Than Win

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (CP) — It's harder to defend the Stanley Cup than win it, says Bobby Clarke, who led Philadelphia Flyers to their first cup win a year ago.

"It's a belief, he says, that every team wants to knock you off," said the Flyers captain.

The so-called "toughness" from New York are, indeed, making it tougher for Philadelphia, and that's hard for the Flyers and their supporters to accept.

The Islanders have lasted through 15 playoff games, and nobody believed that could happen. Thousands of Flyer fans started leaving the game early Thursday night in Philadelphia, where the Islanders won 5-1.

But Denis Potvin of the Islanders said that if New York wins Sunday to tie the series 3-3, anything could happen in Philadelphia Tuesday night.

"A fourth game doesn't matter in the seventh game of a playoff series," he said. The mainstay of the club's power play, Potvin has been the ice for all 15 Islander games against the Flyers.

Coach Fred Shero of the Flyers also said home ice advantage means nothing in a seven game. It didn't in Philadelphia.

"I'm sure Shero is a little bit worried about it and he should be," Potvin said.

"I think we're well-motivated now, and I think it can turn out for the best for us if we keep playing the way we have and if we're careful.

"I still say it, if we get three goals in every game of the series we can win it."

Shero said the box defence of the Islanders was very effective against th Flyers because of good blocking defencemen who do it the right way.

"They're very good at blocking. They've got four defenmerred about it and he should be," Potvin said.

Pride of Alabama, Nelson Has Lead

DALLAS (AP) — Larry Nelson, the pride of backwoods Alabama, partayed an evension to work and a sparkling 65 into an unofficial role today at the $175,000 Byron Nelson golf tournament.

Nelson, a non-winning tour sophomore, had the field into the third round of the chase for $25,000, taking the six-under par 65 to an opening 69 for a 36-hole total of 134.

Nelson, 27, who spurned golf until age 23, posted just a couple of bemusing pars Friday day to seize a one-shot lead as most greens got gentle and made the Preston Trail course play easy.

Tom Watson, for instance, knocked in eight birdie putts ranging from two to 30 feet for a course record-equalling 67—and shared second at 135 with Bob Smith, who shot a 68.

Bruce Crampton with 68-70 was a stroke back at 136 with Bright Nevil, who shot 68 for his 136.

George Knudson of Toronto was among nine players crowded into the 137 slot with Jack Ewing's 63 the best. Just ahead was Watson Ewing left his birdie putt on the final hole inches short of setting a course record.

Knudson shot a 69 for his 137. Ben Kern of Toronto missed the cut with a 72-71-143 after shooting a 73 for 139.

An unprecedented total of 84 golfers survived the cut, where a matched regulation 71 over the normally treacherous 6,937-yard course. Defending champion Brian Allin was among them at 70-74, and shared second at 135 with Bob Smith, who shot a 68.

Atlantic Boxers Dominate Bouts

NORTH BAY, Ont. (CP) — Boxers from the Atlantic provinces dominated the opening matches in the Eastern Canadian boxing championships Friday night, capturing three of the four preliminary bouts in the intermediate division.

Fighters from Ontario, Quebec, and the Atlantic provinces are competing in the three-day championships that will go Sunday.

The only knockdown Friday was recorded in one of the two final matches when John Irwin of Quispamsis knocked out Wayne Pride of Ontario at the 1:37 mark of the first round in a bout for the Eastern Canadian champ in the 165-pound category.

The other final in the intermediate division saw John Rafferty of Ontario earn a decision over Steve Hanrahan of the Atlantic provinces in a lively three-round match in the 132-pound class.

Preliminary action saw Harry Green of the Atlantic quality for the final in the 156-pound class by earning a decision over Richard Pilon of Quebec. Dave Jamrozik of Ontario won by decision over Michel Rioux of Quebec in the 130-pound division.

Don Downey of the Atlantic won a decision over Denis Blais of Quebec in the 147 pounds.

Dave Williams, Atlantic, defeated Richard Hamilton of Ontario to gain the finals in the 147-pound division.

The intermediate finals and senior semi-finals will be held today. Sunday afternoon action features senior finals.

Dineen Doesn't Want Home Series

QUEBEC (CP) — Coach Bill Dineen of Houston Aeros will find out tonight whether the point he has stressed to his players for the last three days has registered.

Dineen sees tonight's third game of the best-of-seven World Hockey Association final, which the Aeros lead after winning the first two games at home, as the key to a quick repeat of the championship the Aeros won last season.

What Dineen has been asking his players to keep in mind is that there was no margin established between the two clubs in six regular-season games. He does not want the final to be second to a "homer" series.

The two clubs split the 12 points available during regular-season play. Each team won twice and lost once at home.

While most observers will use the season record as a basis for their predictions of a long final Dineen makes no bones about his desire to wrap up the playoff in a hurry.

"I've talked about it to the players," he said after a practice Friday night. "I told them to put a charge into it, that tomorrow's game was the key."

The Houston coach said one aspect of the series had surprised him.

"It's been a little more physical than I thought it would be," he said. "The Nordiques are very physical and they weren't really down after they had 53 Tuesday."

He said the Quebec club, unlike most teams that attempt to speed than bumping, appeared to be holding its own against the more physically-oriented Aeros.

Both clubs listed doubtful starters for tonight's game.

Defenceman Marty Howe, who missed Tuesday's second game because of tonsilitis, travelled here with the club. Dineen said there was a chance Howe could return tonight.

He said a decision on whether to play Marty and centre Terry Ruskowski will be made near game time.

Ruskowski suffered a severe bone bruise on his right hand during a fight Tuesday night. Dineen said that contrary to earlier reports the bone had not been broken.

Veteran defenceman J. C. Tremblay of the Nordiques was to decide today if an ailment in his right shoulder has healed sufficiently for him to play. Tremblay, who has been hampered by calcium deposits in the shoulder for three months, missed the first two games of the series.

Twins Have the Formula Admits Barrie's Coach

THUNDER BAY, Ont. (CP) — Coach Darryl Sly of Barrie Flyers said hockey is 5 per cent hard work and 95 per cent luck.

And, he said, following his team's 5-2 defeat by Thunder Bay Twins Friday night, the Twins have been getting their 95 per cent from their goaltender.

Although his team trails 3-3 in best-of-seven Allan Cup final, Sly remains an optimist and says a plan say major changes in strategy—other than increase team effort.

"There's another game tomorrow night. The only thing we can do is work a little harder."

Thunder Bay dominated the fifth game of the series, especially after the mid-way point of the first period. It was the second consecutive game in which the Twins outhustled Barrie.

A net two nights earlier, in the fourth game of the series, they outshot the Flyers 33-32, yet paired with 43-34 Friday night before a crowd of 4,866. Thunder Bay was 2.

Scoring on Barrie goals Steve Cole were Mervin McLeod with two, Barry Hogan, Dave Bragnalo and Jack Byerley. Grant Mans and Jim Kanaton replied for the Flyers, beating Twins goalie Rocky Kowalski the third period.

Sly said three questionable penalty calls may have thrown his team off stride, especially the one that resulted in Bragnalo's power-play goal late in the period.

But, unlike the Flyers' pep-up-starved semi-final series with St. John's Capitals, penalties have played a minor part in this series. Friday's two minors, resulting from a third-period fight between Russ Elliott of the Twins and Barrie's Jack Smith, were the first in the series. And Bob Mocetoth of the Flyers, who joined the fracas and was given a game misconduct, had the dubious distinction of receiving the first game misconduct.

Despite the clear-cut victories of the last two games, Thunder Bay coach Dave Siciliano is predicting a tough game in tonight's encounter.

"We'll have to go 60 minutes tomorrow night," he said.

But he says the Twins have been working harder than their opponents because the Flyers, defending Allan Cup champions, have had a taste of victory from last year's triumph. "The Twins are hungrier this year," he said.

Both tonight's game, and a seventh game Sunday, if Barrie ties the series tonight, are to be played in Barrie.

Mets Lead 3-2

Lecuyer Proves Point to Scouts

EDMONTON (CP) — Ron Lecuyer of Spruce Grove Mets seems anxious to prove that the professional hockey scouts were wrong when they passed him in the 1974 draft.

The talented winger scored a goal and two assists Friday night as the Mets defeated Guelph Billmores 6-3 for a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven Centennial Cup hockey series.

He also had three assists as Spruce Grove swamped the Tier Two Junior A final series opener 10-2 and leads the series scoring race with two goals and seven assists.

Lecuyer, 20, is too old for the draft this year, but Spruce Grove coach Doug Messier says the chunky defensive specialist will be invited to pro camps.

Penalties hampered Guelph, the Southern Ontario Hockey league champions, throughout the contest. Guelph players drew 21 of 36 penalties called by referee Ron Burwash for a total of 145 minutes.

Burwash attempted to establish control early in the game when he called 10 penalties—eight to Guelph—within six minutes.

"Although the Guelph team was successful in killing those penalties, I feel it took a lot out of some of their players," Messier said.

He said Guelph deserved even more penalties "because of the way some of their players hold their sticks when they go to check."

Boudreau Leads Charge

Marlboros Put Sherbrooke Out

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Bruce Boudreau solved his scoring and sleeping problems Friday night—all at the expense of Sherbrooke Beavers.

"I guess this will make me sleep a lot better tonight," Boudreau said after breaking out of a personal scoring slump with five power-play goals to lead Toronto Marlboros to a 8-4 sudden-death semi-final victory over the Beavers in Memorial Cup play.

The victory moves the Marlboros into Sunday's final with New Westminster Bruins for the Canadian major junior hockey championship.

Sunday's championship final starts at 1:30 p.m. EDT and will be televised on the CTV national network.

Boudreau, a speedy centre who scored 49 goals in the regular season but dropped to 12 in his 23 post-season games, said he might have been "psyched a little more Friday night for his first goal of the tournament."

Then, I think he started for 60 minutes out there and that was the big thing," Boudreau said.

Boudreau suffered a freak accident at the end of the regular season which hampered his play throughout the playoff. He fell on coach George Armstrong's chair and needed 40 stitches to close the gash.

He suffered from double vision for about a month but admitted he didn't have any trouble seeing in Friday night's game.

Boudreau scored three of his goals in the final period when Toronto rallied from a 4-2 deficit. Sherbrooke goalie Nick Sanza was replaced by Robert Sauve late in the final period.

The loss left the 24-8 at the end of the first period and Sherbrooke a 5-4 edge at the end of two periods.

Boudreau added two goals for the Marlboros and Dave Smith, Dave Gardner and Mike McEwen added single goals for the Ontario Hockey League champs.

Sanza, representing the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League, got two goals and Gaston Larose—his fourth and fifth of the playoffs—and single goals from Fernand Leblanc and Michel Boisclair.

New Westminster, champions of the Western Canada Hockey League, earned a bye into Sunday's final with a 6-3 Wednesday night win over Toronto.

Meanwhile, Sherbrooke 5-4 in overtime in the first game of a Friday-Saturday-Sunday series night, and the Bruins topped Sherbrooke 7-5 in a Monday night game.

Toronto goaltender Gary Carr played a strong game, blocking 37 shots, while Sanza and Sauve combined to make 29 saves for Sherbrooke.

Boudreau's five goals was the highest number he's scored since picking up six in the final game of OHA Junior B playoffs four years ago.

General Manager George Guilbault of Sherbrooke had a few kind words for Armstrong, a former National Hockey League star.

"The momentum that George Armstrong has put into this team is unbelievable," said Guilbault. "They play very disciplined hockey and are a talented hockey team."

"We had to play catch-up hockey all night and as you've seen, you're definitely not able to do that in a Memorial Cup hockey game.

Guilbault thought Boudreau had played a strong game, but said his line-mate, Mark Napier, who assisted on three Boudreau goals, made all the difference.

"Mark Napier is the finest hockey player I have ever seen," Guilbault said. "When the game is tight Sunday he'll be there for digging and I'm sure he'll make a big difference.

"I think if the Marlies play their game of going in the corners, staying in front of the net and using body contact, they'll win it."

Scoreless Skein Ends But Fryman is Happy

MONTREAL (CP) — Woodie Fryman saw his string of scoreless innings ended by Houston Astros but accepted it philosophically as Montreal Expos defeated Houston for a 5-4 win in National League baseball play Friday night.

The Expos scored a run in the fifth inning and four in the sixth to wipe out a 4-0 Astros edge with ex-Expo Jim Crawford.

"It doesn't really bother me because of that. Fryman added of the end of his club-record accumulation of 41 scoreless innings. "It would have been worse if we'd ended up losing.

"I had a good run. I'm not losing. I got behind a few guys. That won't be the first time or the last."

Pepe Mangual's single drove home the winning run in the sixth after earlier scores on a single by Larry Parrish, who extended his hitting streak to 10 games, a double by Barry Foote and a throwing error by Astros right fielder Enos Cabell.

Mangual had driven home the Expos' first run when he lofted a sacrifice fly that drove Cesar Cedeno to the fence in left centre to make a leaping catch.

"All the way I thought it was out," said Cedeno of the fly ball that scored Hal Breeden, who had led off the inning with a double and advanced on pinch hitter Jose Morales's single.

The Astros got their runs on Bob Watson's single, a triple by Cedeno and Skip Jutze's sacrifice.

Mike Marshall Takes His Lumps from Bucs

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

If Mike Marshall can get out of bed today he'll be happy, but he should have stayed in bed Friday night. The Los Angeles Dodgers relief ace was called on to protect a 3-2 lead against Pittsburgh Pirates in the seventh inning and quickly turned it into an 11-5 loss.

In two innings of something resembling batting practice, Marshall was battered for nine runs on seven hits—including two doubles, a triple and a homer—and three walks. It was the worst pounding in a Dodger uniform for Marshall, who set a major league baseball record last season by relieving 106 times, never pitched in more than four runs in any game.

However he had pitched only three innings—all last Saturday—since April 19, when he suffered a rib cartilage on his left side. Was the two-inning shellbag worth it?

"I'll know tomorrow," Marshall said. "If I can get out of bed, then I'll call it a good night."

Elsewhere in the National League, Montreal Expos beat Houston Astros 5-4, Cincinnati Reds nipped New York Mets 4-3, Chicago Cubs beat San Diego Padres 5-2, Atlanta Braves defeated Philadelphia Phillies 3-1 and St. Louis Cardinals beat San Francisco Giants 6-4.

Marshall, the chief tormentor was Pittsburgh's Dave Parker, who slammed a two-run triple to cap a four-run seventh inning that put the Pirates on top 6-3 and homered with two men on base in a five-run eighth. Parker also drove in a sixth run with a sixth-inning double off starter Burt Hooton.

Second baseman Joe Morgan singled home the final two runs in Cincinnati's four-run fifth, sending the Mets to their fifth consecutive defeat.

Rick Monday's two-run homer capped a three-run first inning for Chicago. Ray Bulvis limited the Padres to six hits by before giving way to Darold Knowles with two out in the eighth.

Chicago added two runs in the eighth when Bill Madlock singled, John Summers tripled and Jerry Morales hit a sacrifice fly.

Atlanta's Biff Pocoroba drove in two runs with his first major league hit, backing the five-hit pitching of Rowe Harness. Pocoroba, making only his third start as the Brave's catcher, lined a one-out single to left in the second inning off Tom Underwood following a single by Earl Williams and a double by Larvell Blanks.

Ron Fairly drove in four runs for St. Louis with a two-run single and a two-run homer, his first of the season.

Hamilton's Al Brenner Decides on Retirement

HAMILTON (CP) — Defensive back Al Brenner has decided to retire front football rather than sign what he feels is an unacceptable contract offer from Hamilton Tiger-Cats, says Brenner's agent, Gerry Sternberg.

Brenner is entering the option year of his contract and could have played the 1975 Canadian Football League season for 90 per cent of contract salary and become a free agent next year. But Sternberg said Brenner decided instead to retire, leaving him free to return to the club later in the season.

"If he doesn't go to training camp then he can come back should a satisfactory contract be offered and without being fined," said Sternberg.

Sternberg said he and Brenner met May 1 to look into other possibilities, one of which may be the World Football League where Memphis Southmen hold the rights to Brenner.

"They may be willing to sign a player on an option year but they would not have to be prepared to test it should Hamilton go to court."

Brenner, 27, was a CFL all-star in 1971 and 1972 and had a league-record 15 interceptions during the season.

12 Straight Wins

Kaat Sets Club Record

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Chicago pitcher Jim Kaat won his 12th consecutive victory, five of them this season, leading the Cleveland Indians 2-0 Friday night. He blanked the Indians on seven hits before giving way to his friends, relief pitchers Jim Kern and Terry Forster, in the ninth.

"If it wasn't for Gossage and Forster, I'd be 0-12 this year," said Kaat, a 36-year-old left-hander. "They've bailed me out of every game I've pitched. I'd have to say I gave the instance but the victory is good enough."

Elsewhere in the American League, Milwaukee Brewers beat Kansas City Royals 7-1, Minnesota Twins defeated Baltimore Orioles 5-2, Texas Rangers defeated Detroit Tigers 5-1, Boston Red Sox beat California Angels 4-1 and Oakland A's edged New York Yankees 4-3.

Kaat beat Gaylord Perry, who made one bad pitch and wound up a loser. That pitch was to Pat Kelly in the eighth inning, and Kelly hit it for a three-run homer.

Perry held the White Sox hitless over the first five innings and had a one-hitter until the eighth, when Tony Muser led off with an infield single and two outs later, Kelly hit his first home run of the season. Perry finished with a four-hitter.

Hank Aaron's 736th career home run accounted a 1-1 tie for Milwaukee and highlighted a five-run seventh inning. It was his third homer of the season and was greeted by a standing ovation from 7,500 Kansas City fans.

Bobby Mitchell had a two-run triple and Don Money a two-run double in the big inning.

Minnesota posted its fifth victory in six starts behind rookie Jim Hughes, who pitched a seven-hitter for his second major-league shutout.

Six of the first nine Baltimore batters reached base against Hughes, who he survived thanks to some shoddy baserunning. Al Bumbry was caught stealing while running on his own and Paul Blair was tagged out after the infield fly rule had been called on a pop fly.

Texas got the go-ahead run in the third inning on a throwing error by rookie outfielder Don Moyer and added an insurance in the ninth on Tom Walker's wild pitch, with the bases loaded. Walker, who had "temporarily was Texas' Jackie Robinson," finished a six-hitter.

Boston's Rick Wise stopped California on three hits, losing his shutout in the ninth on a leadoff homer by Mickey Rivers. Rick Burleson paced the Red Sox attack with two doubles and a single.

Oakland got its winning run in the eighth when Billy Williams walked with the bases loaded. Oakland, which stole second, moved to third on Freeman Mumaw's throwing error and scored on Sparky Lyle's wild pitch. Lyle was the Yanks' sixth straight loss.

Excelsiors Win 24-8

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — Brampton Excelsiors defeated Brantford Warriors 24-8 Friday in Ontario Lacrosse Association major series play.

Brian Robiness led the Excelsiors with four goals while Bob Haw, Barry Richardson and Joe Modrera each scored three goals.

John Clements and Bob Simpson, with two goals each, paced the losing side.

Brampton led 9-2 after the first period, 17-4 after the second.

At Elliott's we are transportation specialists, sensitive to our customers' needs, willing to go an extra mile to help you select the car that suits your needs and your budget.
There are SEVEN solid reasons for leasing. Which one fits you?
- You drive 15,000 miles or more a year.
- You can use your car professionally or in business — which means you enjoy the convenience of a simple and accurate receipt for your income tax deductions.
- You'd like fixed, predictable monthly expenses that cover such costs of enjoying a new car as financing, depreciation, plates, taxes.
- You'd like to be sure of having a car that's always new from the start and never gets too old.
- You'd like to put as little money down as possible and still get into a new car.
- You'd like to forget the concern over what your car will be worth at trade-in time.
- You'd like to enjoy a top-of-the-line car.

Leasing is an ALTERNATIVE to buying. For many people, leasing makes a lot of sense. At Elliott's we both lease and sell cars. That means we can objectively help you to compare which is better for you, buying or leasing.

HELP WANTED

234 FRONT STREET
Belleville, Ontario

HIGHEST EARNINGS IN THE REAL ESTATE PROFESSION

If you qualify you will become part of our team of high-income professional real estate.

Our training program will help guarantee your financial success with unlimited opportunity for advancement to a responsible management position in a rapidly expanding organization with a network of 14 offices between Toronto and Kingston.

We provide a most generous commission split and bonus incentive system.

Our advertising generates the greatest sources of prospect leads, and client referrals from our coast to coast and international connections.

We serve the fastest growing markets in South Central Ontario.

You will be able to specialize in a fully departmentalized company as you gain knowledge and experience, but we are not so large that you would lose your individual identity.

We offer a full range of fringe benefits including an income protection plan.

Should you meet our requirements, you will also have a chance to enjoy the different pace of business in a smaller city or town, because we are a recognized leader in country property transactions.

If you are willing to undergo challenging aptitude examinations for a "PROFESSIONAL" career with W. Frank Real Estate Limited, please communicate with:

Max Barrett, Manager,
W. FRANK REAL ESTATE LIMITED,
243 N. FRONT STREET, BELLEVILLE
BELLEVILLE: 962-9248

Dunninger and Houdini's Mystery

Recently, Dunninger, the great mentalist — telepathy, the presumed ability to read minds — died at the age of 85.

Back in the 1920s and 1930s, Dunninger thrilled radio and television audiences with his apparent ability to read their minds. Try his famous "Joe" Dunninger was just one of themselves, a professional trickster, though more spectacular and a believer lot more successful than most of them. But to himself Dunninger may have become something more.

There are those who think he actually may have believed that at times he could read minds; and some experts, such as Walter Gibson, author of more than a hundred books and consultant (then partner) to the Amazing Randi, who did do things that even they couldn't figure out.

I met Dunninger, for the first time and the last, in Hallowe'ens 1974 at the ballyhoed Houdini seance in Niagara Falls, Ontario.

The seance, a palpable publicity stunt for the Houdini Museum in Niagara Falls, was heralded for the last, absolutely final seance to put from Houdini (who died in 1926, on Hallowe'en) — a message supposedly agreed upon between him and his personal friend, Joseph Dunninger.

The seance was a mailbox but a sort of magnificent one. Boxing Day, Christmas, (you up in, of all things, a hearse) a slate was left in a mailbox and Houdini afficianados turned up, including Walter Gibson, and such famous names in the magic world as Jay Marshall, Sidney Radner and James Randi, otherwise known as The Amazing Randi.

Into the midst of these magicians, not one of whom likely believed for a moment in the possibility of communicating with the dead, was buried a medium, Anne Fisher of Albany, whose job it was to bring through Harry's spirit. (She was like a goldfish in a sea of piranha.)

She made a valiant try. While we all sat around a large round table in true seance style, the medium intoned, "Harry, give us a sign of your presence."

A moment later a book fell to the floor from where it had been nestling amid a bunch of flowers on a table seven or eight feet away from the medium. Somebody checked and discovered that it was a book about Houdini by Walter Gibson and was open at a page headed the caption, DO THE DEAD RETURN?

Had Houdini finally, after 48 years, gotten through?

No. I was confident that somebody at the seance had given the spirits a helping hand with the book and publicly accused The Amazing Randi-Dandy of having done it. Randi, an outspoken foe of psychical research, hunched and hawed and doubtfulled the question but refuted to flatly deny having rigged the trick. (Randi had more bad luck in a few days later. On November 4, 1974 he arranged to have the "spirit" locked in the jail cell in the offices of the Toronto Sun to demonstrate his scams still as an escapologist. But nine minutes and 35 second later, the jail door hadn't gotten out, the fire department was summoned and Sun executives frantically opened the safe. The world-famous magician was pulled unconscious from the safe.) said The Sun, while horrified staffers looked on "That, said Randi, when he had regained his composure, "was too goddamn close!" )

After the Houdini seance, I asked Dunninger, a man who like Houdini had made his reputation largely as a skeptic and a debunker of phoney mediums, if anything about the seance had impressed him in the least.

To my surprise he said yes. The medium had referred to some "gold coins" which Houdini was said once to have received from Dunninger and which they never found after Houdini's death though police had searched for them. Both facts were correct, said Dunninger.

"Nobody outside our family knew about those gold coins I gave Houdini," Dunninger told me.

"Nobody?" I pressed.

"Nobody," he said. An old skeptic replied emphatically.

Question: So how did the medium know about them?

To Your Good Health

Stuttering Cause Is Not Certain

By C. C. THORTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thorteson: I am 18 years old and I have a stutter big problem. I have stuttered since I can remember. My father stutters, and so does my brother. My father always reminds us about our speech defects.

There is a lot of tension in my family — parental dominance and pressure to achieve. I stutter greatly around my father because of the pressure he puts on me. Do you have any advice?—M. B.

Dear Dr. Thorteson: My son, who is nearly three years old, is beginning to stutter. He has been talking for quite a while now, putting sentences together now. He doesn't stutter all words, but when he says "T" it happens. He stutters the first word of a sentence.

What causes this and what can we do to correct it?—Mrs. J. B.

Dear Doctor: My daughter never stuttered when she was little, but started in her teens. Now at 23, she stutters more. Is there any cure?—M. B. R.

Stuttering or stammering can start at any age, and I believe most these three letters to point this out. The causes are not entirely clear. Some experts tend to suspect psychological causes, others neurological or other organic problems.

Boys seem more affected than girls.

There is a small distinction between stammering and stuttering. The former appears as a difficulty in pronouncing certain syllables whereas they appear. Stuttering is a repetition of initial letters.

M. S.'s letter strongly suggests psychological factors involved in fact, it appears to be a classic set of circumstances — the parental pressure, the overstressing of achievement. The two brothers would do well to talk the matter out with the father.

Mrs. J. B., to ease her concern, should seek analysis by a speech expert but without making too much of a fuss over the matter. It might be nothing more than the precocious 3-year-old behavior associated with all early talkers.

The late onset of the problem in M. B. R.'s daughter suggests again psychological roots. Such problems usually respond with time and appropriate attention, possibly in psychiatry.

Many centers now are using the use of hypnosis in conjunction with these disturbances. It is not the answer. Adequate speech therapy or resolution of the emotional conflicts are the best approaches.

Many school districts have speech-correction facilities as do most of the child guidance centres.

Dear Dr. Thorteson: I understand that food should not be defrosted and refroze before cooking. However, a large piece of frozen meat is a problem for me, who lives alone. Is there anything harmful in eating meat that has been defrosted, cooked and frozen again?—Mrs. B. R. M.

The cooking takes care of any harmful bacteria that might be present. However the remaining meat should be divided into smaller segments so that the refreezing process can occur as rapidly as possible.

It is hard to have the meat in its original plastic wrap during thawing so that it is not exposed to air.

If you are living and eating alone, why not have the butcher cut up your frozen meat into meal-sized portions right in the store? Anyone who has tried to cut a piece of frozen meat knows what a difficult chore it can be.

Dear Dr. Thorteson: My husband says that a woman contributes to ovulate every month despite pregnancy. I say ovulation stops during pregnancy. I say ovulation stops at the time of conception. Who's right?—E.F.

You are.

Sunday and Monday Horoscopes

By BERNICE BEDZ ROSOL

Sunday, May 11

ARIES (March 21-April 20) This is a day to try to consolidate your resources. Don't be vague when plans. Know exactly how to go and why.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You'll be aware mostly of what's ahead. Be alert and listen today, yet you'll do something of interest for yourself.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You must have the courage of your convictions. Don't expect others to go along with your plans today. Hesitation and indecision will they.

CANCER (June 21-July 20) Don't undertake projects now that you feel are beyond your scope. Be most about your talents and abilities.

LEO (July 21-Aug. 22) What you want to accomplish today you can do. Try not to rely upon others who lack a grasp of the situation.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You must stand by your own decisions today to get the results you hoped for. Don't worry. Mistakes can be corrected.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You'd be wise to keep something confidential to yourself today where you're involved with another.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be sure you fully understand all the terms in any agreement you enter into today. Carelessness will prove expensive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't let your productive industry slip by the board. You're a little lazy today. It will take some self-prodding.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Others recognize and appreciate your leadership qualities today. If something comes to a standstill, take over.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Attend first to duties important to the entire household. Play later, after they've attended to.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't crain a lot of time today trying to get others to do things you alone are interested in. Do it alone if necessary.

Monday, May 12, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You'll be receiving some good news relating to one of your large personal interests. It will set you to respond promptly.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) It's an opportune day to attend to matters directly affecting your resources or income. A pleasant process of gain may be yours.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Financial friends, especially those born under the sign of Aries, will be willing to go to bat for you today if approached properly.

CANCER (June 21-July 20) Your chances of collecting old debts or obligations are very good today. Don't be hesitant about asking.

LEO (July 21-Aug 22) Be optimistic and positive about what you go after today. Your attitude will spark others to ally themselves with your cause.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your likelihood of achieving important goal is very promising today. Settle for nothing less than success.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Now's the time to talk to one with whom you'd like to work out an agreement over a major issue of mutual importance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Follow your instincts and hunches today. Don't take needless risks, yet be bold within sensible bounds.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Dissociate from negative influences. Pal around with one you feel is lucky. Some luck will rub off on you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You have a lucky day dealing with others today. It will prove greatly to your advantage if you give praise where praise is due.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Lady Luck tends to look upon endeavors kindly today — particularly in areas where you are creative.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You're likely to get far better results in your business transactions today than you will tomorrow. Stay atop of things.

The late Sonny Moyes who edited the Bridge World magazine for many years used to say a lot of writing about a 4-3 trump fit. He discovered this as much that these 4-3 fits are frequently played in Moyes's in his honor.

Sonny and North, his favorite partner, the late Albert Morehead South.

They were using weak jump overcalls so Morehead could make a mini-jump at takeout double in spite of the singleton heart.

As you can see the 4-3 will make three notrumps because such defense holds four tricks. It won't make five diamonds because East holds three diamond tricks. (11) George Hamilton (12); Movie: Ride Lonesome (3); News Conference (13)

TODAY'S QUESTION

Instead of jumping to three spades your partner has responded two diamonds. What do you do now?

Answer Monday

moods and only two spades. Will it make four spades?

Sonny gave all a chance to try. His raise—to three was based partly on his theory about 4-3 fits and partly because he had great faith in his partner's dummy-playing ability.

Al didn't disappoint him. He made the four-spade contract with no trouble at all.

He ruffed the third club, led a trump to dummy's queen and a second trump back to his ace. West started to run the spades. He didn't really care what he had led. He had lost trumps. Someone could ruff, but that one ruff would be the last trick for the defense.

Sonny, West ruffed as soon as he would and led a fourth club. Al ruffed in dummy, came back to hand with the ace of hearts, drew the last trump and claimed.

CP News Roundup

Thumbing Ban Urged

TORONTO (CP) — A report released Friday by North York Mayor Mel Lastman says a ban on black-hitting would reduce the Toronto hospitals' cost-to-rate by one hundredth a year.

The report, prepared by Dr. Jerry Cooper, chief of psychiatry at Toronto's Princess Margaret Hospital, and Dr. Jean Morgan of the Metropolitan Toronto Police force.

"It is a proven fact that 60 per cent of all car thefts in Canada are committed by or against hitch-hikers," the report says.

Dr. Cooper also writes that about three-quarters of the rapists he has interviewed admitted choosing hitch-hikers as victims.

North York council previously passed two motions banning the practice from its jurisdiction, pending the outcome of a similar ban in the province.

Mayor Lastman says he will place another motion before the new council next week.

SIU Incident

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — John Robert Lazarus, a former vice-president of the Canadian Automobile Workers Union (CAW), was charged Friday with possession of a weapon, following an incident at the SIU area hitching post.

A spokesman for Niagara regional police said a "weapon" was later alleged to be beaten when the man allegedly tried a hatchet concealed in a jacket at an SIU meeting Thursday.

Heads Probe

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — Mississauga Mayor Martin Dobkin said Friday he has asked Judge Ray Sheppard will head a municipal inquiry into allegations of bribery, obstruction of justice and influence-peddling involving city employees.

Mayor Dobkin said the judge will begin the inquiry "as soon as possible" after he is found and consent obtained from the province.

City council of this community last year of Toronto ordered the inquiry by a 44 vote this week.

Aid Libraries

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario government is encouraging libraries to increase their collections of Canadian books, periodicals, films and tapes, Robert Welch, minister of culture and recreation, said Friday.

Mr. Welch told the Ontario Library Trustees Association that grants will be given to 34 regional library systems. The money also would be used for workshops and speaking engagements by Canadian authors.

Seek Easy Marks

TORONTO (CP) — Some students are transferring to high schools with lower academic standards because it is easier to get high marks, William Kent, director of admissions at Ryerson's of Toronto, said Friday.

Admissions officers wonder whether any advantage the right course" programs with limited enrollments because of a lack of adequate facilities and scholarship across Ontario, Mr. Kent said in a high school and university academic conference at York University.

Not Enough Money

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will be unable to finance "a new and prosperous" for rental housing units from the present rental housing budget, Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson said Friday.

He said in a news release that he may find some money available for the rental program "but I am also hopeful that some of these projects will be taken by private lenders."

Queries Evaded

OTTAWA (CP) — The government could be pleased down Friday on the possibility that Canada may take unilateral action on control of the continental shelf.

The issue arose in the Commons following the end of the United Nations Law of the Sea conference in Geneva, which is to end an appeal for countries to talk such action before the next international meeting in New York next year.

Present by the Opposition, neither External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen nor Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc would agree that such action is necessary.

Commander Named

OTTAWA (CP) — Major-General W. H. Vincent, 51, of Vancouver will take command June 27 of the 22 North American Air Defence Command region based at North Bay, the defence department announced Friday.

The new commander, promoted from Major-General J. Pelletier, W. H. Vincent, of Gorton, who is retiring after 31 years' service.

Steinberg's Fined

TORONTO (CP) — County court Judge Hugh O'Connell fined Steinberg's Ltd. $20,000 Friday for false and misleading advertising.

The company, operat ng as Miracle Food Mart, had been convicted in March under the Combines Investigation Act. The trial was in Brampton.

Judge O'Connell fined the company $10,000 on each of the charges of false advertising and ordered it to pay a $5,000 penalty for each of the two further charges and suspended sentence on three others.

He said the company had a policy of selling its items at the advertised price only if making a sacrifice sale to its customers, but the policy was not carried out by some employees.

Turner Critical

SARNIA, Ont. (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner said Friday attacked critics of the government's monetary measures as "short-sighted critics."

He told the Sarnia-Lambton Liberal Association that Prime Minister Trudeau will head a financial special committee on inflation, destruction of job opportunities and influence-peddling involving city employees.

Mayor Dobkin said the judge will begin the inquiry "as soon as possible" after he is found and consent obtained from the province.

City council of this community last year of Toronto ordered the inquiry by a 44 vote this week.

Potato Puzzle

OTTAWA (CP) — Many of Ontario's 200 potato potato growers will quit if they suffer through another year of receiving prices below their cost of production, says Les Armstrong, secretary of the Ontario Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association.

He said a marketing board is required to negotiate a fixed price with processors and eliminate price instability.

"It's a pretty chaotic situation right now. The growers are putting potatoes into the ground with no idea of what price they will receive from the processors.

"If we can get a firm price from the processors, the growers can then make their decision on how much to grow."

Divert Growth

ORILLIA, Ont. (CP) — Ontario Treasurer Darcy McKeough said Friday the provincial government intends to encourage growth in the Simcoe County-Georgian Bay area which may be an alternative for persons who cannot be accommodated along the lakeshore between Hamilton and Ottawa.

"Projections of general trends in the end of the century made it clear that positive steps had to be taken to guide growth and development in the Toronto area and to endeavor to shift some of this growth to other parts of the province," Mr. McKeough said.

'Starts' Decline

TORONTO (CP) — NDP Leader Stephen Lewis urged the government Friday to plow more money into housing starts in light of a 23-per-cent drop in starts last month compared with the same period last year.

The NDP leader said a further infusion of provincial money was needed to spur the industry.

Doctors Want Hospitals To Control Ambulances

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The council of the Ontario Medical Association (OMA) wants hospitals to control ambulance services and also wants a royal commission should set educational standards for ambulance workers.

Dr. J. R. Mackenzie, chairman of the OMA's committee on accidental injuries, said the ambulance should be a direct extension of the hospital emergency department and, for medical standards, ambulance services should be under the control of hospitals.

He said private ambulance firms would not go out of business immediately because legislation to make mandatory the use of lap-shoulder seat belts in automobiles.

In a report on accident prevention, the OMA said. Introduction of seat-belt laws and reduction of speed limits have been shown to significantly reduce fatal accidents and severe disabilities in comparison with accidents.

An OMA spokesman said a survey has shown 69 per cent of persons killed on Ontario highways did not use seat belts and five per cent did wear seat belts. He said it is impossible to tell whether the remaining victims were belts.

Want Speed Cut

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Delegates to the county council meeting of the Ontario Medical Association (OMA) endorsed a resolution Friday to request lower speed limits on provincial highways and introduction of legislation to make mandatory the use of lap-shoulder seat belts in automobiles.

Speak Up!

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Dr. M. L. Mader, chairman of the president of the Ontario Medical Association (OMA), said Friday that medicine should continue to be an aristocratic profession.

Doctors have a key position in medical care and should no longer remain silent as other groups who claim they are triple stomach claim importance in the health-care system, he said during the annual day of the weekling meeting.

Service May Go

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — The Red Cross homemakers' service may be eliminated if the Ontario government does not increase program subsidies, it was agreed Thursday by the society's Ontario division. Some delegates said unless the homemakers' minimum wage to $2.40 an hour from $2.10 and include overtime and holiday pay mandatory without government reimbursement, it will be impossible out of reach of average citizens.

Can Refuse

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Improvement has ruled that provincial Housing Minister Donald Irvine has the right to halt conversion of rental housing units into condominiums which are sold to tenants.

Last October, Mr. Irvine refused to approve an application from Cedar Point Development Ltd. to convert 200 apartments in St. Catherine, Ont., to condominiums.

Vietnam Doctor Montreal Grad

TORONTO (CP) — When Tu Uyen graduated from the University of Montreal school of hygiene eight years ago and headed home to Vietnam, he never thought he would see Canada again.

Friday, Dr. Tu was one of the 39 Vietnamese refugees who stopped briefly at Toronto-Malton International Airport before heading for new homes in eight parts of Canada.

"It's kind of ironic, isn't it?" said the 44-year-old doctor laughed at his good fortune.

"You know, in 1967, I gradued in Montreal. I go back to Saigon, and for seven years I was a doctor.

"I was in charge of a private hospital, a 75-bed centre run by a company called the American Development Co. There were seven doctors.

"And now I am here, with my new daughter, and I am not licensed to practice in Canada.

Dr. Tu, his wife, Thi Nhu Le, four-month-old daughter, Thanh Phuong, and 11-year-old son, Thanh Ha, left later for their new home in Montreal.

Most of the 39 refugees, comprising 17 families with children, continued to Montreal. One man was going to Quebec City and another to St. John's, Nfld., with the rest bound for Ottawa.

Minister's Answers Ruled Liberal Time

OTTAWA (CP) — A Progressive Conservative attack on federal spending petered out Friday into a bitter wrangle over Commons procedural rules.

Charges of some-wailing and tension erupted between the Commons chamber as Conservatives complained of rulings against a ruling that resulted in Treasury Board Chairman Jean Christian refusing to answer questions immediately.

The fray started when Keith Penner (L—Cariboo Bay) sitting in as chairman, said any time used by the minister in answering questions would be deducted from the debating time of Liberal members.

Mr. Penner said he merely wanted to apportion time fairly to parties on both sides of the House.

"I am depriving one of our members from asking questions, I will stay in my seat," Mr. Christian shouted at the House. "I'll answer either at the end of the debate or in letters to the members."

The ruling brought Conservatives to their feet, charging there was no point in a debate on treasury departmental spending when the minister intended to reply.

Elden Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) said the decision which the chair made was "a waste of time, a farce."

Much of the time during the nearly three hours of debate was spent in a squabble over the ruling.

When the dust seared an end, House Leader Mitchell Sharp intervened to say he said quarrel with the chair and New Democrat House leaders in an attempt to solve the dispute.

Opposition Charges Its Questions Evaded

OTTAWA (CP) — An angry opposition accused the Liberal government Friday of evading questions on foreign policy.

Former prime minister John Diefenbaker stood up after the daily Commons question period and attacked the government for what he said was quibbling on Canada's role in international affairs.

Mr. Diefenbaker (PC—Prince Albert) wanted a day set aside in the Commons for discussion of foreign policy and to that foreign affairs do not become a matter of secrecy for the government.

Earlier, Patrick Nowlan (PC—Annapolis Valley) blew up after Prime Minister Trudeau avoided a direct answer on whether Canada's NATO land forces will be withdrawn, leaving only the air element.

Asked if a withdrawal of NATO forces is planned and whether it was discussed with British Prime Minister Harold Wilson at the recent Commonwealth conference, Mr. Trudeau said only: "I don't discuss anything of that nature with the British prime minister."

Defence Minister James Richardson had said Thursday that a smaller NATO force in Germany, consisting only an air force, was one option open to Canada. Another option was a land-only force and a third was a mixed air-land force. At present, there are separate air and land forces with NATO in Europe.

Mr. Diefenbaker said after the question period exchange that: "We know nothing at all about what is happening in NATO . . . We know nothing about the NORAD situation and we cannot obtain any information."

Inventories Decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Businesses in the United States sold far greater quantities of goods than they bought in March, resulting in a record monthly decline of $1.5 billion in business inventories, the commerce department said Friday. That sales also declined in March—down 2.3 per cent from February—so businesses higher inventories than the previous month.

MPs Celebrate

OTTAWA (CP) — It was retroactive payday Friday for members of Parliament, but fewer than one-third of the MPs appeared in the 264-seat Commons.

MPs went home for the weekend—two-thirds of them early—richer by about $5,000 each.

Attendance ranged from an average high peak of 88 to a low of 38 the day after pay cheques officially went up by one-third, retroactive to the last general election July 8.

U.S. Enemies Need Not Be Canada's Too

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Friday that the North American Air Defence Command (NORAD) agreement just renewed for five years, does not necessarily mean that an enemy of the United States is an enemy of Canada.

Bob Wenman (PC—Fraser Valley West) observed that Mr. Trudeau's Commons statement contradicts the view expressed March 18 by Defence Minister James Richardson.

Industry and Public Face Chemical Perils

TORONTO (CP) — Industry, labor and the public are largely ignorant of the potential danger of chemicals, a Canadian author more research must be done to ensure their effects because well-known, a specialist in environmental medicine said Friday day.

Dr. Irving Selikoff, professor of medicine at the Mount Sinai school in New York, said a national policy conference of the United Steelworkers of America heard many times the time about facts that are known.

"The theme of the two-day conference was "stop the slaughter in industry" and the delegates passed resolutions calling for the rights to inspect workplaces under unsafe conditions and to refuse work they feel is dangerous.

Dr. Selikoff said researchers need studies that the dangers of uranium mining in Elliot Lake, Ont., were known in the 1940s and asbestos mines in there because of economic pressures.

Air Canada Loss

OTTAWA (CP) — Air Canada had a $3.5-million loss in 1974 and faces "serious inflationary pressures," this year, but the government-owned airline will try to limit air-fare increases, says Yves Pratte, Air Canada chairman.

were fewer lung cancer deaths than expected, but among smokers, six times as many as expected.

He said work is just beginning on the "byslander effect—the effects on families and workmates of workers who handle toxic industrial materials. Studies of families of asbestos mine workers in Quebec had shown that nine wives contracted mesothelioma through contact with their husbands' clothes.

While work had just begun in many fields, in other areas it had been common knowledge that certain materials were harmful.

The classic description of the effects of silicosis was provided in 1936, he said. It was noted in recent studies that the dangers of uranium mining in Elliot Lake, Ont., were known in the 1940s and asbestos mines in there because of economic pressures.

Fabricon Plans Wire Plant Here

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Fabricon Manufacturing Ltd. will begin construction immediately of a 120,000-square-foot plant in the city's north end industrial park, The Intelligencer has learned.

The plant — one of the city's largest recent acquisitions — will use sophisticated machinery in the production of wire and cable products, says Fred Bemis, the city industrial commissioner.

The firm is expected to employ about 200 by the end of the first production year. Production is expected by next spring.

Company production is aimed at both domestic and international markets.

Hanns Allmendinger, general manager of an existing Fabricon plant in Trenton, said during an interview Sunday that Fabricon is a wholly owned subsidiary company of Felten and Guilleaume AG, a West German company.

In Trenton, the firm has a 120,000-square-foot plant and employs 140 people. Fabricon has been in that community since 1967.

Mr. Allmendinger said the Belleville's chief drawing card was the readily available land on which construction could begin immediately. "This was the most important factor in our company's choice to build in Belleville," he said.

Mr. Allmendinger said his plant would continue to operate in Trenton.

Industrial commissioner Bemis said Monday the new plant would be very similar in size and employee strength to the Procter and Gamble plant now under construction in the same industrial park.

Mr. Bemis, in a weekend interview, said "many details are sketchy about the plant with engineering studies still to be completed and council must still give its approval."

Fabricon is intending to buy 30 acres of land in the park at $6,500 an acre — a price sufficient to cover the city's initial land purchase costs and subsequent servicing costs, said Mr. Bemis.

Fabricon is also expected to apply for municipal tax assistance, a common practice in Belleville for industrial firms.

Mr. Bemis said the proposed Fabricon plant is "just one of several projects we are working on at the moment."

Mr. Bemis said the city is also negotiating with a major industrial firm which would employ 300 people by the end of its first production year.

Compulsory Prices and Pay Controls Reported Prepared

OTTAWA (CP)—The government has a compulsory prices and incomes control program in reserve as it heads into talks this week with labor and business leaders on a voluntary plan.

Finance Minister John Turner is to meet Wednesday with businessmen representing a cross-section by industry and region.

Sometime between Tuesday and Thursday, he will talk with the 40-member executive committee of the Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) meeting in Toronto.

The government has had a contingency plan for price and income controls since 1969, when the Prices and Incomes Commission drew one up.

This week's meetings will decide whether a voluntary program can work, for the CLC has already turned down the government's initial restraint proposals. They called for a limit on wage rises of a maximum 12 per cent or $2,400 a year.

The CLC rejected the government proposals because a ceiling was put on wages while leaving other incomes free, the CLC said. It countered with a three-point program for rent controls, regulation of professional fees and land speculation, higher pensions, and other measures including steps to boost small farmers.

Provincial representatives met Friday with the special ministerial inflation secretariat set up by the government to search for a national agreement, or at voluntary restraints.

S. D.Cameron, head of the secretariat, said later it is hopeful the provincial and federal governments can agree on measures to meet some of the CLC demands.

The issues raised by the CLC partly involve provincial jurisdiction and federal officials say they need the co-operation of the provinces for voluntary restraints.

The government has so far refused to say whether it is considering compulsory controls if a voluntary approach fails though Mr. Turner has warned of greater restraints. He says he intends to conclude his consensus talks on a voluntary plan by the end of this month, when a budget is to be introduced.

Postmen at Montreal Back Union Executive

MONTREAL (CP) — Mail handlers and postal clerks in the Montreal post office Sunday reversed their decision to negotiate only with Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey and decided to back the national executive of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW).

About 1,200 of the 4,300 inside workers attended the meeting and cheered as CUPW President Joe Davidson promised to meet Mr. Mackasey "as a solid union."

City postal workers last month began protests against the weekend hirings of casual workers to sort mail backlogs.

They protested the use of the indefinite suspensions of 39 inside workers and sporadic interruptions in mail service by the 4,300-post office workers.

"Sixty per cent of our working conditions demands aren't negotiable," Mr. Davidson said.

"Sixty per cent of our hiring policies aren't negotiable. Automation isn't negotiable."

Meanwhile, at an earlier weekend meeting, representatives of 13 eastern locals of the Letter Carriers Union of Canada (LCUC) decided to back the Montreal local's demands for more money than was agreed on in a wages settlement reached between the national executive and the post office.

Guy Morrissette, president of Montreal's 2,500-member local, said the majority of members who attended the meeting said they would return to their jobs and recommend rejection of the contract."

Davis Calls Ontario Schools Best in Land

BARRY'S BAY, Ont. (CP) — Premier William Davis hit back at critics of the Ontario education system Sunday, describing the province's schools as the "finest in the country."

The premier spoke at the opening of an addition to an elementary school in this community 160 miles west of Ottawa.

Allowing there is and always agreement between teachers and his government, he praised Ontario teachers for their competence despite the observations of some critics.

Mr. Davis said he is disturbed by university professors who charge that today's secondary school graduates are not as capable of reading, writing and spelling as they were in the past. "I have heard this for the last 30 years," he said.

Driver Escaped Injury

Robert Sparks, 25, of RR 1, Kanata, near Ottawa, narrowly escaped injury Saturday when his tractor-trailer hauling crushed beer cases rolled over at the intersection of Cannifton Road and Highway 37. Insurance adjustors at the scene estimated damage would total $25,000 . . . the bulk of the damage resulting from the cargo weight tearing the aluminum skin of the box. Belleville OPP are still investigating the incident. Mr. Sparks was returning to Ottawa when the incident occurred.

Provinces Seek Control Of Cable TV

OTTAWA (CP) — The provinces and Ottawa appear at loggerheads prior to the second federal-provincial conference on communications in Ottawa Tuesday.

Gerard Pelletier, federal communications minister, said Sunday he has received and studied joint proposals backed by several provinces.

A common front appears to be taking shape with the provinces pressing for greater control over the issuing of permits and content of radio and television, especially cable television.

The provinces do not want control over the designation of broadcast frequencies which would remain in a federal domain. But they do want control over telecommunications companies with installations within provincial boundaries.

The provincial ministers of communications were to meet today at nearby Gatineau, just across the Quebec border from Ottawa, to develop a common strategy for the two-day conference.

Problem Solved

SAIGON (AP) — A shortage of gasoline has solved Saigon's traffic problem.

The personal cloud of exhaust smoke from cars and motorbikes that used to hang over the streets of the South Vietnamese capital has lifted. More people are using bicycles, but the price of them has quadrupled.

'Safety Belts' for Eggs Prove Point to Pupils

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

The provincial ministry of transportation and communications is so impressed with a video tape of seat belt safety instruction presented by two Ontario Provincial Police officers at the Belleville detachment that ministry officials might incorporate it into their provincial safety program which they plan to introduce into Ontario elementary schools for Grades 7 and 8 students.

Constables Don Kunyk and Brian Turner, community service officers, are responsible for the instruction during their visits to Quinte area schools. The method utilizes eggs and model cars to stress the importance of wearing seat belts.

Constable Kunyk explains the two men first place an undrapped egg into the car and propel the unit at a wall. On impact the egg, of course, flies out of the car and smashes.

On the second run, the egg is strapped in with a rubber band and survives only a few cracks in the collision.

Constable Kunyk says the illustrates that, while no one is claiming an occupant of a motor vehicle will escape injury or death from an accident, wearing a seat belt does cut down the risk of serious injuries.

The two provincial policemen gave a partial demonstration to ministry officials in Toronto recently and that visit will be returned on May 23 at Harmony Public School at RR1, Corby, when the officials will gauge student response to the instruction.

No Evacuation Plans

Foreigners Told To Stay in Laos

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The state department says the United States has no plans to evacuate the 1,000 Americans in Laos although the Communist Pathet Lao appears to be taking over the leadless-led Indochinese kingdom.

The situation "doesn't appear to warrant it," said a state department spokesman in Washington.

Vientiane, the Laotian capital, remained calm following a speech during which Prime Minister Souvanna Phouma is reported confirmed that the Pathet Lao now control the coalition government of rightists, leftists and neutralists established under a 1973 peace accord.

"Important changes have taken place which were not had and expected so suddenly, both they are here," said the 75-year-old premier's spokesman.

The premier's speech followed the Communist victories in Cambodia and South Vietnam, attacks by Pathet Lao forces on various points and by the rightist Royal Laotian Army, the resignation of four of the six rightist members of Souvanna Phouma's coalition cabinet and the removal of three top-ranking rightist generals from their army command. That left the Pathet Lao the dominant faction in the government.

The Laotian government is a broadcast Sunday night appealed to the communes to remain calm and said Laotian and foreign residents were prohibited from leaving the country.

Vietnamese Able To Travel Freely

SAIGON (Reuter) The new authorities in Saigon are allowing Vietnamese to travel freely around the country to visit relatives and some have headed north to try to see their families in North Vietnam.

All foreigners, however, are currently restricted to the greater Saigon area as it is not possible to see how for people trying Saigon are able to go. But some who returned to the city said they had been allowed to travel freely.

Three days ago the North Vietnam news agency reported that a new bridge had been built across the Ben Hai River, which has marked the boundary between North and South Vietnam since 1954.

But it did not say whether people from Saigon were being allowed across it to visit their relatives in the north.

A free flow of people along the roads from the Mekong Delta to Saigon has kept the markets of the capital bustling.

Project Halted

SARNIA, Ont. (CP) — Construction of the 350-million Petrosar petro-chemical project was halted again today as two unions met to discuss a jurisdictional dispute.

Montreal Longshoremen To Return to Work Tuesday

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal longshoremen will return to work Tuesday after having been off their jobs since April 1, a union official said today.

Fernand Boudreault, a member of the executive committee of the International Longshoremen's Association, said the men will return to work on recommendation of the association executive.

Meetings were being held in Trois-Rivieres and Quebec City to decide whether the longshoremen will return to their jobs in those two ports.

Police Open Doors to Public During Law Enforcement Week

The Ontario Provincial Police detachment at Belleville, located at 456 North Front St., has thrown open its doors this week to the public as part of activities marking Law Enforcement Week.

The open house, which will conclude Saturday, will all feature any special event but will give the public an opportunity to see the inside of the OPP station on a normal working day, says Constable Don Knuyt, community services officer.

Constable Knuyt notes guided tours will be available, "if there's a large group, some one will be there to show them around," he said.

And if education people wish to bring their students this week, they should telephone ahead.

"If a school or a class is involved, we would need some advance notice," he points out.

The OPP mobile trailer will be at various locations in the Quinte area from today through Wednesday. It is at Madoc Township Elementary School and Madoc Public School today.

Tuesday, it will be at Marmora Public School and on Wednesday it will continue on into Bloomfield and Wellington.

From Thursday through Saturday, the OPP will participate in a display at the Quinte Mall. "We'll be there to meet the people," comments Constable Brian Turner, another community services officer at the Belleville detachment.

"We'll be there to answer questions and to generally communicate with the public," he explains.

Two Oppose Pay Increase

At least two Belleville aldermen are against raising council members' salaries from $3,000 to $4,000.

Along with Ald. Brian Knudsen, Ald. Wally Dever said Monday he too voted against the raise during Friday's special budget session.

The motion subsequently carried.

Student Actors Praised For Festival Entry

TORONTO — A Sarbury high school, L'Ecole Secondaire MacDonald Cartier, won the best production award Saturday at the Ontario Collegiate Drama Festival in the St. Lawrence Arts Centre with its play As Fond de la Poutaine.

Belleville's Centennial Secondary School was one of six plays competing in the two-Theatre Club produced a play called Burlap Bag. The play was performed Saturday night at the Arts Centre.

Three Centennial students won honorable mention awards during their performance. The students are Brian Ferguson, Linda Sneffels and Gerald Rutledge. Mr. Ferguson said the Centennial players gave their best performances during the competition.

Andre Theriault, a member of the Sarbury high school cast, was given one of four outstanding performance awards. The festival winner was chosen by adjudicator Dennis Sweeting.

Other performance awards were given to Thom Wade of Westmale Secondary School, Hamilton; Sean McKenna of Port Credit Secondary School and Scott Vickers of Silverthorn Collegiate, Toronto.

Barbecue Kills Man

MARYSVILLE — Belleville OPP today are withholding the name of a man who died Saturday near here after apparently being overcome by carbon monoxide poisoning. A woman, also involved in the accident, remains in satisfactory condition in Belleville General Hospital.

A police spokesman said today the two people were camping near the Salmon River about five miles north of Marysville, when they lit a barbecue in the tent and fell asleep.

The woman, who also remains unidentified, "returned consciousness and sought help in the Tyendinaga Township. She was admitted to hospital."

Names will not be released until next of kin are notified.

Kids Happy, But Parent Questions Act Quality

TRENTON — The Royal Brothers Circus with headquarters at Campbellford visited Middlesex Park Sunday and staged "big top" shows at 3 p.m. and 8 p.m. before pulling out for Stirling on the next stop over on a pre-arranged route.

The Middlesex Park council sponsored the circus, comprised mainly of animals and performers from the United States, as a fund raising project for the Trenton Rotary Club's Canada ay celebrations being held at Centennial Park July 1.

Profits from the undertaking, the amount to be disclosed at a later date, said Mayor Cpt. Jim Forsteil, were turned over to the Rotary Club today.

Whether the promotion was in the best interests of the public was questioned by a member of circus visitors.

One of the loudest vocal critics, Mrs. David Altizans, RR3, Belleville, claimed "It's the biggest ripoff ever to hit the Quinte area!" She complained of high admission prices — noting it cost her $10 to get into the main tent while children were charged $1.75. She also protested strength testing prizes offered to see some of the 15 wild animals on show in separate tent.

She termed the quality of animals and performers of species "an insult to the intelligence of circus enthusiasts."

Contacted today, Mrs. Forsteil reported all the children he talked with appeared satisfied and the majority of adults realized council not offering a circus on par with the flying Brothers extravaganza.

Firms Fold, But Practice More Valuable Than Profit

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Eight Belleville manufacturing companies folded this weekend — but it's not as bad as it sounds.

The eight firms were part of the city's Junior Achievement organization which wrapped up its standard program during an awards dinner Saturday.

Since last November, about 45 young people from city high schools have been operating the eight firms — learning first hand the rigors and responsibilities of business.

While each company elected a president and suitable corporate board of directors. Once a product is found — an advertising campaign, followed closely with the headaches of selling the product with the final hope that a dividend can be returned to the shareholders.

Of the eight firms, two returned dividends and the remainder lost marginally.

Garth Stapleton, executive director of the program, said the emphasis is the program is not to make money but rather — but to learn the workings of the business community and how to work with others".

Les Shackleck, general manager of Dekore Skillie, said during the presentation ceremony, the firms and Rotary Club that sponsor the program are "not handing anything away as charity".

"We are making an investment and helping them the success of the program this year . . . our investment is paying off."

Each of the companies is sponsored by a Belleville firm which also supplies adult advisers to the junior companies.

Rev. Leslie Dean was the guest speaker for the evening and urged achievers to not look at financial failures of their companies as a total failure but look at something from the experience.

"We don't know we can do anything until we try."

Two Belleville achievers, Donna McDermott and Tom Britton, will leave for Saskatoon this summer to represent the city at CANJAC 75 a conference of achievers from across Canada.

Junior Achievers Honored

More than 45 young people from Belleville were honored Saturday night for their participation in the Junior Achievement program — the second year the program was operated here. Guest speaker Rev. Leslie Dean talks here with achievers Donna McDermott and Juliana Corrigan. "We don't know what we can do until we try," was Rev. Dean's message to the audience.

Driver Charged

Purdy Young, 47, of Moira St., Trenton, has been charged by the Madoc detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police with impaired driving following a head-on collision on the Old Sidebole Rd. Saturday.

Police estimate the damage to a southbound car driven by Robert Pigden, 24, of 19 Isabel St., Belleville, at $1,500.

Damage to the Young car was estimated at $500.

Hunt Guest Speaker At Chamber Luncheon

Keith E. Hunt, vice-president of the Great Lakes region of Canadian National Railways (CN) will be the guest speaker at the annual noon membership luncheon of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce at the Shrine Club on May 20.

As vice-president, Mr. Hunt is chief executive officer in Toronto for the railway of a territory covering most of the province from Coleman on the east to the border ports of Niagara Falls, Windsor and Fort Erie and to Armstrong on the west.

He joined CN at the age of 18 years as an electrician apprentice in 1946 and was appointed vice-president in June, 1974.

Born in Frome, Ont., near St. Thomas, the 49-year-old Mr. Hunt has spent his entire working life with CN apart from Second World War service in which he was a flying officer in the Royal Canadian Air Force and participated in a number of troop and equipment parachute missions.

Returning to CN, he continued his studies and obtained a degree in electrical engineering from Queen's University in 1951. In 1954, he took extension courses in engineering economics at McGill University.

During his CN career, Mr. Hunt has been assistant general superintendent of the Grand Trunk Railway at Battle Creek, Mich., chief engineer in 1969, chief officer of budgets and engineering economics in 1969, general superintendent of equipment for the St. Lawrence region in 1971, manager of the Ribbes area in 1972, manager of the southwestern Ontario area in 1973, general manager of the region in 1973 and chief operating officer at system headquarters from 1970 until his present appointment.

Mr. Hunt is married and has three daughters. His hobbies include bridge, golf and woodworking.

Forethought Best Method Of Preventing Home Thefts

There's nothing like a warm, sunny afternoon with just enough wind to tousle one's hair to bring out the best of a fisherman's skills in two young boys. So

Constable Don Knuyt, community services officer with the Ontario Provincial Police detachment at Belleville, says although one's home is his castle, there are some simple steps to take besides digging a moat to make it difficult for any break-in artists.

"Your home is your castle. Can you imagine a castle without a moat? With no walls and plywood doors?" he asks. "It wouldn't have kept out the marauders of medieval times, would it?"

Constable Knuyt points out, "about 300,000 homes in Ontario have fallen victim to the type of thief who chooses to break into your home. That is in the last five years!"

He offers these suggestions:

— "Install good locks of the deadbolt type on all exterior doors.

— "Check the hinge pins and see that they are secure.

— "Change the locks when you buy another home.

— "Don't leave notes like 'Billy, I've gone out for the day. The key's under the mat.

— "Don't leave items such as ladders, etc., near your home that could be used to get into the second-storey window.

— "Make sure you have good locks and latches on all of your windows.

— "Lock your garage. The tools often found in there will be a great help in getting into your home."

Ottawa Acknowledges Strikes Are Harmful but Balks at Remedial Action

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Public opinion polls show that Canadians are increasingly restless say it some Parliament Hill officials, and a few cabinet ministers are under formidable pressure say it.

Even Prime Minister Trudeau says it, and he should know it with strikes.

Ottawa thinks they all refer to the taxpayers, and the strikes they talk about are those crippling the public service.

Parliament Hill is time has said it is agitating strikers back to work.

But the catch is that the federal government itself has yet to do something about it — and do something about it.

When Postmaster General Bryce Mackasey, Trudeau's staunchest defender in the cabinet, expresses exasperation with public service strikes, like the Prime Minister, while demanding Ottawa "contribute to the economy and declaring that "no better way exists than to defend the principle of collective bargaining" — the Postmaster General and the Prime Minister alike have reminded strike leaders that irresponsible bargaining could add an inflame public opinion as to threaten confiscation of the process of collective bargain.

But because it was put through Parliament by former Liberal Prime Minister Lester Pearson, they share responsibility for it, and regardless of his intentions, Trudeau has impact on the economy, feel obligated to defend its use if he is pressed.

Public pressure could bend, if not break Trudeau's will to do the best of that bad deal.

This same Parliament already has cracked the determination of an increased number of individual Members of Parliament to prevent and protect collective bargaining in the public service.

Just last recently, the Honorable Members — especially those in the National Capital area where public servants form by far the largest blec of voters — have been terrified of the Civil Service unions.

But no longer.

Paul Dick, Conservative MP for the National Capital region of Lanark-Renfrew, Ottawa's big constituency, runs up almost in the city limits and labels the Civil Service the bedroom satellite communities — has come flat out against public service strikes.

This is a public statement, Parliament should outlaw them.

And in place of collective bargaining, he would have some form of binding arbitration.

The taxpayers, he says, simply can't afford what he calls "the blackmail of the economy held hard to ransom. The time has come for the national interest to take first place.

The Prime Minister has to be listening.

For, like Paul Dick's, there are too many voices saying the same thing to be ignored.

Like R.J. Gallivan, chairman of the labor committee of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, appearing before a special Joint Committee of the Senate and Commons on employer-employee relations in the federal public service.

He laid it on a hard line, contending that regular periodic strikes in the post office, air transport, and a score of other government services absolutely essential to the well-being and export economy, and therefore to the basic living standard, are "breaking down compliance and obedience to constituted authority and with law and order itself."

The government, with its "bottomless purse," bargaining with its own employees, is battle-gaming with itself and acting both as judge and jury, he argued.

The results, "tal government contract settlements," he warned, "are blowing up the economy like an overpressured boiler in a stirring industrial unrest and compounding already critical inflation."

Like Paul Dick, MP, he called for the outlawing of strikes in the public service.

As a substitute for collective bargaining, strikes, and the inflation of "fat" settlements, he proposed — and it is indeed an important tribunal of salaries in government, modelled after it in business and industry for jobs of comparable responsibilities.

'Productivity' Lacking

Voluntary restraint.

That's the 'new-old catchword on the economic scene.

We recall as far back as 1968 then Finance Minister Sharp, as well as Prime Minister Trudeau, issuing dire warnings to the public to economize — or else.

Of course there has been little or no attempt at economizing either by Government or individuals.

Canadians, as former Bank Governor James Coyne said in the John Diefenbaker-Donald Fleming-Conservative era, "are living grandly beyond their means."

Nothing has changed since, except of course that spending is virtually out of sight. Wage settlements in Canada have been running at about twice those of the United States — eight per cent raises there, and 17 per cent here.

The other day we said there had to be compensating productivity to try and balance inflation.

Yet as Ontario tourism minister Claude Bennett pointed out in a recent speech, there is not much talk about productivity any more.

Wage-price controls then? There are signs they may be introduced after all; for a call to restraint in the present order of things almost certainly will not work. Will controls work then? The record shows that they do not, yet they might provide some breathing space while the Government tries again.

Meanwhile there is more labor trouble at the Olympic site in Montreal — and a sign of the times and of the mood of many in our increasingly "gimme-but-don't-ask-me-to-do-any-work" society: "we have to follow the crowd." That, from one of the men who downed tools.

Technological Skills

Canadians have played a particularly prominent role in the physics of the earth and in mining geophysical exploration.

It has been estimated that 65 percent of the world's new in mining geophysics, including both the manufacture of instruments and the execution of surveys on every continent, was carried out by Canadian-based firms.

The foregoing is gleaned from the National Research Council's publication, Science Dimension, which together with other articles on electron tracography (tingerprints of transferred components for one thing) and the insulation of houses against aircraft noises are the sort of thing that interest those of a scientific bent.

It's a realm of the work some that affords many opening today. And in a city such as Belleville, with plants that depend on creative people with technical and inventive skills, a continuing supply of trained personnel in these spheres is essential.

But the word from Loyalist College board chairman Will Wilkinson is that there is room for more technology students. There was indeed a "significant increase" last year, yet there are still empty places.

Certainly anyone of a scientific bent is fortunate, for we live in an age that increasingly draws on such skill. Computer technology is only one example, and colleges such as Loyalist are in the van of providing in-depth training of this nature.

Civil Service Career

Is a career in the Civil Service — known more by the slightly disdainful term of "the bureaucracy" — a strike-free career?

Enjoy pushing papers, and feel perhaps that you could improve the system somewhat, and come up with a more efficient operation?

Consider that there are 46 documents involved in an average international shipment, with 360 copies per shipment — at a cost nationally at between $1 billion and $3 billion per annum.

Does anyone really care if one more document is required? Does anyone think of the expense involved or the potential savings to be gained by elimination of any of these documents?

The question is put by Sandra Murphy, project officer of a body called the Canadian Organization for the Simplification of Trade Procedures. And she answers in the affirmative. Writing in the Ministry of Transport's publication, Transport Canada, she points out that the ministry's Transportation Development Agency assumed a lead role in working out industry-government co-operative programs to facilitate movement of goods in Canadian trade.

This of course would presuppose a strike-free economy working to full capacity, but in any event Ms. Murphy points to some gains. What is grandly known as the Canadian Trade Document Alignment System has done away with twelve different forms required for the shipper and has replaced them with one master document.

This one initiative, she says, could cut costs by 70 per cent and is available to any shipper. Indeed, Ms. Murphy points out that the system has gained international acceptance and may save the government more than $1 billion annually.

Further evidence of Canadian scientific savoir-faire is a body called the Canadian Organization for the Simplification of Trade Procedures. And she answers in the affirmative. TORONTO — This is a young man to keep an eye on.

When a few months ago Premier Davis named Dennis Timbrell to succeed Darcy McKeough in the very important Treasury portfolio there was some surprise throughout the bureaucracy.

For though Mr. Timbrell had been a parliamentary assistant he had not had a chance to figure prominently, he was the youngest member in the house and this was growing to be one of the key portfolios in the government.

It looked as though the premier might be taking quite a chance.

Events since, however, have shown that he seems to have known what he was doing.

Mr. Timbrell won't celebrate his 38th birthday until November of this year, but he has shown us that in his case at least age isn't necessarily an important factor.

In his short time in office he has shown a quite remarkable grip on the very complex field which is under his portfolio and also has shown very considerable poise.

Occasionally, very occasionally, a man comes along in politics who seems to stand out.

I recall that back in the 60s, although Leslie Frost was not too prominent as a politician, he had a certain something that marked him as a man to watch.

John Robarts had this same breed of quality when he entered the house in 1951.

You marked him as a man to keep an eye on.

Then some years later when Bob Nixon succeeded Mr. Frost there was something that you marked in him.

And Timbrell has been showing signs of this same promise.

A school teacher with municipal background there is nothing in his technical background which would encourage the feeling that he has a future.

It is more a matter of attitude and the way he carries himself.

You get the thought he has something there, "even if you can't put an exact finger on it.

Normally the thought of such a young man standing up to Premier Lougheed and the other oil and gas czars in Alberta might cause one to cringe.

But not with him. You feel he can handle himself.

And you have to feel that if the dice roll right he has a future.

Many notables from Canada and the United States federal, provincial, and municipal executives arrived in Marmora yesterday for ceremonies to mark the commencement of production at the Marmora mine, an Milen property, a subsidiary of Bethlehem Steel. Mining in the district was actively carried on as early as 1830. It was abandoned after 50 years when it was no longer economical to use the ore. Now however, with supplies in the Minnesota's Mesabi range increasing demand for use of the Marmora deposits are now needed.

U.S. and Cuba May Resume Relations as Washington Keeps a Eye on Hanoi

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

Castro's Cuba has had close political and economic relations with all the countries of the socialist bloc in Europe and Asia. Most prominent of course has been the Soviet Union which has supplied Cuba with petroleum, industrial equipment and technology for the last 15 years.

At an earlier stage, the leaders of the Cuban revolution were impressed with the communist Chinese success in agrarian reform. And Czechs, East Germans and Roumanians have also supplied the Cubans with other kinds of technical expertise.

But it is tiny North Vietnam which has impressed Fidel Castro perhaps more than all the others because of the way it has stood up against the vast military power of the United States and won its people's war against the U.S. drive.

The former U.S. blockade of North Vietnamese ports and long aerial bombing of that country's cities and industries resembled Cuba's at the continuing American blockade of their country, only 15 years old and the earlier U.S.-directed invasion of Cuba at the Bay of Pigs in April, 1961.

Nor did Cubans have to be reminded the American attack on North Vietnam was made on a Latin American land mass, not Cuba sent door being less than 90 miles from Florida and the military muscle of the U.S.

The North Vietnamese with nothing economic or military to offer Hanoi distant Cuban Marxists had little choice but to offer them ideologically, how to write the anti-imperialist struggle against the U.S.

Accordingly Castro declared 1968 to be his contribution to the Year of Heroic Vietnam." Each year of the Castro revolution has been identified by him with a major development, political and economic in the Communist countries of the Third World.

And now with the visit of U.S. Senator George McGovern to Cuba, the third member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to be invited to Havana by Fidel since last fall, begins a new phase in Cuban-American relations, but with a North Vietnamese overtone.

Like the late North Vietnamese Ho Chi Minh, whose speeches Castro quotes faithfully, Cuba is inviting leading and sympathetic Americans to visit his country.

Admittedly Senators Jacob Javits and George McGovern are not in the same league as Jane Fonda, the darling of Hanoi. But the invitational style of the Cubans appears the same.

Even more important is the inevitable rapprochement which must come between Havana and Washington in the possibility Castro will continue to use the North Vietnamese as his surrogate in negotiating.

The Americans officially admit Cuba will take a hard line in the upcoming negotiations, especially with the U.S. diplomatic and political failure in Vietnam. But in Havana where I was a few weeks ago and talking with Fidel Castro, Cuban officials refer to their current options.

They have money to spend from last year's record high sugar earnings and they are buying more non-U.S. technology with it. Cuba now has diplomatic relations with 12 countries in the Caribbean and Latin America and is no longer isolated in the hemisphere.

After 15 years of strength and no economic growth, the Cuban Revolution has taken on economically and offers more and more trade goods, from sugar, tobacco, fish products to the world. The major obstacle between Castro's policy of Hanoi and Havana is Fidel Castro's insistence on the normalization of relations with the United States.

He told me in Havana in March when it came, that he would wait 15 years for "an event."

The chances are excellent the old American Embassy building in the Malecon Drive in Havana will be back in business as the new American Embassy open for the first time in Hanoi.

Communist Infiltration Of Democratic Institutions

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

The fall of South Vietnam marks the 26th free nation to fall under the yoke of Communism since the criminal conspiracy began here at the turn of the century by a mere handful of an estimated 5,000 Marxists, more than twelve hundred million people have become captive of the Communist dictatorship run by less than 60 million official Party members. Tass March 1970).

These satellites who refuse to face this reality, and dismiss it as a figment of Communist aggression as "looking for Communist ghosts" or "Red Scare" simply do not read The World Marxist Review, Tass or Pravda which have recently boasted Communist Party membership in 160 countries, representing a total of a half million in Italy, 300,000 in France, 150,000 in Germany, 35,000 in Britain, 25,000 in the United States, and 5,000 in Canada (divided up into both Maoist and Moscow-Marxist).

In free world countries, these Marxists are invariably involved in leading, launching, steering and influencing "peace" and "free" groups and ad hoc committees which are directed by "democratic" but are silent upon creating chaos and confusion within democratic institutions.

By selecting "motherhood" and "apple pie" issues which appeal to the emotions, these native followers find themselves emotionally brainwashed, working for, financing and furthering Communist objectives. While thousands quit when they realize what they do, few, if any will admit to having been duped. This is a handful of concentrated Communists. The Russian Revolution, by 1926, the Communist imperialists had conquered over two hundred million people. As of May 1973, 26 countries and twelve hundred million people live in fear behind the Iron Curtain and Bamboo and Sugar Cane Curtain and Marxist Yoke.

The fall of Cambodia and South Vietnam, proclaim the Marxist philosophy of world domination just that much closer.

Vacant Lighthouse Soon To Be a Bird Observatory

PRINCE EDWARD POINT — The lighthouse here, within the jurisdiction of the department of northern affairs, Ottawa, will soon be used as bird observatory, says Dr. Donald Weir of Kingston, president of the Kingston Field Naturalists.

J. C. Christiansen, director of Ontario region of Parks Canada and Mr. Weir, have signed a document which will permit the nature club to occupy the lighthouse at the point, located at the northeast tip of Long Point Township, about 5 miles from which members will carry out its program of field studies.

Studies will include the trapping and collection of wildlife, some of which pass across Lake Ontario in help ing the rapid spread of plants and trees from areas south of Lake Ontario, and the setting up of a bird observation station to track bird biology and to help understand the intriguing problem of migration into and out of this part of Ontario.

Mr. Weir stated this weekend, "We have our banding permit and are anxious to get this observatory going."

The site is a well-known migration point and an spectacular area for the visible migrations that this area has been called the "Point Pelee of Lake Ontario".

Mr. Weir said the area is an excellent site for observing autumn bird migrations of Monarch Butterflies and dragonflies and impressive flights of migrating hawks.

The potential of the point was discovered by the Kingston club in 1969 and studies have been conducted here regularly since then. "The point continues to supply us with good records," said Mr. Weir.

Only one such observatory presently exists on the Canadian side of the Lower Great Lakes. The Prince Edward Point Observatory will complement that of the Long Point Bird Observatory on Lake Erie.

Popularity of Mopeds Concerns Police Chief

PICTON — Mixed emotions have greeted the arrival of the moped on Prince Edward County.

Ron Campbell of Canadian Tire Store says sales of the new motorized bicycles are good.

One recent purchaser, Mrs. Allan Hyatt of RR 1, Picton, a German immigrant says the bikes are always been popular in Germany where the price of gasoline is considerably higher. Mrs. Hyatt, a veteran moped driver, bought the bike for her daughter to use as transportation to work this summer, but admits, "We've all been driving it around."

Picton Police Chief Charles Fletcher Jones, said he is "concerned that there is no safety equipment on these bikes."

"I am not 100-per-cent against them, but I feel there should be more strict regulations concerning them," Chief Fletcher commented.

The Highway Traffic Act doesn't require drivers of mopeds to wear protective headgear or license their vehicles, and anyone over the age of 14 may drive them.

Chief Fletcher expressed concern over the lack of contact with police concerning newly introduced vehicles and legislation, if any, concerning them.

"I don't like to see mopeds, snowmobiles etc. come out with practically no legislation and wait until accidents before changes are made."

Chief Fletcher predicts that unless amendments to the Traffic Act are made and more strict legislation introduced, there are going to be problems.

"I worry about them around schools where there is a congestion of kids," added Chief Fletcher, referring to the age at which kids may be permitted to drive them.

"They are the up and coming thing, but we need more strict legislation. When you put a 'motor' on anything, you're asking for a lot more trouble."

Trenton Students Spend Week in Midwest U.S.

TRENTON — It took North Trenton school's principal Murray Workman five years to return to Webster City, Iowa, with a group of exchange visitors from the Quinte area.

In 1970, Mr. Workman, while teaching at a school at Belleville played host to a group of Webster City, Iowa, school children with their teachers. He intended to repay the gesture a year later but took ill and had to abandon the project.

Earlier this year, Mr. Workman, who now teaches Grade 5 and 6 along with principal duties, obtained the support of his pupils to raise the bus fare for the 3,000-mile trip. Subsequently, they collected $2,000 undertaking a variety of enterprising projects.

On Saturday afternoon with their dream realized, 30 Grade 5 and 6 students boarded a chartered bus at the North Trenton school grounds for the long journey.

They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Workman and their substitute teacher Tom Johnston and his wife. A large crowd of parents and friends were on hand to see them off.

They return to Trenton this coming Sunday.

Milk Quality A Concern

PICTON — Tom Heath of the Milk Industries Branch, said at a recent meeting of the Prince Edward County Milk Committee he is "concerned" about milk producers who sent milk containing traces of antibiotics used in the treatment of mastitis.

He said it takes only one litre infection in the milk to cause the loss of a whole vat of cheese milk. Mr. Heath stressed that three days must be allowed before shipping milk from treated cows.

Andriesky To Speak

PICTON — Wilda Andriesky, a psychologist with the Children's Centre, Kingston, will be guest speaker Tuesday, May 14 at the annual meeting of the Quinte chapter of the Association for Children with Learning Disabilities to be held at Queen Elizabeth School.

She holds an MA in psychology and is a graduate of Queen's University. She is a registered psychologist in Ontario and for the last 13 years has worked at Kingston Psychiatric Hospital as a clinical child psychologist.

The speaker also has a joint appointment with the psychology department at Queen's University and is involved in the school's graduate training program for students in clinical psychology.

For the last 15 years she has worked extensively with concerning emotional and learning problems.

Before becoming a psychologist, Wilda Andriesky was an elementary school teacher who taught junior children in one room and rural schools.

Hoop Stolen

Bulk Milk Carriers Face Off-beat Problems in Job

By TERRY SPRAGUE
Staff Correspondent

WELLINGTON — Dairy farmers, when converting from cansed milk to bulk milk, are urged by the Milk Marketing Board to cater to the bulk milk hauler and make his pickups pleasant. Earl Wannamaker, a local milk hauler says some of his pickups are anything but pleasant.

Mr. Wannamaker, who has been hauling bulk milk for five years, commences his daily run at 5:30 a.m. picking up bulk milk across the full width of Prince Edward County, covering a distance of between 125 and 135 miles. Occasionally, severe winter storms make it necessary for the bulk milk haulers in the county to work late at night.

The trucks, which carry a capacity load of 33,400 pounds of milk, rumble into the farmyard at varying times of the day, and says Mr. Wannamaker, "under varying conditions and atmosphere".

"The bulk hauler's biggest problem," emphasizes Mr. Wannamaker, "is getting into yards where we have to drag the milk line across the barnyard.

"One farmer lets his cows wander over the walkway which regulations dictate is there for us to walk on. Bulk haulers are supposed to be clean and sanitary in every respect; how can we be clean when we must walk through mud and cow manure?"

The quality of milk in a bulk tank is determined by reading a dip stick and comparing to a wall chart which gives the quantity in pounds. Mr. Wannamaker says that farmers often check that bulk haulers register incorrect dip stick readings.

"There is a right way and a wrong way to read these dip sticks," remarks Mr. Wannamaker.

When the routes are completed, the bulk trucks, along with the refrigerated milk samples, removed from each producer's bulk tank with a "sanitary pipette", similar to a common drinking straw, are deposited in tiny sample bottles, deliver the milk to plants in Kingston, Napanee, Foxboro and local cheese factories around Prince Edward County.

Mr. Wannamaker, although enjoying his job as a bulk hauler, commented, "There are some days though when it really gets on your nerves."

East Lake Russian Blue One of Canada's Top Cats

By MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

EAST LAKE — Champion Cat-Mar Thorwald of Picbin recently proved he is top cat in Prince Edward's feline population and dispelled all myths related to the unlucky number 13.

The aristocratic Russian Blue owned by Mrs. Joanne Dunkley of the Picton Cattery, East Lake, has been judged top 13th best cat in Canada for 1973. He is one of approximately 20 Russian Blues in the country. Seven of these aloof and shy cats owned by Mrs. Dunkley who developed an interest in the breed after seeing a photo of a Russian Blue as a child of 11.

Her champion's impressive win followed a stint in show business when the two-year-old feline campaigned at cat shows in London, Toronto, Montreal, Quebec City and Niagara Falls among other major centres.

In a total of eight shows, "Thor" captured enough points to establish his rank as lucky 13 in national all-breeds competition.

He will join the cream of Canada's cat crop in Kingston June 7 and 8 when a cat show and awards night will be held at the Jock Hardy Arena. The top 15 cats in the country have been invited to attend this gala which also offers show classes for household pets. It is sponsored by the Limestone City Cat Club of Kingston.

Mrs. Dunkley raised Thor to his win after buying him as a kitten about eight weeks old.

She says Russian Blues are distinctive in appearance with short brown-grey coats flipped with lighter color. The planes of the head are clean-cut and the eyes are a vivid green.

These unusual felines are exceptionally quiet in comparison with other breeds such as the Siamese.

Although Thor may be the cat's pajamas on the show circuit, back home at Picbin he shares the limelight with Mrs. Dunkley's six Russian Hounds, Ralph and Rebecca.

In addition to her interest in raising and showing cats, Mrs. Dunkley trains and shows basset hounds in obedience trials.

One of the Best

Cat-mar Thorwald of Picbin Cattery, East Lake is one of Canada's top cats. Affectionately known as Thor, the purebred Russian Blue is owned by Joanne Dunkley and has an impressive collection of awards to his credit.

Raw Materials Coveted

Euromart Drafts Proposal For Relations with Canada

BRUSSELS (CP)—Eyes fixed longingly on Canadian raw materials, the European Economic Community (EEC) is polishing a draft for an agreement with Canada on trade, investment and closer business relations.

Sources close to the EEC's negotiating team in Ottawa say the draft will be discussed with officials in Ottawa this month.

The proposal, still secret, is said to go far beyond the trade agreement suggested by Canada last summer.

Sources have told The Canadian Press that the current draft would establish a joint commission of EEC and Canadian representatives, empowered to analyze potential economic and commercial relations and organize exchanges of information.

The draft also contains a so-called evolutionary clause opening the way for future agreements on such matters as investment and joint ventures in third countries.

For many EEC members, including West Germany, the Netherlands and Britain, it would edge open the door to natural access to Canadian minerals, forest products and other materials growing scarce on the continent.

Canadian diplomats here and in other EEC capitals say the main benefit to Canada would be a reopening of Canadian commercial interests as distinct from those of the United States.

Witch Puts Hex on Lang

VICTORIA (CP) — Justice Minister Otto Lang was hexed Saturday on the legislature buildings by a group that marched through Victoria as part of the continent-wide Women's Outrage Day.

The group, confined of about 75 women and children with a handful of men.

Anne Jardine of the city's women's centre, was crowned as a witch and led the crowd in placing the hex on Mr. Lang, who opposes abortion.

Perched among the bones were that Mr. Lang be immediately made transport minister and be reincarnated as a sanitary worker.

Women's Outrage Day was organized by a Los Angeles resident earlier this year when four members of the National Organization of Women were refused the sacraments of the Roman Catholic church because they advocated abortion.

Debate Scheduled

OTTAWA (CP) — More than 24 billion of projected spending by a department whose minister has acknowledged that it is more comes under Commons scrutiny this week.

About $1.08 billion of transport department spending for the 1975-76 fiscal year has been chosen by the Commoners as the debating topic for their opposition days, today and Tuesday.

The two-day debate will give opposition MPs a chance to savage its transportation topics ranging from East Coast ferries to rail and hotel services provided by Canadian National, the government-owned railway.

Barrett Urges Oil and Gas Be Under Public Ownership

NEW YORK (CP) — Premier David Barrett of British Columbia said Saturday night that Canada should be moving in the direction of public ownership and control of all her natural gas and oil.

"I think the first step would be a marketing board such as we have in British Columbia," the socialist premier said in an interview.

"That has given us control of the marketing process which is the entry-for public ownership, I think.

"That's the best first step to develop some confidence in Canada about the use of our own resources by Canadians."

Barrett was in New York for two days of informal talks with Wall Street investors and to address a gathering of American and a handful of Canadian socialists at a dinner honoring trade unionist Bernard Rubin, a lifelong socialist and friend of the late socialist leader Norman Thomas.

Alberta Seen Having Right To Reserve Oil

OTTAWA (CP)—Energy Minister Donald Macdonald says that energy-poor parts of Canada must be concerned with finding alternative sources of supply.

In an interview taped for the CTV program Question Period scheduled to be aired Sunday, Mr. Macdonald said Alberta has the right to hold back a reserve of petroleum resources and the answer to shortages that might result is to try to expand supplies.

I think it is fair to say under our constitution there is no way in which we can do that anyway, notwithstanding that that's an Alberta resource, we've got to take as much for the national interest," he said.

World's Biggest Hole

More than 120,000 visitors come to the world's largest man-made hole in Kimberley, South Africa, each year. The hole, with a surface area of about 34 acres, is an open mine and 14.5 million carats of diamonds worth 200-million before production ceased. (CP Photo)

Kimberley Diamond Mine World's Largest Hole

KIMBERLEY, South Africa (CP) — More than 120,000 visitors take in the world's largest man-made hole here each year.

The hole, with a surface area of almost 34 acres, is fascinating and vaguely threatening. It is, in fact, an open mine and probably the richest ever.

Between 1871 and 1914 three tons of diamonds were recovered. When production eventually stopped almost 30 million tons of earth had been taken out of the Big Hole. The mine had produced more than 14.5 million carats of diamonds worth 200 million.

Now there's more here for the visitor than just the Big Hole. An open-air museum has been built next to the mine showing the early history of Kimberley from the time when a boy, E. J. Jacobs, picked up the first diamond on his father's farm. The museum includes scale-size copies of the buildings of that little as well as actual buildings brought to the museum and rebuilt on the site.

It was here that Cecil John Rhodes made his vast fortune in diamonds—a fortune he used to settle Rhodesia and build his dream of a vast empire stretching from the Cape to Cairo.

He parcelled together with other figures of the time, including Barney Barnato and de Beers, whose farm the diamond mine started, hung in the museum.

Diamonds still are not a thing of the past in Kimberley. Part of the original mines still are working and along with two others that are close to Kimberley, yield around 1.5 million carats annually.

Tourists can follow a diamond route that has been mapped out which cuts through Kimberley. The route covering a little more than 400 miles, stretches from Potchefstroom in the north to Victoria West in the south. The Diamond Route is becoming increasingly popular with visitors.

In the northern Cape area most-precious stones abound, including the famed tiger's-eye.

Brewers Around Globe Are Studied

SALFORD, England (CP) — A team from the department of economics and geography at University of Salford, in northwest England, has launched an international study of the brewing industry.

The inquiry, headed by department lecturer Anthony Pickwell and supported by a grant from the British Social Science Research Council, will look at brewing in Britain, the United States, Belgium, France, West Germany, Japan and Italy.

It will explore the reasons for a noticeable swing towards larger brewing firms, attempting to establish where large firms are more efficient than small ones and, if so, whether any savings in cost reach the consumer.

Types of beer for sale will also be studied. In Britain, top brands of lager have made up about 40 per cent of total beer production.

Cockerill, who has conducted a similar study of world steel production, said he hopes to present his report on beer by the end of the year.

found nowhere else in the world.

Another tourist attraction in this part of the republic is aimed at the millions of railway enthusiasts all over the world. The Steam Route pulls its way along an attractive course through some of the famed stops of another era.

Kimberley has in recent years started a drive on the tourist market. Last year a diamond carnival was held, with several other Cape Province towns joining in the promotion.

Kimberley is located in the centre of South Africa and Kimberley officials see this at making it ideal for tourism. Visitors can use the city as a base from which to explore the country's attractions.

But the officials are not leaving anything to chance. They're planning for the future to bring on a new form of diamond rush—tourists with money.

To Be Both Old and Chinese Is Tough Role in Edmonton

By ALAN ARNUKLIK (CP) — To be old in Canadian society today is tough enough but to be old and Chinese with little or no English presents a special problem.

A federal government project in Edmonton with the Chinese United Church, part of the United Church of Canada, is trying to meet that problem head-on.

Rev. Joseph Mung, 42, said the program began around the end of February with the help of a grant of $4,200 from the federal government and then a free-wheeled attack on the problems faced by elderly Chinese in the city in 12 months. The program was already (around Jan. 1) independent of its budget and he expected church support and a new budget for world to be needed.

The group started by helping Chinese films in a crowd of about 75 in the tiny church's basement, Mr. Mung said. The films were those available by the National Film Board.

A visiting program is also under way with about 40 people on the list for calls. About 20 will eventually get visited.

Most of these are women living in rooming houses or small buildings, says the church in an area of Edmonton Mr. Mung described as a ghetto. He said they have no family and few friends and a poor command of English, although many have been in this country for decades.

Some should be in nursing homes but are afraid to go and anyway, they couldn't digest the Western food which would be served, he said. They have a hard time telling doctors and nurses they don't feel well and many stay in their single rooms, sharing kitchen and bathroom facilities, said they are seriously ill.

One aspect of the visiting program which is being considered is a meals service.

Clinics in the area have complained that such a service would be bad for business and letter about where to buy food at the best prices, although case again the loyalty of the latter is being kicked into.

Along with these dangers, many elderly Chinese have retained many other cultural attitudes. Mung also has a problem, which for most of 150,000 Canadian Chinese population of about 30,000, is the teaching of Confucius, and Zoetia the Mr. Mung's problem as a Christian minister.

The father of two boys, he was born in Hong Kong and educated at a large Anglican school in the British colony. He came to Canada in 1956 to take theology and began working at his Edmonton church in 1966.

The church is a poor one and Mr. Mung holds no secretary and janitor as well as minister. He said he has spent his month's vacation every year for the last 10 years visiting Chinese people in rural areas, looking in on the Christians and trying to persuade the Confucians to convert.

About two-thirds of the Chinese in Edmonton are young people born after the Second World War and they accept Canadian ways but the older immigrants cling tenaciously to their customs and religion, although the Chinese United Church gets regular financial support from some of them, he said.

Mr. Mung conducts his service in Chinese on the same order as any other United Church with hymns sung in both Chinese and English. He said the language difference is dying out with the senior generation.

Policemen Often Feel Frustrated

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask. (CP) — Policemen "often feel pretty frustrated" as they see their powers being weakened, says L. H. Nicholson, former commissioner of the RCMP.

"In most cases in Canada, as it seems to me, that all the effort is towards understanding and trying not to enforce, to look out with crime and criminals rather than being a little more powers or tending towards the old principle of punishment for crime," he told an interviewer.

Mr. Nicholson, commissioner from 1951 to 1959, said criminals aren't punished any more. "Punishment for crime now seems to be deferred.

"I think it perhaps isn't one criticism that I had on accumulation of all the things that make the policeman's job and the force, the sympathy and support is going.

"Capital punishment has its place as punishment for "premeditated murder, killing."

"Capital punishment is an unpleasant thing to approach, it is a final, but as it is murder...

"I think the advocates of abolition have made a case for it by talking about the risk of some person perhaps killing, or a fit of passion, who really isn't a criminal, you may experience that sort of person, didn't go premeditated to that sort of punishment because of normal court procedures and powers of commutation.

"But I come back to the other side of it: killing, the type where the professional hoodlum moves a gun and he comes out of a bank which he has just robbed, he gets a cold-blooded shoots the policeman down. Or the type where a couple of guys set up into a corner grocery store and the poor little grocery man opposes them and they kill him.

"I have very little sympathy for that type of criminal. He's vicious and I seem to me he should be eliminated."

Special Problems

Elderly Chinese in Edmonton face all the problems any other Canadian must meet but as well have language and cultural differences to contend with. Rev. Joseph Mung of the Chinese United Church is involved in a free-part program to help. (CP Photo)

They live on Foster Avenue.

Leek and Potato Soup

one lb. leeks
one lb. potatoes
¼ cup butter
½ cup chopped onion
salt to taste
dash white pepper
two cups milk OR 1½ cups light cream
one cup light cream chilled three cups chicken bouillon chives, parsley or watercress garnish

Cut off most of the dark green part of the leeks, the roots and the tips, leaving the pale green and white. (You will need about four leeks.) Slit one side and thoroughly wash away all sand and grit. Slice crosswise into ¼ inch thick pieces.

Melt butter or margarine in a large pot or Dutch oven. Saute leeks and chopped onion over gentle heat until they are soft and golden, about five minutes. Do not brown. Add potatoes, which have been cubed, (two cups), chicken bouillon, salt, pepper. Bring to boiling and simmer 45 minutes (until potatoes are soft). Remove from heat and pour mixture into blender or mix by hand until smooth; heat milk or cream until it bubbles and add to mixture; mix well. Refrigerate, covered, six hours, or overnight. Add chilled cream, mixing well before serving. Garnish with chives, parsley or watercress. (This soup may be served hot, too.)

Booties for Mother's Day Baby

Mother's Day was made a little more special in the maternity wing of Belleville General Hospital Sunday when also new mothers were presented with hand-knitted booties by the BGH Auxiliary as annual tradition on the floor. Here, Irene Cottrell represents the auxiliary as she gives Glenda McGregor, of RR 1, Havelock, a chance to choose a pair for son Jason Carl, born at 3.17 a.m. May 10, this year's first Mother's Day baby.

Engagement

The engagement is announced of Elizabeth Ellen Ross, daughter of Mrs. Aileen Ross and the late Dr. Francis Ross, to Michael Robert Moher, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Moher of North Bay. The wedding will take place Saturday, June 14, at 3:30 p.m. in St. Joseph's Church in Belleville.

People and Events

The May meeting of the Belleville Weavers' Guild will be held Thursday beginning at 8 p.m. at the Recreation Centre.

MOTHER — DAUGHTER DINNER

Over 40 people attended a mother and daughter banquet and Women's Missionary Society meeting held May 1 at Pine View Free Methodist Church in Cayuga. The guest speaker was Mrs. Paul Willoughby who spoke on Family Relationships.

Rug-hookers Display Work

Arranging their display at the rug-hooking show at Loyalist College Saturday are Dorothy Haight of Picton and Nora Roche of Brighton-ceyville, members of the Quinte Isle Hooking Guild. They were among rug-hookers from cities, towns and villages throughout the area, where this world and attractive craft is being revived and enjoying popularity with all age groups. At the day-long show there were samples of work done by beginners and by experts, ranging from small wall plaques to eight-foot diameter oriental patterned rugs.

Welcoming Committee

Welcoming guests at the entrance to the Moira Room in the Four Seasons Hotel Saturday night, Selma Bochnek and Sadie Ross gave perfume gifts to couples arriving at the annual dinner and dance sponsored by the Sons of Jacob Ladies' Auxiliary. Joining their wives here are Sy Bochnek and Syd Ross, for the occasion attended by more than 150 persons. Mrs. Bochnek and Mrs. Ross were co-convenors for the event with Ruth Leer.

Emily Carr's Friend Recalls Her Kindness

To one of the viewers of the Emily Carr exhibition now hanging in the Corby Library Art Gallery, the paintings "was much more than they do most art lovers.

The Marjorie Madden they bring back a rich array of memories of her friendship with the Canadian artist, who achieved international recognition only after her death in 1945.

Mrs. Madden first met Emily Carr when she was sent by her family in Athabaska, Alberta, out to Victoria B.C. to recuperate from an illness. Friends recommended to her she board with the artist, who lived in an old house with plenty of room for guests to join her and her pet monkey Wee.

"We used to dress the monkey up and take it on a lead downtown," recalls Mrs. Madden. "It really was such a cute little thing."

Perhaps eccentricities, such as keeping a monkey, were responsible for Emily Carr's personal reputation being distorted through the years. Mrs. Madden is anxious to get across her impression of the woman who treated her kindly on her first visitor's stay, and again on a second visit several years later.

"She was the most generous, thoughtful person," says Margaret Madden.

"She would leave hampers of food at the doors of needy persons, without letting any one find it was she who did it. That's the side of Emily Carr that no one seems to know about. She had a heart of gold."

"She'd read to me as I knitted, and I'd read to her as she was working on her pottery. But I never disturbed her when she was painting. She had to be alone for that," Mrs. Madden says.

Emily Carr's deep admiration for the Indians of the west coast area became the source and substance of her paintings. As time passed, like all artists she continued to grow and change, and turned to more abstract representations of the totems and forests of B.C.

"I still prefer the earlier, more realistic paintings," says Mrs. Madden, pointing out yet or three now in the gallery that she remembers, from the days she spent with the artist.

Mrs. Madden has brought to the Corby Library two postcards, dated 1941 and 1944, sent to her by Emily Carr. One of them is handmade, and valuable both as an art object and souvenir.

Good to See You Again!

Margaret Madden of Victoria Avenue makes the re-acquaintance of this Indian totem by Emily Carr, one of the realistic and yet strangely dream-like paintings in the exhibit hanging in the Corby Library Art Gallery until May 23. A friend for many years with the artist, Mrs. Madden remembers Emily Carr primarily as a good and kindly person, whose image, she says, has been much distorted by others.

Ann Landers

Love Me, Let Me Live

Dear Ann Landers: This may be one of the most unusual letters you have ever received. But I've got to get it off my chest. You see, I am trying. But don't become alarmed, and don't feel sorry for me. After all, we are ALL dying. From the moment we are born, we are on borrowed time. We are all doomed.

Three years ago I learned I have Lymphosarcoma, Stage III. That's the doctor told me. The truth is once he saw I intended to know the truth, he came of a crisis time in my life. (I had had gone through a diversion and I kept asking him to tell me.)

Would you believe I had to move out of town to a larger city because I could not accept me as a normal person? I was depressed and I was a cripple, which, had been confirmed by doctors for the past 3 years. I was treated for Arthritis. I could not walk, climb, bend, lift, carry, drive, and take part in community activities, the people at St. Joe made my life miserable. Cobalt treatments refused to use the same washroom I was, (contagious, I guess). I was treated like some sort of a leper. Nobody would touch me or even talk to me.

After I moved to this distant city my life changed dramatically. My job, my home, my friends, are involved with community activities, and I participate in sports. What a pity that I had to move to a place where nobody knew me in order to live a normal life.

Although I feel well, that does not change the prognosis. I know it, can't fool myself. I have dread the day I will be bed ridden, I don't want to go there. I don't want to be pitied. And of course I fear death. I am desperate so I was sure before.

The purpose of this letter, Ann Landers, is to ask you, what should they do? Shouldn't someone in their life's prime have to live in the dying hour? I'm right, aren't I? Yes, I am. You can bet your bottom dollar I am. Why? Here are the ways:

1. Let them know they are a valuable commodity. They are not just "one of the people."

2. Let them know they are needed. They are not just "here are you doing?"

3. Let them know they are activist. They are needed. They are able to do.

4. Stay off the subject of illness. Illness, ailments and hereafter. (Relatives are especially guilty of this.)

5. Let them know they are a human being. They are a human being. Let them know they are a human being. Let them know they are a human being.

6. Let them know they are a human being. Let them know they are a human being. Let them know they are a human being.

Community Support Can Help Parents

Junior is bound to give you moments of perplexity, sometimes anger. Certainly unpaid bills and problems can be baffled from time to time.

Some of the ways you can cope up against could be avoided entirely if you can find ways, getting recreation or part-time fun from one of your organizations. Many of these are only schools, but churches, playgrounds and the community, as well as recreation centers.

Good principles of living can be absorbed by parents with the teamwork, which is a natural part of any organization or activities. When it comes to Christian living, the teamwork doesn't end at regular Sunday attendance of church schools has much to be said for it.

If the right ideal of right and wrong, the principles of Christian living are instilled in John and Mary when they are at the formative stage, such principles are likely to stick by them when they are confronted with sticky situations later on.

Dear Doris: I'm worried about my place for the last six months, and I don't know if I'm a fool. I haven't written my letters either.

You said "What's the matter?" All I am really say is I worried and I feel a little depression. In one week I've lost 10 pounds.

Yes, I'm taking medicine and maybe to recuperate a few of the ways and wherefores. One reason is so negative and there is a vicious circle there because my mouth is so sore and I would rather just drink cold water.

Since retirement I'm not only wearing out, I'm rusting out. The doctor says to me, "Just don't say 'No.'" Easy-going? I spend too much time alone.

Dear Doris: At 48 it is not easy to hectic secret, especially after a long time. Just ask the doctor is right. Many people like you and will invite you and make you feel that you are well enough to go.

It might not be worthwhile for you to make an effort and make sacrifices, but it is very important. Meal you can get ready.

People can rouse themselves and make a great recuperation. The alternative is gradual deterioration. Take your doctor's advice. And follow doctor's rules toward getting the antibiotics you need every single day.

Dear Doris: I am trying to be honest because I real in your column about the 36-year-old virgin (Andy). Well, Andy, I agree with you a hundred percent about being a virgin. I'm 36 and a virgin.

Many boys tease me about it. And I'm very proud to be one. I couldn't care less what they say about sometimes. Most times I have felt the way she does about going to bed with a guy, but I don't do it.

I'm going with a very nice guy and he knows I'm proud of me and I want to stay a virgin until I get married. I'm 36 and the time comes I'm still a virgin. I hope!

Virgin.

Dear Virgin: So you are backing me up 100 per cent. Your kind of support will give Andy the strength he needs to stay with her resolution. Thanks for the letter to us.

Dear Doris: I come from the other side of the world, from a newly independent country. After a bloody, democratic war.

I have established myself here. But now I have met somebody — needless to say, of a different race. Well, I first talked with her I thought. "I never have a human being could be so nice and so beautiful has her."

I have to confess I fell into love with her. The more I see her the more my love burst. But I know I do get dated any chance.

Dear Should I Bail Out? Dear Should I: How can you be so sure your love will not be returned? The right acquaintance it is doubtful if you would respond romantically, but in the meantime, it is the man who does the pursuing, the pursuing, the pursuing. Don't sell yourselves!

The courage is hard, offer to buy her a coffee, talk when you feel like, don't get to know you. Real differences are a hazard, but do try — the world is in anything becoming a fale you really don't know!

Baby Sitting Service

Countess Organizes Roman Grannies

ROME (Reuter) — An enterprising Roman countess has launched a baby-sitting service with a difference—the baby-sitters are grannies.

The service is designed for families who are reluctant to leave their children in the hands of teen-age girls or students while they spend an evening out.

Countess Gianna Rossi said in taking the idea to school. The credentials of her "girls," 50 to 70 years old, she has so far accepted only 35.

"They have to provide me with a medical certificate and I want to meet them to see they're reliable and conscientious," she said.

The countess, who runs an avant-garde cinema in her palazzo near the Pantheon, is trict, said she never expected so much interest in her idea. A series of articles in the Roman press and appearances on radio and television have given wide publicity to the idea.

"It all goes well—and I'm thinking of setting up a similar agency in Milan," she said, the countess, herself a grandmother.

But why should Roman grandmothers be forced their children to elderly hotel? Several reasons, said the countess. First, they have already raised their own families and both their own and their grandchildren. And they are glad to be able to help friends in help them babysit. The "grannies" are all comprehensively qualified, the countess said. They've all received a first-class education, speak several languages and they come from good families and they have impeccable credentials. They are the cream of the Roman bourgeoisie.

Despite all these qualifications, prices are low, $1.20 an hour.

Some of them might be able to give lessons in art or advise children on the finer points of etiquette, the countess said.

She prefers to talk of the scheme as a "club" rather than an agency. Her slogan, she said, is: "Grannies of Rome, unite."

The countess, widow of an Italian nobleman, wants to provide baby-sitters for Roman families, but also to give something for them to do in their ample spare time.

One of the first grannies to join in the agency said, "I don't need the money so much as the human contact. I'm fed up with sitting on the sidelines. I'm tired of talking to my daughters just to give my son-in-law a rest."

Countess Rossi's organization will also include a "lonely hearts" club where lonely people who have never able to use fully their talents can meet, she said: "You get teacher-grannies, bureaucrat grannies, hospital-grannies and even one who is trained to look after handicapped children.

"Some of them are tired of being confined within the four walls of their homes. They want to do something bigger or their business or profession. They want to be independent."

Hungarian Fashions — Gala, Trendy, Feminine

BUDAPEST. (CP) — Invitations to attend fashion shows in Eastern Europe are a variety of activities—coffee with brandy at 10 a.m., a six-course luncheon, a secret game, an afternoon at a movie or gallery, late supper at a nightclub or an evening of ballet, opera or music.

An invitation to a fashion show could mean wearing clothes by Hungarian designers can be added to the "to do" list. In Budapest, the skirts dropped women off at the Inter-Continental and the salon was packed.

Right on time, the music tape—soul rock with voice sung in English. The lights dimmed, the music faded and the spotlights focused on a stylish commentator who introduced a trio of reversible raincoats lined with wool check; white, matching shirt the color Hungarian fabric is, bright pastels. Dressmaker suits in soft shades of blue, pink and green featured fine detailing.

The models were willowy and tall, tall and willowy right out of the latest Vogue magazine and were knit suits with full skirts and long jacket styles.

With all the prevalent talk everywhere of thrift and economy there was the same extravagant use of fabric as in Western countries: layered hems on lower, sleeves puff, skirts billow, coats are the tents and scarfs have wide, usually cuffed, sleeves.

Except for sportswear, little knitwear was shown, clothes, most of the collection were made of Hungarian fabrics tailored by people who stage fashion shows. Hungarian manufacturers lack the income or the lifestyle to wear. But the audience enthusiastically applauded the pastel crepe-de-chine and chiffon dresses that fluttered across the runway.

Maybe this swing to pastel, fragile femininity is a reaction to lackluster fashion in the 1960s and 70s. Women in Eastern Europe, the only remaining bastions of this chivalrous way of life, middle-aged women in some bureaucratic job.

Western designers and manufacturers would be aware of some of the Hungarian fabrics—nasty polyester, brittle silk, point d'esprit and smocking. Embroidery was used sparsely to outline the lap of pockets and the outside seam of pants.

Male models paraded down the runway wearing light tweed suits, mostly in plaid or stripe style. Suits for next winter, often included a vest with a boutonnee cut. Except for their shorter hair they looked like Western male fashion plates, wearing pastel shirts with deep collars, and wide ties or gaudy bow ties.

In fabric stores, embroideries, knitted goods and material was sold by the yard are reasonable. The beauty salons always seem to be crowded with brunettes becoming blonder; others having shampoos and stylings, manicures and pedicures and numerous rites performed behind closed doors. Prices are low—it would cost a beauty manicure and pedicure—but most Hungarian women, to generously, 20 per cent and higher. From a country of small plants, Hungary has developed its textile industry in 30 years with modern knitting and weaving machinery from Swedish and Switzerland. Production of cotton, wool and synthetic materials has doubled and redoubled and Hungary can compete with most countries today.

Compared with only a few large clothing factories before the Second World War, there now are more than 100, producing everything from baby clothes and maternity wear to half the production in exported sportswear. Designers are found into development of fashion in Vienna, London and Rome and textile mills are constantly about their likes. Each season sees dozens of fashion shows staged free and on television.

And Hungarians are just like the rest of us when it comes to clothes—they loved the mini but hated the maxi.

British Men Called 'Sadly Lacking' When It Comes to Love and Sex

LONDON (Reuter)—One in four wives is unfaithful and takes a secret lover at least once during her married British husbands learned today.

And there is a good chance that the reason is a husband's poor sexual performance.

Women's Own, a leading British magazine, published a survey today based on a questionnaire of 11,000 of its readers. The survey, conducted by sociologist Robert Chester, a senior lecturer at Hull University.

The survey revealed that 25 per cent of British wives are sex-starved; only one quarter of marriages are unhappy and one in 10 wives is in danger of leaving her husband. Marriages unhappy by taking a wife's lover, it said.

"Working wives help create happier marriages because they are happier with life.

"This survey shows that affairs and treacherous behavior are a substitute," said Mr. Chester.

"But when it comes to love, intimacy and tenderness, they seem to be sadly lacking. The modern women expects an expression of love, understanding, fulfilment of her sexual emotionally. In many ways, men have not caught up with women's recent demands."

David Berkin of the National Marriage Council said: "I am dubious about taking too much notice of the poll in which the women were invited to write in. It is likely that more women who were dissatisfied with their marriage responded than those whose marriages are happy.

Female Civil Servants Making Some Headway

OTTAWA (CP) — The Public Service Commission says much international Women's Year activity has resulted in more women in professional, Public Service activities thanks to several developments including a program set up by the federal Office of Equal Opportunities for Women.

The newly-appointed co-ordinator of the office, Nola Lawtoc, said most women civil servants are still in the lower levels of the administrative support staff as clerk and secretaries. Other women are not eligible for more responsible and lucrative jobs.

The office has set up two special programs it hopes will increase awareness of women's capabilities and promote equality in the working world of the Public Service.

One is a career-growth-for-incapacitate program. The other is a Summer Employment program that offers an opportunity for orientation and a chance for advancement. Graduates may then take on developmental assignments aimed at preparing them for competitive job competition.

A Career Development Program (CAP) also helps identify qualified personnel and attempts to place them in executive-level training programs. Whereas only two per cent of CAP participants in 1971 were women, there were 25 per cent in 1974.

Lawtocl, who has worked for the Women's Bureau and the treasury board, said that having a few women executives acquired here and there may appear as tokenism, but it provided a model for others and international Women's Year activities complying more women in professional Public Service positions have a greater awareness in the last two years. Women are now being promoted to the upper levels.

Women have a greater awareness in the last two years. It wasn't until 1967 that sex was added to the non-discriminating grounds.

Law Sought to Forbid Setting Own Salaries

GRAVENHURST, Ont. (CP) Legislation to ban municipal — Delegates at a convention of councillors and school board trustees could set their own salaries, seeking the provincial to amend the town of Aurora, requested that salaries for municipal councillors and school board trustees be set by the outgoing council or the school board before an election.

About 35 municipalities with a population of 10,000 or less were represented at the convention of the Organization of Small Municipalities in this community 23 miles north of Orillia.

It Has Taken 8 Years To Refit Venezuelan Ships

LIVERPOOL, England (Reuter) — Two Venezuelan motorships that arrived at the Cammell Laird shipyard on Merseyside for refitting at the end of 1967 are still there. Shipyard sources contacted Saturday did not fully explain the seven-year stay but blamed it on slowed work schedules due to a boom period in the yard and on "extra work" on an trials earlier this year.

The crews have been around so long that some of them have married local girls. Others send their children to neighborhood schools.

However, Capt. Neptali Cabrera Toro said all the men of his ship, the Almirante Clemente, want to go home.

Immigrants and Workers Said Used as Scapegoats

WINNIPEG (CP) — Immigrants and workers are being used as scapegoats during the current recession, says Rosemary Brown, a national ownership candidate for the New Democratic Party.

She was speaking Saturday at a stop here on a cross-Canada campaign tour. Also present was Manitoba's ashtray-general, Howard Pawley.

Both spoke out against the federal government's recent deportation proceedings in which more than 1,000 Italians face deportation for entering the country illegally.

Jamaican Official Critical

TORONTO (CP) — Willie O. Isaac, Jamaican minister of labour, whose ministry has looked out at what he called racist and uncultured elements in the Metropolitan Toronto police force.

He was speaking Saturday at the funeral of 19-year-old Michael Habbib, a Jamaican boy shot to death last week at a shopping centre.

Ronald Ryan, a 20-year-old white man, has been charged with murder punishable by life imprisonment in connection with the shooting.

Mr. Isaac said he has received reports which lead him to believe "there are elements in the police which are extremely racist, uncultured and inhuman." He did not elaborate.

"I am extremely dissatisfied with the administration of justice when there are clashes between my people and the police."

Mr. Isaac also asked Toronto Jamaicans to remain calm and not to become involved over the killing.

About 4,000 people attended the funeral service. All but 150 waited outside, the chapel in the Toronto borough of North York.

Queen Flies Home

TOKYO (Reuter) — Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip left by air this afternoon for London via Anchorage, Alaska, at the end of the first state visit to Japan by a reigning British monarch.

Thomson in East

HONG KON (CP) — Newspaper magnate Lord Thomson of Fleet has arrived here on his way to China.

Big Haul

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Customs Service inspector at Hoboken, N.J., seized $25-million worth of hashish hidden in a commercial shipment of cashew nuts from Bombay, India, the government said Saturday. The hashish was discovered April 24 aboard the S.S. Concordia Tarpk after a customs inspector recognized the address on the shipment as an apartment building.

Families Settle

DETROIT (CP) — Donnelly Hadden of Detroit, lawyer for 11 LaSalle, (Ont.) families who accepted an out-of-court settlement last week in an air-pollution damage lawsuit against two United States firms, says the settlement is for a total of $100,000.

Mr. Hadden said the settlement, agreed to by Detroit Edison and Great Lakes Steel, will be shared by the families after expenses are paid. A third firm, Allied Chemical, settled out of court for $12,500 last year before the trial began in March.

May Need Billion

TORONTO (CP) — Barnett Danson, federal urban affairs minister, said Saturday that the Assisted Home Ownership Program and the Accelerated Rental Housing Program may require an infusion of $1 billion this year. He said a target of 200,000 new housing units this year "is going to be a tough target to reach."

Swindled

TORONTO (CP) — A 70-year-old Toronto woman who thought she was helping police catch a thief at her bank gave $875 in a mass pushup at a police inspector's office said Sunday.

Police said a man called on the woman Friday and asked for her help in preparation in arresting an employee of the bank where she kept her savings.

Police said the woman withdrew the money and turned it over to the man.

Unity Essential

VANCOUVER (CP) — Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said Saturday that party unity is essential if the Conservatives are to be taken seriously after their moderately low showing in last July's federal election.

Women Lose

WINNIPEG (CP) — Women workers lost more than $7 billion in jobs because of wage discrimination, Madeleine Parent, a member of the national executive of the Confederation of Canadian Unions, said Saturday.

Campaign Opens

REGINA (CP) — Premier Allan Blakeney launched his personal election campaign Saturday by playing host at a coffee-and-cake party in two rented rooms of a small, rundown office building.

Although it was the official opening of his committee rooms in the working-class constituency of Regina Centre, the premier gave no indication when he might announce the provincial general election expected to come within 30 days.

NATIONAL POLICE WEEK - 1975

The week of May 11th to May 17th, 1975 has been set out as National Police Week, and I would like to take this opportunity to seek the assistance from all citizens to assist their Police Department in trying to fulfill their role in society.

The role of the Police today has changed quite considerably from its original concept. In addition to being an agency that prevents, detects, and apprehends criminals, the modern Police Force is made up of specialists in other fields to aid the citizens of their community. This Police Force has a Services Branch which includes trained Officers in Safety and in Youth work.

Over 80% of our time is spent primarily in providing services to the public.

Over the past year in Belleville we have experienced a 16% increase in reported crime. The only way that we will be truly successful in reducing the crime in our community is with the assistance of all the citizens.

We are not asking that they do our job, but merely inform us of what they see to enable us to carry out our role.

May I take this opportunity of thanking those many citizens who already do this and trust that their numbers will increase.

D. T. CROSNIE
Chief of Police

OFL Entry Impressive In Four Weekend Tests

The Ontario Football League made its debut in Belleville, Monday, and thanks to the first-time city entry, the McDonald's team had to be impressed with what they saw.

It was a great weekend for McDonald's.

With preseason activity delayed by rain when earlier attempts were being made to give the Belleville team some much needed competition, McDonald's were more than ready when the test finally came.

And they can't be dubbed a fluke.

After giving defending Canadian Champions Oshawa Tony's all that team could handle, Saturday, right in the Motor City, McDonald's travelled the Niagara Peninsula for more excellent work at Centennial Park, Sunday.

Matched against Newmarket Tory's in the morning, it was McDonald's more than held their own, coming up with a 9-0 victory.

That first rate effort followed a 14-0 loss and a 45-0 win, in Oshawa.

Certainly, club officials should now know the answers to many of the questions which crop up when a venture such as this is undertaken.

And the fans must be convinced that McDonald's are for real.

Dave Duvel each added two hits in the winning cause as he also was credited by Trenton pitchet Paul Wammamaker.

On Sunday, the McDonald's, in their home debut, looked impressive against the floating the Newmarket Ray's. Once again the Macs picked hard hitting opposition in the Ray's last years, last division champion, whomever.

The McDonalds won the first game 3-1 getting all the runs they needed in the first inning of the game.

Jim Clement walked to open the game, and Glen Carlston came up with a bunt single. With one out Jack Jury walked to load the bases. After Frank Robinson struck out, being pitcher Bill Lunney threw a wild hitch scoring Clement. With the runners on the move Paul Goodfellow singled to left scoring two more runners.

Belleville's starter, Scott Reid threw excellent ball until the sixth when three consecutive base hits put him out of the box. One of those hits was on inside the park homerun by Ron Labey.

Bob Ellsler came into relieve Reid and was credited with the save, while striking out four batters. Winning pitcher Reid also fanned four.

The second game saw Newmarket ace Bob Domik, and Belleville's Ted Walle meet head-on in a duel where no runs were scored until the final inning.

Walle prevailed in the battle of department fanning 11 while Domik struck out 10 Mac batters.

Last years' leading hitter in the OFL, Lee Sneyd was outsmarted by Walle three times.

Newmarket scored its only run in the seventh when Joe Pigza singlehit, a two-out single to left scoring Dave Day from second base. Pigza is from the Phillipines where he was an All-Star shortstop for the 1973 World Championships.

In the Macs final at bat, they never let up. With a rank left hander, Mike Milner, and a pitch runner there is a rule on the OFL that a pitcher who is not in the game may bat or run for any player they find the score 1-1.

With one out Carlston singled, and Duvall failed in a squeeze play. Ted Carstal came as a pinch runner and went down to second on a wild pitch.

With two case Steve Ling came through with a clutch single as he blooped a Texas leaguer over the infield to drive in the tying run.

The McDonalds open the regular season next Saturday night at the Alemite with a game against the Etobicoke Warriors. The game starts at 8:15.

What More Could a McDonald's Fan Ask For?

By DOUG JEFFRIES

If pre-season play is any indication on how the Belleville McDonald's are about to take their upcoming Ontario Football League schedule, their opponents had better beware.

On Saturday, the Macs travelled to Oshawa for a twin-bill against the defending Canadian champions, the Oshawa Tory's and split the double-header.

In the first game the Macs bats were silent as only Jim Clement, landed a single off winning pitcher Barry Tunbers. Belleville's Ted Walle was almost equal in his task as he struck out 11, but gave up one unearned run, in the team first defeat.

In game two, Scott Reid started for the Macs, pitched five innings, then came off with the score tied 3-3 to let Bob Ellsler finish out the game. The Macs won the ball game 4-3 as Ellsler himself drove in the winning run. (Ellsler played for the weekend to give the Macs a three man staff.)

McGUIRE TWINS LEAVE RING

Wrestlers Work Hard To Polish Their Talents

Professional Wrestling, as promoted by Big Bear Sports Promotions has made its return to Memorial Arena. Anyone judging from the attendance the performers in promoter Conrad Gregory' group of grapplers got from the public in Friday's opening card, it's a cinch that form of summer entertainment will be popular at the box office.

Whether one takes wrestling seriously or prefers to put the whole thing down as bottom-ery, it is a fact that many of the participants are highly skilled at their trade. And they know how to put their skills at their disposal when it is the paying public.

It is entertainment.

Like most entertainers, wrestlers rely on their talents to provide the paying taxed in their efforts to win acceptance from the fans.

Wrestling has its "good guys and ty' bad guys".

While the Widger Walsons, Lord Alfred Hayes, Bobo Brazil, Johnson, Tony Parisis, Duncan McTavishes, Sam Steele, Lynx" and the rest polish up their images as the heroes, others have the Mr. Hamilton, Whitlam, Stan Stasiak, Hell's Angels and the Morgan gang feel as determined to make their mark in the villains.

They act their parts. And they are good at it.

Naturally, the dy not escape the attention of the fans and attempting to remain at or near the top in the popularity stakes of the program known as box office appeal, they must act out the game.

The McGuire twins, who help at launch the new wrestling season, Friday night, have plenty going for them in the quest for recognition. No one can miss them.

It is Mike or Bernie who makes the scales continue under his weight of 700 lbs.? Nobody knows for sure, whether it only 30 lbs. lighter.

Ad infinitum, they're not doubt about it.

When one or the other leans on one of the villains, the bad guy knows it.

The Guiness Book of Records whole reference to them as Billy and Benny McCarty alias Dave and Billy McGuire, calls the tag team the heaviest twins in the world.

Bets — Hendersonville, North Carolina, the McCrarys or McGuires, are 28 years old.

They most have caused a stir on the high school wrestling scene in North Carolina.

"We weighed about 450 lbs. each during our high school days," they inform an inquisitive observer.

Apparently these two big boys don't keep track of who they meet in the ring, probably because they don't stick around long enough to get acquainted.

But they don't remember ever having been beaten at a team. Circumstances weigh heavily in their favor (if you'll excuse the pun).

Anyway, pro wrestling will from things, at Memorial Arena every second Friday night for the next three months or so. It should be a successful run.

SLIGHT — Woodbine Racetrack in Toronto opens its 67-day Summer Meeting, Wednesday.

Ontario Jockey Club president John J. Money expects this season will be the "greatest in our history."

Highlight of the regular schedule will be the June 28 running of the Queen's Plate.

Larry Doby, the first Negro player in the American Baseball League, broke in with Cleveland Indians in 1947 and went on to a brilliant 13-year career in the majors, in back leading his talents to Montreal Expos as minor league batting instructor.

Doby was with Expos from 1969-71, first as a scout and later serving as minor league batting instructor before taking over as first base coach for three seasons with the Montreal club.

He left Expos for a one-year stint as coach with Cleveland Indians.

NAMED COACH

VANCOUVER (CP) — Wayne Norton of Vancouver has been named head coach of the Canadian national baseball team, the Canadian Federation of Amateur Baseball said Wednesday. Norton will lead the team at two major competitions this year—the inter-Continental Cup and the Pan-American games. He says he will name his 18-member team by July 15.

RIGHTS TRADED

TORONTO (CP) — Bruce Berger, who hasn't worn a NHL uniform in two years, had his Canadian Football League rights traded to Saskatchewan Roughriders by Toronto in exchange for the Riders' No. 3 pick in the 1976 draft. Berger, 28, played 15 games with Riders before going to Parliament Storm of the World Football League last year.

BOX TRADE SHARP

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago White Sox traded a left-handed hitting outfielder Bill Sharp to Milwaukee Brewers for right-handed hitting outfielder Bob Coluccio Thursday. Sharp's hit .302 in 18 White Sox games this season while Coluccio hit .194 in 27 games for Brewers.

CELTICS, RANGERS DRAWS

GLASGOW (Reuter) — Celtic and Rangers drew 2-2 in the first game of the Glasgow Cup football competition here Saturday.

Tony's Look Good In BQSA Opener

WARKWORTH (Special) — Cobourg Tony's, first place finisher during the Bay of Quinte Soccer Association (BQSA) regular season in 1974, served notice here Saturday that the club is in high gear again.

Two goals each from John Van Balen, John Heard and Brian Reid sparked Tony's to a 7-1 win over Warkworth Institution in the BQSA opener. Jeff Cirne was the other Cobourg marksman.

Cobourg's only goal came after Cobourg had moved in front 3-0. Tony's goalie Hans Bruin spoiled the shutout when defender Peppiat headed the ball into his net.

League play continues with action Wednesday and Saturday this week. Check the sports calendar for complete details.

Apollo Weightlifters Are Tops in Ottawa

OTTAWA (Special) — Belleville Apollo Barbell Club lifters came away with two firsts and a pair of seconds in Ontario Weightlifting Championships here, Saturday.

Art Wall led the field in the 198 lb. (middle heavy weight) class, snatching 265 lbs. and recording a clean and jerk of 330 lbs. for a combined total of 661 lbs. The 265 lbs. and 661 lbs. figures are new Ontario Senior records.

First place in the 181 lb. (light heavyweight) division, was captured by Apollo's Paul Barrett. He snatched 242 lbs. and had a clean and jerk of 296 lbs. for a total of 538 lbs.

Gary Wall completed a first rate showing by the Belleville club's brother act by taking second place in the middle heavy class with a total of 623 lbs. off of a match of 281 lbs. and a clean and jerk of 342 lbs.

Lifting in the 148 lb. category, Ron Hayes took second place, totalling 440 lbs. on efforts of 187 lbs. and 253 lbs.

All four lifters will compete in the Canadian Championships set for June 28-29 in Quebec City.

Saturday's contest here was the first meet for Gary Wall since he decided to shed about 30 lbs. and drop from competition in the 242 lb. division to the middle heavy ranks (198 lbs.).

Barrell was a surprise starter. He was expected to miss the Ontario Championships because of a hand injury.

Coach Ken Carr-Brain, whose Apollo Club has produced a long list of champions over the years, was very satisfied with the showing made by his lifters.

"They were up against some top competition here and I'm proud as hell of them," he said.

Although he did not qualify for competition in the Canadian Championships, Apollo's Ron Murphy attacked 176 lbs. and clean and jerked 225 lbs. for a total of 402 lbs. and finished in the 132 lb. class.

Ross Prior, now lifting out of Ottawa, set Commonwealth records in the super-heavy division, snatching 336 lbs. and posting a 437 lb. clean and jerk for a total of 773 lbs.

Italo and Parsons Win

TRENTON — Quinte Italo-Canadians keep rolling along in pre-season soccer outings but the other new entry to the Bay of Quinte Soccer Association, Quinte Hellenic, is having its problems.

Italo made it three wins in as many starts at Centennial Park here, Sunday, nipping Trenton Chinese Flasmen 3-1.

Hellenic fell to the new-look Belleville Parsons 6-1 in the first game of the exhibition twin bill.

Nick Del Grosso said it for Italo. His goal in the closing minutes sealed it out when it appeared the clubs would settle for a draw.

And it was Del Grosso who shot Italo in front with the winning goal of the first half when he found the corner after slipping past the Trenton defence.

Bob Arsenault's goal early in the second half put the Parsons squad on even terms. Arsenault drilled the ball home after taking a pass from Sean Cleveser.

Parsons, with only three players back from last year, put on an impressive show in the first pre-season test.

Ross MacLeod and Roger Sprague each connected for a pair of goals while Terry Britton and Rob Smit clicked for one each.

Jim Asselstine turned in a strong game in goal for the winners.

Sprawling to take ball from onrushing Kingston Italo-Canadian forward is Belleville Olympics' Colin Baillie. Charlie Nesterovski (fourth from left) and Bob Watson both have loose ball lined up while Kingston player kneels for a better look. Extreme left is Belleville's Steve Edwards. Italo-Canadians scored the only goal of the game late in the match to take Premier Soccer League exhibition contest played at Belleville Fairgrounds.

Members of Branch 99 team display trophy emblematic of Royal Canadian Legion Provincial Shuffleboard Championship following win on the weekend in Sault Ste. Marie. Outstanding shuffleboard championship are John Goode, Terry Boyle, Tom Bentley, Charlie Clapp and team captain Bob Mondeville.

Branch 99 Takes Crown In Provincial Playoff

SAULT STE. MARIE (Special) — Belleville Branch 99 became a three-time winner of the Royal Canadian Legion provincial shuffleboard championship here on the weekend.

Winner of the crown in 1969 and again in 1969, Branch 99 repeated in a competition which featured a marathon 44-end match with Belleville's Terry Boyle and Charlie Clapp defeating a Toronto team by one point. The match lasted 90 minutes.

Other members of the championship team are team captain Bob Mondeville, John Goode and Tom Bentley.

Sixteen region Branches from across the province were shooting for the title.

Others representing Belleville at the event were Branch 99 president Gerry Downs, sports officer Dave Drass and photographer Tom Purdey.

Branch 99 will host the provincial finals in 1976.

Goode and Boyle were members of the other two Branch 99 championship teams.

Centennial In High Gear

Wally Inwood and Terry Thompson fired four goals each and Chris Rutledge added three as Centennial Secondary School whipped Quinte Secondary School 16-4 in high school lacrosse action at Quinte.

Gabe Krekk was a two-goal shooter for the winners while Bob Thompson, Doug Fraser and Ken Jackel each added one.

Tops for Quinte was Roger Chapman who counted three of his team's goals. Sandy Waterson was the other Quinte marksman.

Plenty of Excitement Slated for Mosport

Busy is the only way to describe Mosport Park's first major weekend of activity as Canada's only Grand Prix auto racing circuit prepares to host its Victoria Day Sprints, May 16, 17, 18 and 19.

Traditionally this weekend marks the start of the racing season in Ontario and Mosport is no exception. Workers are currently preparing the 2½ acres of parkland for a full four days of camping and motor racing activity.

Headlining the weekend will be the appearance of some of North America's leading motorcyclists at the Mosport Challenge — two full days of production and sidecar racing. This is the first of only two motorcycle dates at Mosport — the second of which is scheduled on June 28 during Days of Speed.

"We will be providing some of the most sensational motorcycle racing in North America," claims Harvey Hudes, Mosport's President and General Manager. "And as a result, it's one event we feel the two-wheeled fraternity will not wish to miss, particularly considering we have scheduled just two motorcycle dates this year."

The motorcyclists dominate the 2.459 mile circuit on Saturday and Sunday, May 17 and 18 when they hold the second round of the Bulova Championship for Formula 100s and 2.5 sedans on Monday, May 19. Friday is reserved for motorcycle practice.

A Superticket which includes a Grandstand seat for the weekend is priced at $12 while Saturday and Sunday tickets also allow admittance to Gearhead Square and the Garages all weekend, but only the Superticket incorporates a Grandstand seat. Camping, firewood and water are offered free of charge in the campground.

ALI TO MEET LYLE

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Muhammad Ali will meet Ron Lyle Friday at Las Vegas, Nev. in the first live home telecast of a heavyweight championship fight in three years. It will be Ali's second title defence since he regained the championship by knocking out George Foreman last Oct. 30.

CZECHS SCORE UPSET

AIX EN PROVENCE, France (AP) — Renata Tomanova and Marilina Navratilova scored victories Sunday as Czechoslovakia upset Australia 3-0 to win the Federation Cup. It was the first time since the event began in 1963 that an Eastern European country has won the tennis trophy. Miss Tomanova captured the opening singles match from Evonne Goolagong 6-3, 6-4. Miss Navratilova defeated Evonne Goolagong 6-3, 6-4.

ENGLAND WINS

LIMASSOL, Cyprus (AP) — England defeated Cyprus 2-0 Sunday in the second leg of their match for the European championship soccer trophy. Kevin Keegan headed the goal in the ninth minute from a corner kick by Dave Thomas.

COACH RESIGNS

ANTIGONISH, N.S. (CP) — Rev. George Kehoe has resigned as hockey coach of St. Francis Xavier University. Xavier is down its full time athletic director in the role as the university's athletic director. Under Kehoe, the Xavier X-Men won more than 150 games and captured four national championships.

Flyers Baffled by Islanders' Ability to Win 'Must' Games

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Fresh and rested, the Islanders have turned the tables on Philadelphia Flyers twice their semi-final series 3-3 and leaving the clear impression that the Stanley Cup champions are about to be dethroned.

"Statistics do lie," said a disillusioned Dave Schultz of the Flyers, who dished out a penalty but played hardly Sunday as the Islanders Cup champ 3-1 to force a deciding game in their best-of-seven National Hockey League series.

The Islanders, who trailed a 3-0 deficit to win their quarter-final with Pittsburgh Penguins, were on the verge of an identical turn around, against the Flyers.

NHL president Clarence Campbell said the Islanders surprising performance has been great for expansion hockey.

"Never has a team faced the axe so many times," Campbell said. "It's a feat no team will ever duplicate again."

The Islanders have never stopped nibbling away, tiring and frustrating the Flyers until they are fatigued, both mentally and physically.

It was defenceman Gerry Hart who scored the winning goal early in the third period of Sunday's game.

The seventh game is Philadelphia's Tuesday night and decide who faces Buffalo Sabres in the final. The Sabres completed a 4-0 sweep with ease over Montreal Canadiens Thursday night in Montreal.

No club has ever won two games after being down 3-0. Only one, Toronto Maple Leafs, in 1942, even once before the Islanders. The Leafs accomplished the feat back in the 1942 final against Detroit Red Wings.

Coach Al Arbour of the Islanders agreed with Philadelphia coach Fred Shero that everything hung from home means nothing in the deciding game of a series.

"But it should be interesting. A very tough game," said Arbour. "Everything is built up into one game, and I think you could play the game in Moscow and it wouldn't really matter."

Almost to a man, the Flyers were a deeply disappointed team. Their blast loss in a row to the Islanders.

Even Shero found it hard to rationalize the losses and the ensuing humiliation he claim they have piled on the champions.

Shero went into great detail to explain the mistakes in his team's positional play and admitted that some of his players are hurt, but wouldn't say who they are.

The injuries obviously have affected his power lines, which seem to have lost their often potent punch.

The Flyer power-play has failed to produce a goal in its last 18 chances.

Glenn Resch, the little goalie, has been playing brilliantly for the Islanders. Against the Penguins, he was in goal for all four New York wins, as he has been in all of his team's victories in the semi-final.

Flyer captain Bobby Clarke, battered and tired and sporting a cut over his left eye, was particularly depressed. He could offer no real explanation for his team's sudden slide.

"The Islanders are blocking a lot of shots and we got no defence at all hardly," said Clarke. "Whatever we have, they've taken away from us.

"If you don't have an offence, you're not going to win."

Schultz, the Flyers' badman, was about as gloomy as Clarke.

"We've got no third line," he lamented. Schultz is a member of that third line.

Reach didn't have a good day. Their goal-getter had at 143 of the first period, an interception by Joe Pavelski and Ross Lonsberry tipped in.

Islanders seemed to be at his best in the first period when he has nine of 13 faceoffs but they he took a costly penalty in the second period that led to the tying Islander goal by Denis Potvin.

Clarke hooked Potvin, who had a clear shot from the circle.

Clarke had only been off the ice for five seconds when New York's Ed Westfall won the faceoff and got the puck right back to Jude Drouin, who passed it to Potvin.

Potvin sent a 40-foot wrist shot over the ice that caught Parent at 16:15. Potvin said he gambled on the fact that Parent was partially screened on the play.

That goal gave the Islanders the lift they needed. Clarke began facesiles for Westfall, who later explained that he suddenly found the rhythm that is so necessary to beat Clarke, one of the best faceoff men in the league.

As the Islanders pressed and the Flyers were tiring, the tie was broken at 2:43 of the third period on Hart's conversion

Court Battles Intervene In WHAs Final Series

QUEBEC (CP)—A bit of the action the World Hockey Association had attached to its final playoff series this year may be lavished in a series of court battles today.

The lustre dissipated Saturday night when the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association obtained a Quebec Superior Court injunction that instructed bailiffs to seize the equipment of Houston Aeros because the team owes the CAHA $35,000 in development fees.

In addition, the CAHA served notice that the portion of the gate receipts from Saturday's third game between the Aeros and Quebec Nordiques, normally allocated to the WHA, be held pending a court hearing today.

The notices of seizure were delivered after the Aeros had put on a solid two-per performance to defeat the Nordiques 3-0 and take a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven final. The Aeros can complete their defence of the Avco Trophy with a win in Sunday's fourth game.

The Aeros victory came on the strength of a second-period power-play goal by Frank Hughes and a goal in the third period by defenseman Paul Popiel. In addition, Ron Grahame stopped 31 Quebec shots for the Houston nets to earn his third shutout in 12 playoff appearances.

In order that the Houston club could hold a Sunday practice in preparation for tonight, John Dacres, president of the Aeros, disputes, gave the bailiffs his assurance that he would be responsible for the equipment until the Aeros could get it for it in court today.

Dacres said Saturday that the Nordiques are strictly a third party in the legal shenanigans that threaten the series. While Houston is in a reserve United States-based WHA clubs that owe a total of $35,000 to the CAHA for junior players drafted, Dacres said all Canadian-based members of the league have paid their dues to the amateur body.

The notice placing a hold on the gate receipts was served on WHA president Dennis Murphy of Los Angeles. Murphy, here along with other WHA officials for the series, said Sunday the league will be in court today to post a bond "and get that it's up to the courts to decide."

In the hockey game Saturday night, Grahame credited the fact his defencemen were clearing rebounds right as a chance for in the win. He turned aside all 34 shots for Nordiques while Richard Brodeur of Quebec allowed two goals on seven Houston drives.

Gordie Howe, the 47-year-old right winger, displayed welts on his back from Quebec checks.

"I've a mole on one game and a mosquito bite the next, I'm in my career—no, make that five," Howe said. "I've been caught five times."

Howe was referring to the fact he played in seven of the games and that he has promised his teammates he will play one game next season to help the owners of the Aeros pay new $18-million rink.

Marlies Get Cup; Give Coach Bath

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Coach George Armstrong took a shower Sunday, then went for an unscheduled twin-engine jet with his clothes on and both courtesy of his Memorial Cup-champion Toronto Marlboros.

The grey-haired veteran had many a National Hockey League bath but just seen the Marlboros defeat New Westminster Bruins 7-3 in the final for the Canadian major junior hockey championship.

"They always start out a bit slow," Armstrong said at the Marlboros who trailed 3-0 late in the first period before scoring two in 25 seconds to tie the game. The Marlboros then went ahead 5-3 after 40 minutes and scored both goals in the final period to claim their second Memorial Cup in three years and seventh in their history.

The Marlboros threw Armstrong into the shower and then into the hotel swimming pool in the traditional post-victory bollicks.

Armstrong said he was "concerned" before the game, six times during the season the Marlboros faced sudden death on the ice.

But six times the Marlboros, Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A champions, came out on top, stretching their quarter-, semi-and final series in the playoffs to all but one game short of the limit and winning, then emerging winners in a sudden-death game Friday night with Sherbrooke Beavers.

Toronto beat the Quebec Ste. Foy Junior Hockey League's Beavers 9-4 after beating Sherbrooke 5-4 in overtime last Saturday.

The Marlboros were forced to take part in the sudden-death semi-final when they lost 6-2 in a Wednesday night game with New Westminster. The Bruins, champions of the Western Canada Hockey League, handed Sherbrooke its second loss of the round-robin tournament with a 7-3 win last Monday night.

New Westminster's victory over Toronto gave the team a bye into Sunday's final, resulting in a three-day layoff which Bruins coach Ernie McLean said gave Toronto the edge.

"Marlies got a few lucky bounces at the wrong time for us and that's all you need in junior hockey in a one-shot deal," said McLean.

The lucky bounces came in the form of two fluke goals by John Anderson—one late in the first period, the other early in the second—that seemed to demoralize the Bruins.

Anderson's first goal, which tied the game at 3-3, occurred when the puck bounced high off the shoulder of Bruins goaltender Gord Laston.

Anderson's second goal came when his shoulder-ended shot bass from behind the goal ki Laston on the back of the pad and went into the net.

Mike Kasypchi also picked up two goals for the Marlboros and Lynn Jergenson, Mark Hopper and Bruce Boudreau had the others. Harold Phillipoff, Kelly Secord and Mark Lofthouse scored for New Westminster.

Toronto's Gary Carr was named the tournament's top goaltender and Barry Smith, left forward with the Bruins, was named the most valuable player award.

Smith, Claude Larose of Sherbrooke and Anderson formed the tournament's all-star team at forward line, Mike Kitchen of Toronto and Brad Maxwell were named to the defence and Carr was chosen as goalie.

Centennial Cup Final

Biltmores Fall to Mets

EDMONTON (CP) — Goaltender Bob Sauve made only one mistake Saturday night but it cost Quebec Biltmores their final chance to win the 1975 Centennial Cup hockey championship.

Mexis, who stopped 48 shots in the game, gave Sauve Sprace Grove Mets let a loose puck roll between his skates for the winning goal at 1:28 of a 10-minute overtime period. The Mets won the best-of-seven series in six games.

Paul Messier, whose wide shots sometimes hit his teammates and struck Mexis, was credited with the goal.

Wayne Turner tucked the puck into an empty net with seconds remaining in the overtime period.

Defenceman Ron Lecuyer and Keith Hertz gave Sprace Grove a lead in the first three games it almost held up despite the heroics of Mexis and Quebec winger Tim Holder. Lecuyer, who scored only three goals and 10 assists, tallied the opening goal and helped set up Hertz's game-winner. Hertz drew an assist on Lecuyer's goal.

Lecuyer, 20, Sprace Grove's oldest player, accumulated 10 points in his last three games and was an easy choice as the outstanding performer in the series and won a $1,500 watch.

Holder scored two quick goals near the midway mark of the third period to force overtime. Wally Keating scored early in the second period and Dave Kennedy made the score 4-3 in the third before Holder caught fire.

Although he faced only 26 shots, netminder Bob Barcelo of Sprace Grove got little defensive support during Cowley's late surge. He saved the game with two great stops during a Biltmore power play in the last five minutes.

Coach Doug Messier, whose son got the winning goal, said Sprace Grove had more speed and better health than the Biltmores, who had regular forwards Mitch Grous and Jim Cowley on sidelines with injuries and three other players hampered with shoulder and leg injuries.

Twins Capture Allan Cup

THUNDER BAY, Ont. (CP) — The Allan Cup, symbol of national senior hockey supremacy, has returned to Thunder Bay after an absence of 39 years.

Thunder Bay Twins recaptured the coveted cup Saturday in a best-of-seven final against Barrie Flyers, winning the series four games to two.

"We have been aiming for this since the season first began," said Twins' playing-coach Dave Smallman after his team defeated Barrie 8-4 Saturday night.

Twins played the first three games in Barrie, losing twice, but came back with the three straight wins on home ice.

"That was one of the better games they (Barrie) played. They skated well and kept coming back," Sicilliafo said. "We had three-goal leads twice but we were hot and cold."

Barrie coach Darryle Sly, whose team defeated Thunder Bay for the title last year but in this way: "You just can't beat a team like that three goals and expect to win."

Fort Lakehead was a recognized power in senior hockey from 1926 until 1938 when Port Arthur Bear Cats won four national titles.

"They may not have made it this year but it not been the executive decision which sent the Twins into the western playoffs after the series had been awarded to St. Boniface Mohawks.

The Twins refused to meet the contender, which boycotted by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association (CAHA) and said they would forfeit the series to St. Boniface.

But the Mohawks appealed to the Twins to change their minds and they did, defeating the Mohawks then ousting Spokane, Wash. in the western final.

In Saturday's game, Twins built up period scores of 3-2 and 5-3. At one point in the final period, Barrie narrowed the score to 5-4 but the Twins quickly put the game out of reach.

Tom Deacon scored three times for Thunder Bay while Dave Bragnalo got two. Singles went to Murray McLeod, Gary Vaillant and Jack Byerley. Barrie goals were scored by Ken Ruhnke, Corby Adams, Grant Moore and Bob Beard.

Thunder Bay outshot Barrie 39 to 33.

Habs Planning To Make Changes

Scott Bowman

MONTREAL (CP)—There will be changes next season among Montreal Canadiens, owners of hockey's proudest tradition, but eliminated 4-1 last week in a best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final series against Buffalo Sabres, a fifth-year team.

The nature and extent of the shuffling, however, is a matter of question, even among those responsible for the National Hockey Club.

General manager Sam Pollock said after Buffalo's series triumph that there is "room for improvement" among the Canadiens.

"We're going to try and strengthen the club any way we can," he said. "We've got to be better. We'd have to take a long look."

Coach Scotty Bowman has suggested the Canadiens are ahead of other clubs in personnel replacement.

"Many of the older clubs haven't made many changes but the nucleus of their teams gets older, he said. "We've made the moves but they are going to be other changes too.

"Some of the teams are going to Europe for their talent now. We've never done that because we've always had enough talent here.

"But guys like (Borje) Salming and (Inge) Hammarstrom have played well," he said, referring to Swedes playing with Toronto Maple Leafs.

Pollock pointed to the three way tie among the Canadiens, Sabres and Flyers for the points lead during the regular season—all had 113—as indicative that the Canadiens were not far wrong this year.

The team "definitely made progress during the year," he said, but added "It was not enough to win the Stanley Cup."

He's Not Overpowering But Dierker Does Job

MONTREAL (CP) — Right hander Larry Dierker admitted he did not have overpowering pitch, but what he had was good enough to take Montreal Expos to a 4-0 win over Montreal Expos Sunday.

"I didn't think I had any one pitch that was all that great," said Dierker after hurling a five-hitter for the Astros' fifth straight National League shutout of the season.

"But I had a good selection that I could move around. I just kept mixing them up and kept them off balance a little bit."

Roger Metzger led the eight-hit Astros offense, collecting three hits in four at-bats, including a home run in the ninth, lining and drive in three runs.

The Astros got the only run they needed in a wild Ken Crosby defeat a single to right field in the fourth inning to score Metzger, who had had off with a single.

Two runs came home in the fifth on a triple by Greg Gross and Jim Wynn. Gross's triple added three in the ninth when Gross singled to score Ken Boswell, who had walked, and Metzger followed with his homer.

Dierker, now 4-3, picked up his second complete game of the season. He got himself into an alert Houston infield that turned four double plays.

The Astros' starter Expos threat came in the first when, with one out, Tim Foli walked, bases on Tim Foli's walk, a groundout and a single by Dave Mangual and a walk to Mike Jorgensen.

"I was trying to be careful with Jorgensen because he's got his hits off me in the past," said Dierker. "I figured if I walked him I'd have a chance at a double play."

He got it, as Larry Biittner's grounded ball was scooped up by shortstop Metzger, who threw to Rob Andrews at second for the relay to first baseman Bob Watson.

Expos starter Dennis Blair, 1-4, took the loss, while reliever Don Dobbek pitched the last inning and gave up the final three runs.

Atlanta Braves open a four-game series at Jerry Park tonight, with Carlos Ruiz slated pitching against the Expos's Steve Rogers, 1-4.

Cards Weren't Looking They Were Swinging

Hands picked Pete Falcone thought St. Louis Cardinals would look at a few of his pitches first to see what he had.

The Cards immediately liked what he had and put the pitches all over the ballpark, and out of it, taking four runs in the first inning for a 4-3 National League baseball victory Sunday over San Francisco Giants.

"I started them off with fast balls," said the San Francisco rookie. "I should've started them off with the curve."

In Sunday's other National League games, Los Angeles Dodgers blanked Philadelphia Phillies 7-0, New York Mets beat Cincinnati Reds 3-2, Houston Astros defeated Montreal Expos 4-0, San Diego Padres edged Chicago Cubs 5-1 and Atlanta Braves beat Philadelphia Phillies 7-3.

Saturday the Expos beat Houston 5-7, Atlanta edged the Phillies 9-1, Cincinnati defeated New York 7-1, Los Angeles beat Pittsburgh 4-0, Chicago defeated San Diego 5-1 and St. Louis whipped the Giants 9-2.

Lee Brock said it didn't matter what Falcone threw. "I wasn't taking anything," he said. "Just threw it over the plate and I'll swing at it. I don't afford to be taking pitches."

His team's Falcone offering and put it into left field. Another, Then Ted Simmons doubled and Lou Melendez tripled to tie the score 3-3.

Ted Simmons then hit Falcone's full-count pitch into the seats for his fourth home run of the season.

Dodgers' pitcher Don Sutton limited the Pirates to seven harmless hits ... seventh victory of the season.

PETE FALCONE

The Dodgers got two runs in the fifth inning when Dave Lopes walked, Bill Buckner doubled and he came in on Ken Brett's wild pitch. Los Angeles added three in the sixth, two on Lopes' single.

Tom Seaver settled down after giving up a pair of first-inning runs and helped his cause at the plate. He singled in the six-game hitting streak.

Rusty Staub's single in the eighth delivered the tie-breaking run.

Singles by Mike Phillips and Dal Maxvill sandwiched Gene Tenace's sacrifice fly gave the Cardinals the winning run.

Jack Billingham and Sandy Vance combined for the Giants' six hits.

Brazil Tops Canada 73-68

RIO DE JANEIRO (Santos-CP) — Brazil defeated Canada 73-68 Sunday in a second-round game in an international basketball tournament.

Argentina beat the United States 82-81 in another third-round game.

Canada, which finished in a fourth-place tie with Brazil in the first round of the tourney meet at Campinas, Brazil, has beaten Argentina 90-77 Saturday in its opening game in the second round.

Bill Robinson had 21 points, Larry Hansen 16 and Alec Devlin and Martin Riley 12 each for Canada against Argentina.

Bullets Get by Celtics And Move to Final

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

When Kevin Porter keeps his cool, he causes things but for the opposition.

The Frenchy, 11-inch dynamo had his temper and his game under control Sunday, and had Washington Bullets to a 98-92 win over Boston Celtics and a berth in the National Basketball Association final.

The win, Washington's 42nd in 82 home games this season, gave the Bullets the best-of-seven Eastern Conference title 4-3 against the defending champion Celtics.

"Kevin really took charge," said Porter's teammate, Elvin Hayes. "He's the real key to this ball club."

"He makes things happen and he makes us go. He proved it when down the stretch. It was a fine effort by the little fellow."

In addition to picking up 11 points in the final quarter to Hayes's 10, Porter contributed 13 of his 21 points in the final quarter to blunt a Boston comeback.

Washington will now have a week off before entertaining either Golden State Warriors or Chicago Bulls in the first game of the final next Sunday.

Golden State won 95-75 at Chicago Sunday, tying the Western Conference series 3-3, and now is favored to win the deciding game against the Bulls at Oakland.

The Celtics, who won 10 of 11 championship ending in 1969 and were rebuilt into a team a year ago, fought hard before relinquishing chance at repeating.

Flying Fists Bring Royals Fans to Life

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"It wasn't a full-fledged free-for-all in the best baseball tradition, but for a lazy afternoon in Kansas City it wasn't bad.

The Royals were coasting 4-0 behind Steve Busby, Milwaukee was trying mench of a comeback, attendance and the 11,183 fans scattered around Royals Stadium were sitting pawns.

Then Kansas City's George Brett and Milwaukee's Kurt Bevacqua decided to liven up with some fisticuffs in the seventh inning. Brett traversed into one and trying to break up a double play, both players came up swinging and the crowd had something to yell about.

"Brett grabbed my leg and tripped me, and I turned around and hit him," said Bevacqua, the Brewers' second baseman. "That's the right thing to do, isn't it?"

"He's known as a dirty ballplayer," countered Brett. "I just wanted to break up the double play. We were both on the ground and he put a knee in my chest.

"I hauled off and slugged him."

Both benches and bullpens emptied, but Brett to get a better look. No one else threw a punch. Brewers and Brett were ejected and everyone settled back to watch Busby finish off his five-hit, 4-0 victory.

Elsewhere in Sunday's American League action, Oakland A's beat New York Mets 7-5, Texas Rangers outlasted Detroit Tigers 11-7, Boston Red Sox defeated California Angels 5-2 and Cleveland Indians beat Chicago White Sox 4-2 in 11 innings. Minnesota Twins and Baltimore Orioles split a double, the Twins taking the opener 4-6 and the Orioles the nightcap 9-3.

On Saturday, Baltimore beat Minnesota 8-6, Texas defeated Detroit 5-3, New York Yankees blanked Oakland 3-0, Chicago defeated Cleveland 8-3, Milwaukee shut out Kansas City 3-0 and California beat Boston 3-4.

Busby struck out nine batters and walked just two en route to his fifth victory against two losses. Brett, Cesar Rojas, Frank White and Jim Wohlford chew collected run-scoring single.

Jeff Burroughs and Leo Cardenas hit two-run homers and Tom Grieve and Roy Smalley added solo shots for Texas in a game marred by missed fly balls as well as other errors that don't show up in the box score. Fergusson Jenkins was his fifth straight game but left after the fifth in favor of Steve Rodi drove in three runs for Oakland with a homer and single. Gene Tenace had a two-run homer for New York.

Steve Braun's two-run double was the big blow in a four-run rally in the fifth that carried Brewers to victory in the opener against Baltimore. Rod Carew and Tony Oliva singled in the other two runs in the inning. Bert Blyleven gave up six hits en route to his fourth win in five decisions.

The Orioles rallied in the nightcap behind the hitting of Bobby Grich and Tommy Davis. Grich hit a pair of solo home runs and Davis went 3-for-4 with four runs batted in. Jim Palmer, 3-2, was 9 and Mike Parik, making his major league debut, 1-4.

Rico Petrocelli and Rick Burleson hit two-run singles as Boston made it seven wins in the last eight games and climbed to within one game of first-place Milwaukee in the East Division. Jim Rice added a solo home run for Boston and Bill Lee went the distance after a rough start.

Cleveland's Tom McCraw got an infield single to drive in the tying run with two out in the bottom of the 11th and John Ellis scored the winner on a game-winner on throwing errors by Terry Forster and Bob Coluccio.

Familiar Spot For A. J. Foyt

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A. J. Foyt will lead the Indianapolis 500 field for a record-tying fourth time May 25, but again faces stiff competition from Bobby Unser, winner at the back of the 33-car pack.

Foyt, with a late afternoon effort Sunday, smashed the track record for speed set by Mario Andretti, former Indy 500 winner, through Fri. 30 laps, the Texan had lifted his average to 193.976 miles an hour, with a top lap of 195.940 mph. Only four late pun Moyer, who never has qualified for the Indy 500, had a starting position in the event.

The list of speedsters that failed to the rear of the field included Andretti, the first Foyt of qualifying for one hundred another, Gordon Johncock, Al Unser, Jerry Grant, Tony Hulman, Bill McCosby, Steve Krisiloff and Merle Anstell.

Bush hopes for the same luck Bill Vukovich had when he drove to victory in 1953 and 1954. Only four of the 33-car field qualified at speeds of more than 190 mph. Bush, who never has charmed so many fans, is starting positions

BRAND NEW ONLY $34,900.. URBAN

We have a limited number of lots within the city where we can erect these fine brick bungalow homes at only $34,900.00. The down payment would be less than $2,000.00 and if it's your first home, you would get the entire amount returned in grants from the Government. These will be sold on a first come first sold basis, so call early and get the best choice.

10% MORTGAGE AND $2,000.00 GRANT

is a combination pretty hard to beat in today's market. We have two houses in the East end, each of which offers just such a combination. You could move in at once. Everything is done — even the lawns are seeded.

INVEST WITH NO CASH

and make several thousands in a couple of years. Sound impossible? Not so! You can let the Government give you a down payment on a new Townhouse. Live in it for a couple years and sell at a profit. Ask us about this. Investment in a couple of years ago. Many have made large profits. You can too! You never get another opportunity like this!

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Tuesday, May 13, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Someone you'll be dealing with today will anger you. You'll keep it to yourself and smolder rather than let him know.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't let a disagreement with your pal over something material jeopardize a friendship. Take the loss if necessary.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If the boss gives you a specific order today, follow it to the letter or you're sure to incur his wrath.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Keep your feelings to yourself if you meet something that does not involve you directly, but does affect a sensitive pal.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Someone who doesn't operate completely in the open will set some stumbling blocks in your path today. However, don't let him know you're on to him.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Diplomacy and tact are called for in an important career matter or you will anger one whose cooperation is essential now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Don't take something for repair or service to one you've had problems with before. Find someone more reliable.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You tend to be a bit too pessimistic today. Don't let this unusually irritated with. Loosen the reins or you'll anger him.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Try to see and understand your mate's point of view on a vital family issue that is looking very stormy ahead.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't let yourself be rushed with tasks requiring tools today. What you don't finish can be completed later.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This is one of those days where you won't be as prudent with your resources as you should. Some loss is likely.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) The example you set for your family today is the one they'll follow. If you're cranky and short-tempered, expect the same from them.

Ten Hostages Unharmed

Montreal Police Hold 34 After United Aircraft Plant Riot

MONTREAL (CP) — Police held 34 men today in the aftermath of a violent confrontation between riot police and union demonstrators at the strike-bound United Aircraft of Canada Ltd., plant in suburban Longueuil.

About 120 police stormed into the No. 2 plant at 2.30 a.m. EDT today after 30 workers had occupied the building for four hours with 10 hostages and demanded an immediate settlement to the 16-month labor dispute.

Within several minutes of the police charge, the hostages, including a radio reporter, had been released unharmed and a number of the protesters had been injured.

Police would not give exact details on injuries, arrests or the extent of property damage but the men still being held this morning were expected to appear in court later in the day.

Six police vehicles were overturned, some were burned, and more than 40 cars in the company parking lot were damaged.

Sections of the factory unaffected by the demonstration were operating today but Raymond L'Heureux Marcel Rebelais, who surveyed the inside of No. 2 plant after the occupation ended, said "everything is smashed."

A company spokesman said assessment would take time but that he would be surprised if it reached "several hundred dollars, as some reports say."

Those injured during the demonstration included three Longueuil policemen, including one who was smashed across the back with a shovel, and a number of the protesters hurt when the riot police attacked.

The 30 workers who took over the plant at one point threatened to "bust everything" unless the strike was settled without delay.

The occupiers refused entry to an executive member of the demonstrating union, the United Auto Workers and said the 10 hostages, except for radio reporter Jose Ledoux, tied up.

Mr. Ledoux, reported resting today at his radio station offices, said earlier that workers had made an attempt to surrender before the police moved in and reported that there was "total carnage" when the assault began.

"There are people here writhing in pain, people with broken necks, people with broken arms and left there," he said over radio from the plant.

The men said they were ready to surrender when police broke in. The riot squad just rushed in and started beating people bloodly."

The violence started about 8 a.m. EDT Monday following a Quebec Federation of Labor (QFL) meeting to protest recommendations of the Clark Commission report, aimed at bringing peace to the troubled construction industry.

Several hundred workers poured out of the meeting hall and marched to the plant where United plant and began pelting the plant's police guard with stones and attacking with lead pipes.

Provincial and municipal riot-squad police used tear gas and nightsticks to restore order, but during the fray, some 50 demonstrators gained entrance to the plant.

The strike at United Aircraft, now officially named Pratt and Whitney Aircraft of Canada Ltd., has been one of the most bitter labor conflicts in Quebec history, characterized by violence and vigorous charges of settlement that usually ended in chaos and frustration.

Cambodia Seizes U.S. Ship

U.S. Sends Marines But Thailand Balks

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States will fly about 1,000 marines to Thailand in the crisis over Cambodia's seizure of a U.S. cargo ship, Pentagon sources reported today.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Kukrit Pramoj said in Bangkok the U.S. will not be allowed to use its bases in Thailand too wage war on neighboring Cambodia.

Kukrit also said he informed Edward Masters, U.S. charge d'affaires in Bangkok, his government would not allow U-Tapao air base on the Gulf of Thailand to be used for any purpose connected with the recovery of the container vessel Mayagues.

He said Thailand would not get involved, even as a third country seeking a diplomatic solution to the issue.

The Pentagon sources said the marines would be flown from Okinawa in the U.S. air base at Utapo in southern Thailand.

There was no immediate word about what use would be made of the marines once they reached Thailand; but the move apparently was designed to back up President Ford's warning of possible "serious consequences" if the new Cambodian government does not release the merchant ship Mayagues and its crew.

The White House said, meanwhile, the Mayagues, seized Monday about eight miles from a small island in the Gulf of Thailand, had been moved to the island of Koh-tang, 30 miles from the mainland, under tender escort of two Cambodian gunboats.

The U.S. was working through intermediary countries to obtain release of the merchant ship, but also was preparing a number of military options.

Marines might be flown by helicopter or carried by amphibious ship to the vicinity of the island, if Thailand agrees and Ford should decide to commit them in some effort to retake the Mayagues.

A number of U.S. 7th Fleet ships were steaming from the South China Sea area toward the Gulf of Thailand, but they were given no orders to act beyond that.

Just after dawn, a White House spokesman said U.S. military planes were begging the captors to make their escape.

Some administration sources said the decision to use the military force to rescue the Mayagues and its 39 crew members will be complicated by this maneuver.

Can the U.S. afford the appearance of intervening in Southeast Asia following the collapse of American-backed governments in Cambodia and South Vietnam?

Former Defence lawyer Philip Boehen said neither of two laws restricting presidential use of military force would prevent Ford from calling on U.S. armed forces in this instance.

Warships from the U.S. 7th Fleet were reported to be moving toward the Gulf of Thailand where the unarmed Mayagues was fired upon and seized by a Cambodian gunboat Monday.

Jobless Number Cut Small

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment continued last month its highest rate for the last 14 years, Statistics Canada reported today.

The national unemployment rate, seasonally adjusted, was unchanged in April from the 7.2 per cent recorded in March, it is the highest jobless rate since June, 1961.

A total of 798,000 were without jobs in April, down from the 840,000 jobless a month earlier.

On a regional basis, the Atlantic provinces experienced some improvement in their jobless rates. However, the rate moved higher in some of the Prairie provinces. The rate was changed in Ontario and Quebec.

In Ontario, unemployment showed a nominal increase to 6.1 from 6.0 per cent in March. The jobless rate in Ontario now is the highest since April, 1961.

Quebec's nine-per-cent unemployment rate was unchanged from March. It is the worst for the province since late 1961 and compares with about a seven-per-cent rate at the start of the winter.

These figures all are adjusted for seasonal variations.

The actual unemployment rate last month was 8.1 per cent, compared with 8.6 per cent in March. The work force increased last month by about 18,000 persons, a sharp drop from the 73,000 per cent work force members a month earlier.

Man, 93, Dies in Fire While Crowd Watches

TORONTO (CP) — Hilda Arnold, 93, of Toronto sat helpless in her wheelchair Monday night as her 95-year-old invalid husband, Evlyn, burned to death.

Outside an apathetic crowd gathered at the couples' house went up in flames and only one person, a passing motorist, offered help.

David Duffie said he was driving by when he noticed flames coming from the house. A crowd was gathering on the sidewalk and he called for help as he tried to kick down the front door.

"I screamed for them to help," he said afterwards. "I kicked and kicked. Nobody moved, nobody did anything."

Mr. Duffie finally managed to break down the door after about three or four minutes delay and found Mrs. Arnold sitting in her wheelchair in the hall. By then a volunteer fire department crew, called, arrived on the scene and the two men carried the women to safety.

But it was too late for Mr. Arnold who was farther back in the house and engulfed by flames.

"It was the most horrible thing I've ever seen," Mr. Duffie said. "There wasn't a damn thing I could do.

Neighbors said the couple were both paralyzed in a car accident four or five years ago.

Dockers on Job But Builders Idle

MONTREAL (CP) — Activity on three major St. Lawrence River ports resumed today after longshoremen returned to their jobs, ending a six-week strike.

Activity at the east-end 1976 Olympic Games site, however, remained at a standstill as construction workers stayed off the job at the site as well as at several other job sites in the Montreal area.

About 1,000 longshoremen decided Monday to go back to work. The 5,000 construction workers, about 1,700 of whom work on the Olympic site, walked off their jobs May 4.

The dock workers returned to their jobs following a Quebec Superior Courtsuing during the weekend that had back-work legislation by the federal government was not unconstitutional.

Employers said workers at Montreal, Quebec City and Trois-Rivieres made duty calls to dispatch offices Monday night and operations began to return to normal as ships moved into docking areas today.

Alleyways Get Paint Job

Alleyways leading from Front Street to riverside parking lots got a face lift Monday — a joint effort of the Downtown Business Association and the Board of Downtown Management. Gerry O'Shaughnessy, president of the downtowners, called the alleys an "eyesore" in their former state and added a paint job and lighting will make them safer for pedestrian traffic. Handling the paint job is Porco Pasquale.

Council's Pay Raise Raises Questions

When Vote Isn't Recorded Who Knows What Happened?

By MAURICE SWITZER
Managing Editor

When is a vote not a vote?

Apparently, when it's not recorded.

When Belleville city council voted community a $1,000 increase to their annual $3,000 honorarium, at Friday's budget meeting. The Intelligencer was left with the impression that Ald. Brian Knudsen, who spoke against the raise, was the sole dissenter.

Monday morning, Ald. Wally Dever telephoned the newspaper to say he also voted against the increase.

With doubts now raised about the actual outcome of Friday's unrecorded vote, The Intelligencer decided to poll the remaining councillors.

Ald. Jack Ireland said by telephone he voted against the 25 per cent increase.

Ald. Fred Rummell said he was for it, count at the time of the vote, but if he had been in council chambers "probably wouldn't have supported it."

Ald. Jean Smith said: "I probably put my hand up, but I'm not sure."

Councillors Art Keegan, Sho Mooka, Ben Corkit, Joe Cox and George Zegouras remained firm in their support of the $1,000 raise. Aldermen Keegan and Mooka say they don't remember anyone but Ald. Knudsen voting against it.

Now, some people are just trying to be political," observed Ald. Cox. "But I'm not backing down from my original position.

"In asking at council across the province, we were below 90 per cent of them.

"I think the increase was justified. I spend about 30 or 35 hours a week on council business."

City clerk Earl Dafoe said today the $1,000 increase must be approved in bylaw form.

Right of Teachers To Speak Defended

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

Belleville trustee Richard Williams Monday night defended the right of teachers to speak their minds — especially in letters to the editor.

Mr. Williams, a teacher himself at Loyalist College, took exception to a May 7 letter to the editor by city alderman Arthur Keegan who criticized a group of teachers for expressing their opinion on communism in a previous letter.

"I was surprised by the letter from Mr. Keegan," said Mr. Williams. "free expression is the greatest worth in this country."

Mr. Williams said he would be more concerned if there was an effort to stifle the opinion of teachers.

In the letter Mr. Keegan accused the teachers of having sympathy with communism and suggested they were "brainwashing our children to become Viet Cong in Canada."

The seven secondary school teachers, in their April 30 letter took The Intelligencer's editorial writer to task over recent editorials about communism.

Review Requested

Closed Meetings May Be Dropped

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

The Hastings County Board of Education may take a second look at its policy on closed meetings as it relates to the new Education Act.

Belleville trustee Eloise Burr gave notice of motion Monday night asking for the bylaw and policy committee to consider the board's current policy as it pertains to "the spirit and letter of law" in the Education Act.

The new act virtually opens all previously closed meetings of boards of education to the whole and committee meetings. Under previous laws, the section of the act intends that most of these closed meetings be open to the public except when the board deems it necessary to go behind closed doors.

The board's current bylaw prohibits the public or the press from attending the committee of the whole and the committee meetings; in the past the board has maintained its policy does not contravene the Education Act.

The board has traditionally restricted matters of personnel and finance to the closed sessions. Many trustees claim they would lose their freedom of expression if the closed meetings were opened.

Marmora Hard Pressed To Meet Levy Increase

By RUBY McCOY
Staff Correspondent

MARMORA — This village's share of the Hastings County $7.28 million budget for 1975 will be 13.5-percent higher than in the Hastings County Board of Education tax levy, if it gets "its going to impose a great burden on our municipality and taxpayers," says Jack Reynolds, village reeve.

"The consensus of county council is that the large increase is regrettable," he told village councillors recently. "But we are just going to have to live with it."

He said he understands Deloro village intends to appeal their 68 per cent increase but doubted if the appeal will be successful because the estimates are based on a factor established by the municipal government and there has been no indication that the factors will be changed.

William Shannon, village clerk-treasurer, reported the county demand for Marmora amounts to $92, $28.51 an increase of $26,005. This is almost double last year's, he noted.

The Municipality will pay a levy of $12,893 for elementary and $38,157 for secondary education.

Crews Finally Patch Water System Leaks

MARMORA — This village's head water tank is full again — finally.

Troubleshoots in Marmora's water system were located and repaired last week, making it possible for the storage tank to refill to the brim and the pumping station to resume its regular rate of processing for the first time since October.

Two to the leaks were found in the business section on Forsyth St. and Main St. The provincial ministry of environment work crew will return to the village to continue checking on the water lines with their listening devices in case there are other leaks.

Deputy — Reeve Grant Aitkenhead and Bert Dyer worked with ministry officials and village workmen for several hours following the last council meeting to help track down the leaks which were responsible for the loss of thousands of gallons of water.

140 Confirmed At Service

By RICK NELSON
Staff Correspondent

WELLINGTON — Fifteen people were confirmed Sunday by the St. Rev. Henry Hill when he paid his first visit to St. Andrew's Anglican Church as Bishop. He also performed his first confirmation since his enthronement May 8, 1975.

Over 140 people from all the congregation of the Parish of Kente came to welcome Bishop Hill to St. Andrew's Church.

Bishop Hill has held his post since January but had just recently been consecrated officially allowed to conduct services in his own diocese as Bishop.

Before Bishop Hill confirmed the candidates, he told them they were making one of the biggest decisions of their lives, in making their vows to the church. "It's hard to be a Christian. To be one, you must be one. It's easy to say, don't like to do and put up with what other people think or say about you."

After the prayers, the candidates were confirmed by Bishop Hill and then took part in their first communion.

The candidates were as follows: Sharon Bonnie Best, Lisa Mary Bower, Melanie Jean Clarke, Heather Elaine Clarke, Kimberly Helen Dobson, Theresa Lynn Flynn, Gladys Bonnie Lenia Smith, Rhonda Jane Hodgson, John William Brakelond, Christopher Richard Hills, Andrew Dale Margetson, Ernest Allan Margetson, John Paul Margetson, David William Nelson, Jack Sherwin Thompson.

A reception in the parish hall at St. Andrews followed the service.

Trenton

Budget Highlights

No Cleanup This Year

TRENTON — The annual spring clean-up of wastes will definitely not take place this year, Council said $18,000 for the clean-up campaign from its 1975- budget despite earlier indications that it might reverse a previous decision to axe the program.

Grant Request Slashed

TRENTON — The Trenton Chamber of Commerce request for an $8,000 grant to offset mounting operating expenses and a 1974 deficit was only partially filled as council skayed only $5,000 to the group. The grant marks an increase of a $1,000 over what was given the Chamber in 1974.

Some Costs Down

TRENTON — Clerk and treasurer Lorne Hutchinson's administrative costs have dropped by $5,444 in Trenton's estimated 1975 budget. Accounting for the decrease in spending are a drop in office equipment expenditures, consultant fees and other office expenses (this being an off year).

Turkeys Cost More

TRENTON — Town council will spend $600 in 1975 for a staff Christmas party and gifts of turkeys. The expenditure is $100 more than allotted last year and $55.63 than was actually spent.

Prisoners Costly

TRENTON — The major cost of prisoners by the Trenton police department is the incarceration of prisoners to the Quinte Regional Detention Centre in Napanee. Transportation accounts for $22,826 of the $34,878 total. Meals and medical examinations make up the rest.

Fees to Bring in $3,000

TRENTON — Council expects to raise an estimated $3,000 in 1975 through issuance of bicycle, tent and dog licences. This is an increase over last year. Last year, the town had estimated $2,000 would be raised and fell below budget by $1,761.

Snow Removal Increased

TRENTON — Trenton has increased its allocation for snow removal expenses by 13 per cent to $78,000 this year.

Funding Examined

Mount Evergreen Cemetery, The Trenton Figure Skating Club, the Canadian Hemophilia Society and Grace St. United Church day care centre will receive no outright grants from Trenton Town Council this year.

Only the Association for Retarded Children received an increase in their 1975 grant, from $662 to $1,654. The Victorian Order of Nurses will receive $200 less than the $3,000 in 1974. The Highlands of Hastings Tourist Association gets $300 from the $1,000 grant created to cover say-time grant requests from Quinte groups.

Fatal Car Occupants Identified

NAPANEE — The Napanee detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police today released the names of the occupants of a car that struck and killed a Kingston woman and injured her two children Sunday as they walked near the ferry at Adolphustown.

Driver of the car was Robert by Vanneste, 28, of 17 North Elm Dr., Trenton, who is reported in serious condition in Belleville General Hospital with internal injuries.

Also in hospital are his passengers, Lewis Smith, 45, of 43 North Murray St., Trenton. Smith is reported in satisfactory condition with a broken leg and finger injuries and Ray Simpson, 46, 2 Cedar St., Trenton. Simpson remains in serious condition with a broken hip, knee, leg and ankle.

The men were riding in a car that struck and killed Carol Schumacher, 29, of Kingston and injured her children, Albert, 4, and Robin, 4, as they walked their dog at the ferry landing Sunday afternoon. Albert is listed in critical condition and Robin is satisfactory.

A spokesman for the Napanee OPP said today investigation of the incident continues.

Enjoying the View

Members of the Kingston Field Naturalists enjoy an outing and opportunity to study migrating birds at Prince Edward Point. The club has leased an old lighthouse on the point and renamed it the Prince Edward Point Observatory. It is an ideal vantage point for bird-watchers.

Spring Thing Begins

Shire Hall, a Picton landmark, this week will receive a paint job to brighten entrance pillars,eaves and window trim. The gracious brick building on Main Street houses the offices of the county clerk, the director of economic development and the county engineer. In addition, provincial court is held there. Workmen now are scraping wooden trim in preparation for painting.

Lack of Land Factor In Plant Site Switch

TRENTON — Trenton's lack of large-size areas of serviced industrial land is blamed by town clerk Aubrey Sharp for the loss of new $25-million Fabricon Manufacturing Co. plant to Belleville.

The cable and wire manufacturer announced Sunday that it will build a 150,000-square-foot plant in Belleville's northeast industrial park.

It will locate on 30 acres and is expected to employ about 200 when it swings into production in spring 1976.

Mr. Sharp commented on Fabricon's announcement Monday after release of a report claiming Trenton's talks with representatives of the Fabricon plant located here.

Trenton's plant employs about 140 in its 112,000-square-foot plant on Creswell Dr.

"It boils down to the fact that we don't have sufficient serviced land to accommodate an industry of their size," said Mr. Sharp. "I feel bad about it leaving. But at the same time, you can't do the impossible."

Small parcels of industrial land are spotted in various parts of Trenton, but none were large enough to house the industry. About 35 acres north of Highway 401 is unusable by Fabricon because railway lines cannot be strung across the highway.

Mr. Sharp's report outlined repeated attempts by the town at change the zoning of the F. W. Cox building on 20.9 acres of CN Railway-owned land north of FSH Foods Ltd. in southwest Trenton.

Two attempts to buy needed land from FSH Foods and Frozen Oats Co. met with failure. The town worked out a joint venture cost-sharing scheme with Murray after one parcel was called for location of part of the plant in the township.

During talks, land demands by Fabricon escalated from 15 to 40 acres, prompting Mr. Sharp to comment in his report that the company's proposal was backed "with uncertain facts and indefinite plans." Cost of the proposed plant grew from an initial estimate of $12 to $25-million.

Mr. Sharp said Fabricon opted not to locate here because the CNR site could not be serviced inexpensively with a railway link. The site, under negotiation since January, 1974, was also not served by high pressure natural gas pipeline.

Clinching the refusal were sell tests that revealed the land was swampy in some places and rocky in others.

Mayor Bob Patrick said Monday he was disappointed in the company's decision to locate in Belleville, but it was "good to still have it in the neighborhood."

Trenton, he said, made every effort and "bent over back words" to have the plant settle here.

With the construction of new Fabricon facilities in Belleville, the future of the plant in Trenton is up in the air.

Plant general manager Hans Allmendinger has said the possibility exists that the plant here could be come warehouse space as present employees are moved to Belleville to fill production lines there.

He has said he hopes Fabricon, in Trenton will not be phased out but the future depends on market conditions in the next two years.

Fabricon, which had planned to employ up to 800 in Trenton about seven years after production started, is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Felten and Guilleaume AG, a West German company.

Arena Studied

MARMORA — The six-man committee charged with finding a solution to the now-closed Marmora Arena will present its recommendations at a joint meeting of the councils of Deloro and Marmora village and Marmora and Lake Townships Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

Gordon Bennett, committee chairman, says there is an animous agreement among his members on the proposal to be presented.

He explains the committee does not wish to disclose the nature of the recommendation before the meeting.

Bishop Visits

Rt. Rev. Henry Hill (left) with St. Andrew's rector David Hawkins greets congregation after the service that saw 15 people confirmed by the bishop. Over 140 people from all of the parish of Kente came to welcome Bishop Hill.

District at a Glance

Dogs Attend Class

EAST LAKE — Although it's almost "school out" for campers in Prince Edward, classes are just beginning this month for local canines.

Denco Kennels at East Lake opened dog obedience classes May 12 with instructors Karen Sorenson and Joanne Dunkley.

The classes are open to all interested dog owners and are planned to transform rambunctious pets into well-mannered companions.

Recital Planned

WELLINGTON — A piano and organ recital will be presented at Wellington United Church Friday, May 16 at 8 p.m. Selections will be played by pupils of Miss Pauline Woodcock, William Maddox and Warren McPaul.

Special Service June 1

PICTON — The annual memorial service at the Old White Chapel will be held Sunday, June 1, says Reverend Robert Sherwin of Picton United Church.

Built in 1829, the White Chapel was the first Methodist Church in Prince Edward County and one of the earliest in Upper Canada. It has been maintained as a place of worship longer than any other church of Methodist origin in Ontario.

ARC Opens Doors

PICTON — The Circus comes to town tonight (Tuesday) with the arrival of the Royal Brothers big top at the Picton fairgrounds.

Show times for the 15-act performance are at 4 and 8 p.m.

Circus Opens in Picton

PICTON — An open house will be held by ARC Industries Wednesday, May 14 at the Sky Industrial Park from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. and from 7 to 9 p.m.

ARC Industries provides jobs and job training and undertakes work which is not normally profitable to industry.

Quinte Dancers Begin European Exhibition

PICTON — The County Whirlers, a Prince Edward square dance club, this week will swing their partners to Switzerland.

In a European tour organized by Lucille and Ernie Denny of Trenton 26 couples from Prince Edward and 10 couples from the Trenton, Belleville, Frankford, Stirling and Napanee areas will dance in Switzerland, France, Austria and Germany. Mr. Dempster is the caller for the square dance club which meets regularly Monday nights and has provided numerous exhibition performances locally.

The European tour which started Sunday when club members flew Air Canada from Toronto to Switzerland will last for two weeks.

The club plans to enjoy sightseeing and shopping excursions in Europe and tours of scenic spots such as the Black Forest, and the Rhine River.

A highlight of the trip will be a square dance at a German air base where the County Whirlers will demonstrate their talent.

Mother's Day Marked

TWEED — Between 700 and 800 people participated in a Mother's Day reunion celebration at St. John's United Church in this village Sunday.

The event, which was interdenominational, featured a scripture reading, hymn singing, entertainment and the serving of food.

The interest was not confined to the Tweed area. Even former village residents from Oshawa, Ottawa, Richmond Hill and Toronto attended.

C. C. (Bud) Hubbs, president of Monroe Car Association of Canada and a Tweed area resident, read the scripture. Carol Barber of Prince Edward County was a soloist.

REAL ESTATE:
HOUSE VALUE
vs.
LOT VALUE

Mr. McCormick
A. E. McCormick Realty Ltd.

What is the proper relationship between the cost of a lot and the value of the house on it? The question concerned building economists more in the past than it does now. Old rules of thumb have just much of their meaning. It used to be said that land should represent about one-sixth of the house's purchase price. Then it moved up to one-fifth and is now one-fourth or more. And it will change again as the cost of land continues to rise.

Nevertheless, the land value versus house value ratio cannot be totally dismissed because it does, in some cases, affect the resale value of the property. And resale value determines the ease or difficulty you'll encounter in securing a mortgage. In this light, it may not make a great deal of difference if you put an inexpensive house on an expensive lot, but it could be a mistake to have too much house for the land.

Appointment of William J. Pardy as a group vice-president of Northern Electric responsible for the cable, transmission and outside plant divisions of the company is announced by Walter F. Light, president of the company. He succeeds Kenneth H. Woodley, who has been named group vice-president responsible for subscriber equipment, which includes station apparatus, subscriber switching and repair and overhaul.

Both Mr. Pardy and Mr. Woodley have held a number of senior management positions with Northern Electric.

Trudeau's Two Cadillacs Might Seem Superfluous to Many Taxpayers

By RICHARD JACKSON
OTTAWA — Okay, so you accuse my house that Pierre Trudeau is not the biggest spending Canadian Prime Minister ever?

Conspicuous frenzy and ostentatious lifestyle are here on display — flamed, almost for all to see.

He makes no attempt to conceal his dedication to the Good Life.

The very audacity of the scale of his lavishness — the sheer expense — may fascinate or infuriate the hard-pressed taxpayer in these frighteningly inflationary times.

Opposition parliamentarians — Conservatives; New Democrats and Social Crediters — rail about it, but it has become such old hat that few listen any more to the speeches.

Speak of the Prime Minister's lifestyle and a dozen images flash across the mind's eye:

. . . An $83,237 silver Cadillac with a $75,000 black Caddy already in the garage.

. . . Hundreds of thousands of dollars spent on his official residence and redecorating and refurnishing his two official and two National Capital residences.

. . . More than $1 million for a personal staff of about 100 people.

. . . From an Arab king, gifts of expensive cameras.

. . . A $20,000 Asian holiday for his wife from a Hong Kong shipping magnate.

. . . The $300,000-plus swimming pool.

. . . For personal jaunting and election campaigning, exploitation of Department of Transport jets.

. . . More holidays, with government aircraft, than any other Prime Minister ever dreamed of enjoying.

. . . and there's more, more, more.

But the thing that really seems to fascinate Canadians who pay — that's you — is the purchase of the second Caddy when one already was provided.

Under pressure from the Opposition, the Government has come through with all you probably ever wanted to know about the two Cadillac limousines.

Item: The old black Caddy, a 1973 model, had 19,330 on its odometer when the $83,236.94 was laid out for the new 1974 silver grey job.

Item: The black limo wasn't obsolete and remains in use for hauling of visiting VIPs.

Item: The second Caddy was needed for two reasons. 1. When the first was being used by VIPs, what was the Prime Minister to use? An RCMP cruiser? A Defence Department armoured car? And 2. It was handy to be have 2 limos so that the one being used to transport one being used to transport VIPs could be moved quickly from city to city without inconvenicing the guest with unnecessary confusion and delay.

Item: If there was only one Caddy, and it was required at separate locations simultaneously — by the PM in one place and a VIP in another — and an incident occurred, there would have been serious repercussions for the Government.

Those, then, are the points the Government makes to establish the case for the $169,590 worth of armour-plated Cadillacs, each with bullet-proof glass and tires.

So what do you get for $83,236.94 when you shop for a silver-gray armored Caddy guzzling a gallon of gas every eight miles?

KNOWN AS TAKING THE BULL BY THE HORNS

Air conditioning, of course. Power door locks.

A light monitoring system. Opera lamps.

Tilt and telescopic steering wheel.

Front and rear AM-FM stereo signal-seeking radio with controls in rear compartment.

Power antenna in the right front fender "as close as possible to the windshield."

Black leather in front compartment (for driver and general bodyguard) and 75% Medici blue in the passenger area.

Fire extinguisher.

Interior compartment, of course, but available to anyone who wants to lay out the $83,236 plus.

Then add $79,117.00 for what the RCMP describes in addition to the armour plate and bullet-proof (tires and glass) secret "special security equipment of which specifications for security reasons may not be provided."

The limo was built by GM at its Oshawa plant, seats five, and was secured directly from the factory with no dealer — and so, by commission — involved.

No other Prime Minister before Pierre Trudeau had one, never mind a pair of them. They made do with Chevs and Buicks, one chauffeur, no bodyguards and an RCMP cruiser tailing aft.

Life for Prime Ministers, even only seven years ago, was less luxurious, complicated, and probably, dangerous.

EMO Leaves Gap

What exactly does the provincial government have in mind to take the place of the Emergency Measures Organization?

There have been some vague announcements that any trouble would be handled by various government departments.

Yet if a disaster struck in Belleville tomorrow it would surely have to be the EMO, for all its impending phase-out, that would have to respond.

The fall of 1973 issue of EMO National Digest — a then distinctive-a-year publication of the Canada Emergency Measures Organization, Department of National Defence — contained an article by A. F. Wiggleswortb of the EMO in Nova Scotia.

Mr. Wiggleswortb had this to say: "Emergency Measures has been called, "government-speak" in a period of extraordinary emergency," but it is more than that. Local government forces do provide the core, but many non-governmental forces and groups must also be involved, and the operations of all these groups must be co-ordinated effectively."

The article stressed the need for an organization to be in a state of readiness for any such emergency. What then will take the place of the EMO? How can any sector of the bureaucracy in Toronto hope to take the place of an organization at the local or regional level, under a trained co-ordinator such as we have here in Angus Duffy?

Senator William Fulbright once made a statement that is singularly applicable to the situation of an EMO in limbo. It is one of the perversities of human nature," he said in part, "that people have a far greater capacity for enduring disasters than preventing them, even when the danger is plain and imminent."

What about it, Queen's Park?

Impossible Dream

A religious group has a pamphlet doing the rounds locally. It contains a mock-up of what might be termed "the impossible dream." That is, the front page of a journal called World News containing nothing but good news. No sin and no poverty, crime, food shortages. And into the bargain, peace reigns everywhere.

Quarter of Us Live in Poverty

Peterborough Examiner

The race for higher pay cheques by unionized workers these days is watched by a sullen populace, particularly by the more than one-quarter of Canada's population which lives below the poverty line.

Single people earning the minimum wage are being rapidly left behind by the surging strikers. The minimum wage amounts to $4,500 per year — enough to support one person, no more. The poverty line for a family of two is $5,620.

Plumbers Best Paid Tradesmen

Kingston Whig-Standard

Plumbers have ratified a two-year contract in London, Ont., which provides for an hourly rate of $12.22. The contract will make the 400 plumbers and pipefitters in that city the highest paid in their trade in Canada with weekly pay of $488 and annual income of more than $25,000.

Turner's Goal For Inflation Won't be Reached

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

John Turner's professed goal of an eight per cent annual inflation rate won't be reached this year.

Even if organized labor were to agree to the finance minister's suggested ceiling of a 12 per cent increase in wages—which, of course, it won't—there are too many other factors pushing prices up.

When these factors are combined with labor's unabated drive for still higher wage hikes, it appears that Canada will be lucky if the inflation rate doesn't exceed the recent level of 12 per cent.

Wage rates in new contract settlements in major Canadian industries so far this year have been rising by an average of 16 per cent. That's twice the going rate in the United States—and it means that American workers in more and more industries are falling behind parity with their Canadian counterparts.

In all probability, the Canadian domestic prices of petroleum products will be sharply in response to a crude-oil price hike on July 1 (with further increases coming at six and 12 months later).

These increases set off a cascade of further price rises in transportation and housing—gasoline, natural gas, electricity, transit fares, fuel oil, as well as a wide range of products for which oil products are recent on a small component of cost," says Jonathan Hoyle of Wood Gundy Securities Ltd., Toronto.

Just as pervasive is the cost of borrowed money. The early-1975 decline in interest rates has been reversed, and higher borrowing costs will be reflected in increased prices on a broad list of every-day goods and services.

Food prices—which contributed heavily to last year's rapid growth of inflation—are difficult to predict because of weather as well as other variables.

A survey of planting intentions has indicated that Canadian farmers plan to increase their grain acreage this year, but that acreages of wheat, barley, rapeseed and oats are expected will be lower than the targets suggested by the federal department of agriculture.

Good growing weather could bring down the prices of meat, poultry, eggs, fruit, vegetables and cereals — but another bad season could create shortages and send prices soaring.

Keegan's Claims Disputed

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

I would think that Alderman Keegan would do more research on his subject, rather than strike out blindly at a group of secondary school teachers who expressed a valid opinion about Communism.

As Mr. Keegan said, they are entitled to their beliefs. But it is apparent that Mr. Keegan has not been in a high school classroom for many years. If he had been, he would realize that teachers ( not all ) are "brainwash" students about Communism and anti-Communism. Nor do they use for teaching aids the "brainwashing" material mentioned in the original editorial. I thought the term "brainwash" had been dead for some time, but, apparently Mr. Keegan has decided to revive it. It is a term usually used by Communists.

The students Mr. Keegan mentions are not fools. Let us be clear, if he feels they could become Communist because of their teachers' beliefs that there is not a simple solution to the problems of society and that in some way our own democratic society must take responsibility for such as ghetos, pornographic books, V.D., drugs and outdoor relief.

Students today are more independent, open-minded, and able to think for themselves than were students 20 years ago. Surely, if students are to become well-rounded, knowledgeable adults, they must have knowledge of all political systems. Perhaps if the Communism that we would be fighting for the right to have systems other than our own.

Yesterday, the Public School Board that should be alerted. Mr. Keegan's letter is needed to be more informed. Maybe his knowledge of student behavior and intelligence, would be increased.

High school student.

Most Asian 'Client States' Phase Out American Influence

By JOHN D. HARRION
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

"Client states" is a precise term probably created by an American political scientist which means what it says. These are nations who are clients of arms, aid and assistance from one of the world's super-powers.

It is now being used in reference to South Vietnam, until April 30, a client state of the United States and now presumably of Communist China. In terms of the weapons used in the Viet Cong and North Viet. namese, which at the end were substantial, South Vietnam might be a client state of the Soviet Union.

The remaining American client states in Southeast Asia want to get out of that relationship as soon as they can with the change in the order of political power in Indochina.

Thailand which is neighbor to the new Marxist regime in Cambodia, was a major American base during the Vietnam war with airfields and military establishments throughout the country.

The fact that government has informed Washington all U.S. troops and equipment must be out of the country by next summer. And U.S. troops withdrawn will have already commenced.

South Korea, another U.S. client state, contains about 30,000 American troops, some of them stationed along the possibility of another invasion from the north like the one which started the Korean war June 25, 1950.

But South Korea's economic recovery was largely a result of huge inputs of U.S. funds and branch plant operations. Like Thailand, another American client state in Southeast Asia, South Korean prosperity would not have been possible without a major American investment.

The Philippine republic, closer to the United States than all the others because it was once American territory, also wants the American bases withdrawn and U.S. withdrawal from naval bases maintained by America since the days of the Spanish-American War.

Only Taiwan among the remaining Asian nations, relying on U.S. economic and military power for sustenance, does not want to change its status. If anything, its position might have been strengthened if the Vietnamese defeat with Taiwanese emphasis on the basic nature of the island nation against Asian communism.

There are also the client states of the major Communist powers as well. North Vietnam, North Korea and now Cambodia being the chief. And in their cases, it is hard to say which large Communist nation, China or Russia has the major role.

The expression has been given wider use than that by non-academics, usually military specialists and worried politicians who see Communist influences spreading even further through techniques of great power and military influence.

Therefore the neo-Marxist republic of Guinea in Africa as well as Egypt are "client states" not directly controlled by Russia or China but helpless without support. And in Guinea's case, militarily without Russian assistance.

NDP Deserves Credit For Pollution Fight

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — The government's new provincial protection of workers in mines from environmental disease must be regarded as creditable and progressive.

Also major.

In the first instance the program only applies to miners in Elliot Lake and Bancroft.

It will move workers with advanced silicosis out of the mines and give them rehabilitation and permanent financial benefits, then it will be applied to miners showing early stages of infection from silicosis.

But assurances have been given that the program will be extended to cover other miners and other contaminants and there is no doubt that eventually, and probably fairly soon, it will apply to all industry.

Credit for this advance in our social atmosphere goes to the NDP and its predecessor, the CCF.

The party has been drawing attention to the need for this question of industrial pollution for years.

As long as 30 years ago Robert Carlin, the CCF member the later turned Labor Progressive, was campaigning strongly in the house about conditions in the mines and smelters in his home riding of Sudbury.

And since then the question has been the focus of main attention of the two parties.

Traditionally, the correctness of the move has been given in the NDP and not been criticized by industry.

Or at least it hasn't at the public or writing level.

It is going to cost industry some money, both in capital outlays and in increased Workmen's Compensation Board assessments.

Only a few years ago the program probably would have met with some criticism and opposition.

But the reaction to the proposal was well by the more enlightened industry of today.

It also speaks well, of course, for the more advanced thinking of both the government and the Ontario Workmen's Compensation Board.

In all three ministries—health, labor and natural resources—plus the WCB, were people who, if not apparently were willingly so.

Pound's Big Plunge Sees It Dip 25 Per Cent Since 1971

By KEVIN BOYLE

LONDON (CP)—While the British pound moving dangerously close to a dizzying plunge in value on international exchanges, confusion is rampant about the real cause of it appearance of a vertiginous decline.

The overseas purchasing power of the pound, at times recently, has dropped more than 25 per cent from its level of December, 1971.

But unlike other periods when there has been a sterling crisis, newspapers, magazines and specialist journals carry out the barest reports of the problem instead of the lavish coverage and analysts they usually provide. Some simply acknowledge that they are baffled.

In financial circles, however, there is a lingering suspicion that the treasury and the Bank of England may have decided to refrain from supporting the pound as part of the strategy to convince Britons to vote for remaining in the European Common Market, when a referendum on the issue is held June 5.

The immediate cause of sterling's decline is that more institutions and individuals wish to sell it than wish to buy it.

But the question now puzzling analysts is why the current pressure on the pound seems to have developed so suddenly.

It is possible, of course, that large sterling holders, such as Arab oil states and multinational firms, are simply losing faith in the British economy and they wish to switch their wealth to the Deutsche-mark currencies of other countries.

But this alone would not explain why everyone chose to act at this time rather than months ago, when the economy was even weaker.

In the past, the government has said it does not want sterling to fall anywhere near a 10-per-cent drop in value. It has dictated it would prefer to hold the depreciation closer to 20 per cent.

The Bank of England exchange rate that it has frequently gone into the markets itself to buy sterling and bolster its strength at times when it has shown signs of weakness in the past.

So the question now being asked is why the bank isn't doing that this again. Britain has the fiscal reserves of foreign currency equal to about $7 billion with which to buy pounds if it wishes.

If the kind of suspension of the Bank's normal market intervention is the real cause of sterling's fall, some observers believe it may not lead to any permanent weakening and can be reversed fairly easily after the Common Market referendum.

Unless, that is, the current plunge is part of a deeper malaise, in which case nothing short of a massive international rescue attempt would be likely to save the pound.

Scouting Makes Comeback In North Hastings Area

By NAN WHITLAW
Staff Reporter

BANCROFT — After an absence of almost 10 years, scouting, in all its forms, has returned to the North Hastings area.

Following a number of opinion-seeking and organizing meetings a call was put out recently for all interested local boys to attend the first meeting of the various groups at Our Lady of Mercy Auditorium. About 40 potential Beavers, Cubs, Scouts and Venturers showed up.

The scouting movement has been revamped in the last several years and it now is geared to serve boys from 5 years of age and up.

A local advisory and steering committee, backed by the Bancroft Lions Club, has found leaders for all the new troops with the exception of the Venturers who are 14 and 15 years old.

The Venturer group is geared toward community service and the leader needs to be aware of the needs of the community and the way that the boys can help.

Jim Dailey, of the steering committee says, "The Venturers really look after their own affairs and the leader takes on the role of being an advisor."

The local groups now are all meeting on Wednesday evenings and any boys or adults who want to get involved can do so by getting in touch with Jim Dailey, Albert Stapley or Ken Wilbocks.

Lots to Do

Cub Leader Ben Elmanski of Bancroft has his hands full showing a newly-formed troop of boys all the regalia and badges that they can expect to use in their scouting experience. The troop was formed this week as part of an effort to re-establish scouting in the North Hastings area.

Hastings Highlights

Workshops Scarce

MARMORA — The advice of Marmora and Lake Townships Council was sought by a new resident of Marmora Township, Ronald Catling, formerly of Ireland, in locating a building or property where he could carry on his trade of cabinet maker.

Mr. Catling's present location in the Jones' warehouse has been objected to by some of the nearby residents who complain about the noise from his electric saws.

Council was unable to give Mr. Catling much assistance in the matter as there seems to be few suitable buildings available in the township.

New Logo Sought

The Crowe Valley Conservation Authority has launched a logo competition open to all separate, secondary and public school students in the watershed and surrounding area.

Prizes are offered for the three most creative and appropriate logos. First prize will be $15, second $10, and third prize $5.00.

The winning entry will be used as the official symbol for the Crowe Valley Conservation Authority.

Concert A Success

BANCROFT — The students of North Hastings Senior Elementary School played to a full house last week as they presented the school's annual Spring Concert.

In a program that ranged from choir and band performances to cheer leaders and a trampoline act, the students delighted parents and friends and themselves with their versatility.

In addition to the other acts, the school's French Club presented a playlet their newly-acquired second language.

The proceeds from the Spring Concert will be used by the students for the development of further extracurricular activities.

Double Trio Entertains

During the North Hastings Spring Concert this double trio led by Murray McCall entertained a full house last week at the school's annual concert. Acts ranged from cheer leaders to trampoline act.

This is no year to fool around.

Claims of price reductions can be misleading.

Before you choose any compact car, compare. Compare price, and what you're getting for that price, and you'll see that Plymouth Valiant and Dodge Dart give you a lot for your dollar.

Over the past 16 years, Chrysler compacts have earned a reputation for giving Canadians what they're looking for. A reputation that's paid off by helping make Plymouth Valiant and Dodge Dart Canada's most popular compact cars.

Five solid reasons to trust us with your compact car dollar.

1. Slant Six Engine
Proven to be one of the toughest, most economical engines ever put in our passenger cars. No other compact has it. Plymouth Valiant and Dodge Dart give this gas miser to you standard.

2. Plenty of Room Inside
We may describe the outside as compact, but inside the word is big. Big enough for five adults to travel in comfort, and with a trunk that should comfortably handle all their gear. Plymouth Valiant and Dodge Dart have more trunk space than a lot of full size cars.

3. Electronic Ignition System
No points, no condenser, this ignition system is practically maintenance free. And you can expect sure starts in any weather with the electronic ignition system that comes built right into every Plymouth Valiant and Dodge Dart.

4. No Special Gas Needed
Plymouth Valiant and Dodge Dart engines are designed to run on any gas, leaded or unleaded. So there's no frantic searching for the right gas pump.

5. The Chrysler Warranty
Like every 1975 Chrysler passenger car, Plymouth Valiant and Dodge Dart are well covered by a 12 month parts and labour warranty that puts no limit on mileage. (Taxis and police cars excepted). So drive as far as you like.

The first year's on us.

Tommy is a handsome lad with dark eyes, a first chin and a pleasant expression which can turn into an even more pleasant smile.

Though he is a registered Indian, it is possible Tommy may have some Negro heritage. He has light brown, very curly hair, hazel eyes and medium complexion.

Tommy, 11, is a quiet, shy lad who is most at ease when he is outdoors. Healthy and active, he is a camping enthusiast. Recently he has become interested in sports but since his foster home is in a rural area he has not been able to take part in organized games.

Average in ability, Tommy is doing well in Grade four. He is fond of reading and he writes poetry. Country and Western "music are his favorites. Tommy is interested in farm equipment and how it works. He enjoys woodworking and makes such things as bows and arrows.

Cartoon programs on television interest Tommy. He dislikes programs showing any type of violence.

Tommy needs parents who will appreciate his agreeable personality and help him to accept and trust people as well as to have more confidence in himself. For such a family he will be a rewarding son.

To inquire about adopting Tommy, please write Today's Child, Ministry of Community and Social Services, Box 889, Station K, Toronto M4P 3E2.

Rural Learning Handicapped Don't Receive Adequate Help

SASKATOON (CP)—More than 40 per cent of Canada's one million educationally-handicapped children live in rural areas and are not receiving adequate teaching, A research project at University of Saskatchewan aims to change the situation.

The project, being carried out at the university's Institute of Child Guidance and Development, is designed to improve the quality and accessibility of educational services at a lesser cost than existing methods. It will directly affect between 800 and 900 students in the province.

"Unfortunately, middle-class thinking has always been: 'Got a problem? Then get a specialist.' " said Dr. John McLeod, director of the institute.

This kind of thinking had created excessive costs for individuals and school boards and limited access to special education for those needing help. It had also created two education systems—one for normal children and one for handicapped children.

"The problem is particularly obvious in rural areas where families have to drive perhaps 100 miles to get help—or worse yet, send the child to live away from home," Dr. McLeod said.

"The kind they need should be right in the regular school, year-round, not just for a few minutes every month."

The project, which has received a $47,000 grant from IBM Canada Ltd., aims to solve the problem in sparsely-populated areas and to provide a more effective method for urban educationally-handicapped children live in rural areas and are not receiving adequate teaching. The project, being carried out at the university's Institute of Child Guidance and Development, is designed to improve the quality and accessibility of educational services at a lesser cost than existing methods. It will directly affect between 800 and 900 students in the province.

The model suggests special education services at three levels: training for regular teachers in identifying and working with exceptional children; a specially-trained diagnostic teacher in regular schools to help both students and teachers; in-depth diagnosis and remedial programs for extreme cases through clinical centres.

About one million handicapped Canadian children require attention at the first level. The second level would help about 250,000 with more serious handicaps, while the third level would be required for about 100,000 children.

Under the present system, all types of handicaps are treated by specialists who periodically visit schools in reasonably well populated areas.

Operating on an estimated $100,000 budget, the research program covers three school divisions near Saskatoon.

"The greatest benefit, of course, will be to the thousands of youngsters in rural Canada who suffer from severe learning problems," Dr. McLeod said. "These kids are either being identified too late or are being pushed right to the top for specialist treatment.

"They have traditionally been categorized as mentally retarded, emotionally disturbed, socially maladjusted or linguistically handicapped.

Dr. McLeod criticized the "resource room" setup in many schools, where teachers can concentrate on special instruction or evaluation. Such rooms became dumping grounds for problem children who could be handled in the classroom.

The faculty of education at University of Saskatchewan has, in the last few years, graduated more than 400 training in dealing with exceptional children. Dr. McLeod said he hopes most future teachers in Canada will have similar training.

"That's the guts of the problem — getting reasonably trained teachers into the classroom. And it's here it, they won't have priced themselves out of jobs."

During the next three years, the six-member research team at the institute will evaluate such areas as costs per child, normal children's attitudes toward handicapped classmates, teachers' and parents' perceptions of their roles and the emotional adjustment of exceptional children under the new system.

Dr. Robert Sanche, an associate director of the project who has studied the problems of educating exceptional children in the United States, indicated the Saskatoon project can be expected to alter attitudes of educationists.

Vivian Belair, Nonegenarian

Sitting in an armchair by an upstairs window, dressed for the afternoon with a pale blue sheaf and matching ribbon in her snow-white hair, Vivian Belair presents a picture of contentment as she reflects her 91 years spent almost entirely in Belleville.

"We moved from Gananoque to Branford, Pennsylvania when I was only five," she recalls. "I went to school here, at Loretto Academy and then at the Ontario Business College. When I graduated I went to work as assistant book-keeper at The Intelligencer.

"Charlie Bowles — he was Mackenzie Bowles' son — was my boss, and my, he was a prim man. It was a happy place to work. We all knew each other, and I enjoyed every part of the paper. I used to like watching the boys in the printing shop, and you know, they were always so polite and careful of their language, a lady didn't have to worry about going out there at all."

Mrs. Belair met her future husband Walter, who later became manager of Schenter Coal Company, "on the street, introduced by a girl I knew" and married him when she was 23 years old. During the next years, she became a neighbor sight-times, and says she has those children to thank now for her happy old age.

"That's the best advice I could give anyone who wonders how to have as good a life as I do at this age," she says with a smile. "Get married and have plenty of children.

"They're scattered all over now, from Nova Scotia to B.C., but they all still come home to visit, and they keep me interested in what's going on.

"With 30 grandchildren and 15 great-grandchildren, it's sometimes hard to keep track of them all!"

Mrs. Belair lives with her daughter Margaret in the home she designed for her husband to build more than 60 years ago, and it's still to her liking although she no longer goes downstairs. She has no severe health problems, her memory is in top condition, but walking is only done with the help of her mental walker she calls "Jenny". Much of her time is spent at her window, keeping an eye on the comings and goings along the street, staying in touch with the neighborhood.

Although her husband and many of her friends and family have pre-deceased Mrs. Belair, she doesn't mourn the past, and doesn't regret not getting out any longer.

"With a family as big as I had, I was never a gadabout," she says. "I always liked being busy at home and maybe that's why I'm contented now. I had hobbies, oil painting, weaving, embroidering and such, and I sewed clothes for my girls, but I was never one for teas."

Never Too Late to Learn

TORONTO (CP)—There's one Paris-Born Ann Englecher at group of students at Malvern Collegiate Institute who prove it isn't never too late to go back to school.

Fifteen classes for mature adults and senior citizens have been held at the school since times has a strange effect on an adult's life.

"I was always envious of other people who could speak usied from Malvern in 1968, French," said May Ferguson, said: "I couldn't do my work 78. "I've been meaning to learn my French since I was seven years old.

"The opportunities to learn were never so easy as they are now."

The group has Malvern principal James Hogarth to thank for its existence. Since the school gets no financial help for the program, he juggled staff and timetables to make it possible.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch
Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids ... and repair damaged tissue.
A renowned research institute has found a healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissue.
One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction of bulging hemorrhoids.
And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Medrol) which is quickly being used injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.
In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and eases inflammation less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.
Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Consumer Goods Fair Features Music, Clothes

BRNO, Czechoslovakia (CP) — Two often in the latest trend to make fashion shows entertaining to audiences, dance routines by models distract from the clothes being shown.

Not so during the fall and winter showings of fashions which was part of the sixth annual International Consumer Goods Fair in this country's second largest city.

Here the fashion industry collaborates with choreographers, musicians and visual artists to produce as they state "circus stage shows where the models and clothing products are backed up with rewarding artistic experience."

Coats appeared as the best of the country's designs. They were in bright, clear colors and many were full-skirted. A few sported capelets and one group was lined in similar handsome dark all-over prints as their companion dresses.

Since the knitting industry is one of the most important in Czechoslovakia, emphasis was placed on printed knits both in sports and daytime dresses. Several two-piece ensembles were in a peasant style.

There is a peasant influence everywhere in fashion this year. The Czech show included several dressed in peasant blouses. One long pinafore style dress was in small checks and had ruffled lace over the shoulders and down to the hem.

But the peasant look in the Russian show, also held during the fair, was wild. One designer tossed together so many different designs and so much ruching, lace and flounces on each garment that they looked, as he by said, "sometimes almost grotesque."

This same designer favored high Empire waistlines in his evening clothes. Many of them had a foilish touch as was seen in a long shirred jacket with tiny frilled medallions on the skirt in another pattern.

Participating countries in the fashion showings at the trade fair compete for the Golden Sash awards. Fifty awards are given in various categories which include handbags and shoes.

There was a large display of leather items with 1,400 pairs of shoe fashions, 150 glove models and other leather goods. Most of the Czech shoes are similar to Canadian styles but with a slightly heavier look.

The English shoe firm of Clarke was showing the thickest platforms. Its representative claimed the heavier look would prove to be even more popular this year.

Czechoslovakia, well known for its crystal and costume jewelry, is probably the largest manufacturer in the world for these goods. The industry originates 20,000 new designs a year.

Pearls are expected to make a com-back next season. Also interesting were small seed beads in 13-strand effects, in tones of black, white, green and brown.

Professional Help Can Be Expensive

Dear Ann Landers: You often advise emotionally-troubled readers to seek the help of a psychiatrist or a professional counsellor. I wonder how many people have failed to heed that advice because they fear the most communities now offer professional counselling with payment schedules based on personal income.

Not long ago my wife and I were on the verge of a divorce although we loved each other deeply. Professional counselling for only $3 a week helped us solve our differences and save our marriage. (As our financial status improved, our fees were increased to $20 a week, but it was worth every penny.)

I hope you will print this letter so others who need counselling won't let the fear of financial burdens prevent them from straightening out their lives.—Making It In California

Dear Cal: Thank you for providing me with another opportunity to suggest to my readers that they contact the Mental Health Association, mental health societies, Family Service Assn., The YM-YWCA, Catholic charities and Salvation Army. Just look in your phone book, folks. I'm tired of hearing: "I can't afford $25 an hour for a psychiatrist." Very few people can—but there are plenty of alternatives.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a 65-year-old woman whose hair is naturally grey. It started to turn when I was in my mid-forties and I hated it. With the help of commercial compounds I have kept my hair a chestnut brown—the color it was most of my life.

I'm sick and tired of people coming up to me and saying, "Why don't you let your hair go grey? It would be just beautiful!" I could scream. Maybe THEY think grey hair is beautiful, but I think it would make me look 15 years older. (Some of the women who have suggested this are tiring their own hair!)

I have changed beauty shops three times in the last two years because the hairdressers have been after me to let my hair go "natural." I can't stand the nagging.

I tried twice to let the grey grow out and after three weeks I despised the way I looked. I felt like an old hag.

What I want to know is this: Am I being silly and stubborn? What should I say to people who try to tell me what to do with my hair?—Brownette

Dear Brownette: It's YOUR hair. The person to please is yourself. And this is what you should tell people if they come in too strong.

Dear Ann Landers: I don't want an essay on morality. Just a simple yes or no will do.

If a woman finds out her husband is having an affair with a so-called good friend of hers, does she have the right to go out and do the same?—Seeze Pee The Cheese

Dear Seeze: What do you mean by "right?" Who gave HIM the right? Getting even is not the answer for doing anything. The answer is no.

Don't Neglect Teeth

Too many people go through life with lumpier teeth than they need to have, so that their smiles are not attractive. Teeth dingy from age, or blackened by decay, or ugly because of gold or amalgam, you could make no better investment if you spent money then to go to your Family Dentist with your problem.

Maybe replacing them with new porcelain fillings will help a lot, or if they are soft, and constantly needing repair, he may suggest making a bridge, even though the tooth may still be good enough for chewing purposes.

Ever so many people are better looking after they get the much-dreaded false teeth than they ever were before — and more ready to smile!

Dear Doris: In a recent column you advised a writer asking about organizing a club for single parents for single parents.

I would like to make people aware of a totally Canadian organization, One Parent Families Association of Canada, which has several chapters across Canada.

This is a worthy organization helping people who are on their own and raising children. We try to work in liaison with community organizations whose benefits and information can assist our members.

I enjoy your columns and know through your efforts you assist many who turn to you for guidance. One Parent.

Dear One Parent: I'm all for you! Any family that has only one parent can profit greatly by sharing activities. There is nothing like taking your children with others who have lived through similar stress to give you strength.

Persons who want information about a branch near them may write, "One Parent Families Association of Canada", Concourse level, 95 Chestnut Street, Toronto, Ontario M5G 1R1.

Dear Doris: I am a mother with a broken heart. My ex-husband has hired my 15-year-old son away with him, far into the woods in a small settlement.

How would you feel if this happened to you and you had legal custody, plus the fact he required forty dollars a badly injured hand, is allergic to animals (and the father bought him a dog) and that he is in a special class at school for reading problems? Might you be in not attending school at all. I have just succeeded in finding out where he is.

Broken-hearted Mother.

Dear Mother: If you have legal custody, stop nursing your broken heart and take positive action. Don't you realize that your ex-husband is actually guilty of kidnapping the boy?

If you are not able to afford a lawyer, apply at once to your own local legal aid office for the action you need. Your boy has to be given a chance to start living again the normal life every child deserves.

Abused Child Parleys Aimed at Easing Heat

TORONTO (CP) — Elie Martel (NDP—Sudbury East) revealed Monday a memo from an official of the social services ministry which said a series of seminars and conferences on child abuse were arranged this year to take political heat off the controversial government day-care programs during an election year.

The memo, entitled Back Burner Stuff, was written Jan. 15 by Dr. Charles E. Hendry, an adviser of the deputy minister of community and social services, to Gordon McLellan, executive director of the social services branch.

Mr. Martel revealed the memo at a meeting of the social development committee reviewing the ministry's estimates.

The memo said "1975 will be an election year in Ontario," and pointed out that leadership initiative would be of special importance.

"One such area is child welfare and child development. Day care has become a subject of sharp controversy. Something less contentious and divisive is needed to provide focus for more-harmonious understanding."

The memo said child abuse or child battering might supply such a focus for political action.

Dr. Hendry, former head of the University of Toronto school of social work, also said in his memo that in dealing with the problem of child abuse, language should be "familiar to citizens who are not specialists and who cannot be expected to follow highly technical dissertations.

"Ultimately, of course, elected political representatives, themselves for the most part 'run-of-the-mill' citizens, must pass any legislation that may be required."

In the memo, lists of associations which should be involved include children's aid societies, family service agencies, juvenile and family courts and hospital pediatric departments.

Mr. McLellan said Monday that the first seminar was expected to be in September.

Day Care Plans Said Too Limited

TORONTO (CP) — The only saving grace of the government's proposal of $1 million for new capital costs for day care would be a mid-election promise of $10 to $20 million, Elie Martel (NDP—Sudbury East) said Monday.

In capital costs estimates, $9,320,700 of $10,320,700 allocated for day care is carried over from a $15-million program announced last spring by Margaret Birch, social development secretary.

Completion of both programs is expected to bring the total of children receiving day care to 30,000 from 46,000.

Mr. Martel said 300,000 new places were needed this year for children in day-care centres.

Plan Changes In Family Law

TORONTO (CP) — Family law will be changed to give women and children important new rights, Attorney-General John Clement said Monday.

The Family Law Reform Act, introduced in the legislature by Mr. Clement, drew criticism from Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party, and skepticism from Laura Sabia, chairman of the Ontario Council on the Status of Women.

Mr. Clement said the new legislation aims to preserve individual legal rights within a marriage as well as creating an equal legal status for married men and women.

The act establishes the separate legal personalities of each spouse and grants full legal capacity to married persons. A spouse will have the right to sue his or her partner for personal injuries and protection of property, and married women will have the right to act as guardian for an infant in a law suit.

Mr. Clement said clarification will be made about contribution of work or funds which a spouse makes to the property or business owned by the other spouse.

"In the absence of any agreement between them," the statement said, "the contribution will be treated as if made by one individual to a partnership of side of marriage."

He said the act creates a presumption of trust where property belonging to one spouse is received by the other.

"Unless there is proof to the contrary, the property is deemed to be held in trust for the other. Title taken in joint tenancy and bank accounts or common funds in the names of both husband and wife are exceptions.

"In these cases, the law will presume that the property is held in joint tenancy, whatever the contribution."

A wife will retain the right to pledge her husband's credit for necessities but husband and wife both will be made personally liable for damages arising from a breach of contract.

The new proposals were partially taken from a report published last fall by the Ontario Law Reform Commission, but in the new legislation, Mr. Clement ignored one of its major recommendations—that the matrimonial home become an economic partnership and all assets accumulated during marriage by either partner be considered equally-owned.

NO OTHER CAR GETS BETTER GAS MILEAGE. THAT'S ONE REASON YOU SHOULD CATCH THE DATSUN SPIRIT.

Everybody's talking about gas mileage these days. All we at Datsun have to say is that no other car in Canada will give you better gas mileage than our B210*. The whole Datsun line lives up to that spirit of economy, in mileage, maintenance, and Datsun's traditionally high resale value.

THEN THERE'S THE NEW DATSUN B210 S. A new entry for economy car buyers, that retains the best features of the original B210. What we've done is reduce the exterior and interior trim details, to give you a much lower sticker price, just $3095. At that price, the new Datsun B210 S is a great package of spirited performance and economy.

The Datsun 710 and luxury 610 sedans give you spirited performance, without sacrificing economy comfort. The Datsun Sport trucks, in regular or the new "long box" model, are tough work and play pickups, with steel body construction and torsion bar suspension. The Datsun "Z" cars are built with a whole new concept of luxury and elegance, combined with the spirit that true sports car enthusiasts demand. And now the "Z" cars are equipped with a new electronic fuel injection system for even better performance.

So why wait. Test drive a Datsun today, and catch the Datsun spirit. It's waiting for you at your Datsun dealers right now.

*Based on results of U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) model tests for city and highway driving. All figures are weighted averages for both regular and long box models. # School Renovations Get Major Priority in Education Budget

The Hastings County Board of Education last week decided to stay within its spending ceilings — Monday night it had the tough job of cutting Programs to avoid this objective.

After an hour debate, building renovations and third maintenance surfaced as the greatest concern facing the board this year — not the actual cost of renovating but the cost of having working drawings prepared, about $75,000.

The renovation projects, involving six elementary schools were placed before the class size reduction, more librarians, more guidance counsellors and more supplies and services.

The administration gave trustees a list of priorities Monday night to be examined according to the most urgent needs. Director of Education Eric Rumarcke said due to the pending salary settlements all of the projected programs and work can't be completed.

Trustees finally settled on the architectural and engineering fees for preparation of working drawings for renovations at six elementary schools including Queen Victoria and King George Public Schools in Belleville. This top priority was recommended because the heating systems in these schools could break down at any time.

Next on the list of priorities was recommended that 17 more teachers be hired in the elementary panel to reduce primary class sizes from 28 to the provincial mandated maximum the board listed the hiring of eight new teachers for ori.l French as the next priority.

Low on the list was an increase in guidance counsellors for classes between kindergarten and Grade 4. An increase in librarians also took a low priority.

In the secondary school panel, trustees listed an increase in supplies and services as top priority with an increase of funds for professional development taking low priority.

Last week the board set the budget at $51.87 million which is within the spending ceilings set down by the provincial government. Salary negotiations are still outstanding, so the board can't accurately budget all areas of funds until the settlements are reached.

Provincial Grants Ease Trenton Tax Increases

By AL ZARAS
Staff Reporter

TRENTON—Trenton residential taxpayers can breathe a little easier today with the passage Monday of a $5.6-million budget that does not include a projected increase between 20 to 30 mill increases to cover town operations in 1975.

The general levy this year remained stable with only education taxes marking an increase that will mean added tax dollars.

Residential public school supporters face a 4.9-mill increase (about $18) while separate school supporters must pay an extra $35 (7.5 mills).

Commercial taxpayers however fared less favorably, but parents school supporters face a 13.8-mill jump over 1974 and public school supporters will see a smaller 9.4-mill increase. Part of the increase in both cases is due to a 4-mill increase in the town levy.

Town officials attribute the lack of an increase in the residential levy to two main factors: an increase of $296,000 in provincial grants and a rise in assessment in Trenton by $1.5-million over last year.

Grants and assessment combined to offset any mill increase needed for a $294,000 increase in town expenditures over the 1974 $4.9-million budget. Last year, levies rose by three mills.

After the nine-minute council session Monday, Mayor Bob Patrick said the 28 per cent increase in provincial grants "really saved us" and avoided the need to drastically raise the mill rate.

Revenues from Queen's Park amount to $1,453,180.36 percent of the total budget. Taxes make up the major portion (65.1 per cent) of town receipts at $3,683,941. Several rates and unclassified (licences, etc.) plus a $1,956,653 surplus from 1974 make up the remaining revenue.

Mayor Patrick said the budget will permit the town to carry on with several projects that had been planned for 1975. He said so major cuts were made in requests from town departments.

However, he did say Fire Chief Cecil Ellis's request for two additional firemen was axed as was an approximate $6,000 from the Trenton Community Gardens operating grant.

A notable increase was in honorariums paid the mayor and councillors. Council gave itself a 30-per-cent increase, described by the mayor as "deserved" considering work performed by council, and in line with pay scales in other municipalities of similar size.

The mayor will now get $5,400 annually while councillors take home $2,700 each.

A new feature in the 1975 budget is creation of two reserves into which council has thrown $300,000. The approximate $100,000 in each reserve will be used in later years for rebuilding the Dundas St. swing bridge and reconstruction of the CPR Sidney St. overpass.

Treasurer Brian Fagan said council will not dip into the reserves this year and will probably add more money in 1976.

The reserve for the over pass indicates council's acceptance of the Ontario Municipal Board's ruling excluding the project from the town's 1975 capital budget. Mayor Patrick said he will not now make the previously planned Dundas St. West Park to appeal the ruling but that the project will likely be included again in the 1976 budget for OMB study.

Leader among the big spenders in town departments is public works. It will get up 29.4 per cent of total costs. Recreation and Parks, its $1,456,400 budget represents a 43.6 per cent jump over 1974's estimated budget and $225,771 more than was actually spent.

Education costs at $1.3-million account for 23.1 per cent of expenditures.

The police department gets a 23.7 per cent increase (to $717,127) over 1974 costs. The fire department's budget is set at $386,261, 5.1 per cent of total town costs and only $4,026 more than it spent in 1974.

Expenditures for sanitary sewers and sewage disposal and recreation and community services are 8.1 and 5.7 per cent respectively of total town costs.

Kells Now Confirmed As Centennial Head

Well-known retired city educator, Lawrence A. Kells has been appointed by the city as Belleville's centennial chairman.

Effective with the passage of a bylaw at Monday's council meeting, Mr. Kells is responsible to council for "the care, co-ordination and development" of the city's centennial year planning.

For his work from now until the end of the 1976 centennial celebration, Mr. Kells will receive a total of $18,000.

Mr. Kells will be working with a number of volunteers, some of whom have begun planning for the big year, along with various groups in the city in co-ordinating their activities.

A number of city organizations and individuals have submitted proposals the Centennial Committee set last year. These will be sifted by this chairman to determine their suitability in celebrating the city's 100th birthday.

More Telephones Mean Fee Increase Council Warned

By CASH MAHAFFY
Staff Reporter

Bell Canada subscribers in Belleville and district will probably be paying more for their telephone service by the end of this year, it was "intoned" at Monday's city council meeting.

The Canadian Transport Commission (CTC), which governs Bell operations, intoned could that the number of telephones in service in the area served by the Belleville exchange had increased to more than 50,000. This puts the exchange into a higher rate category.

George Thompson, Bell's Belleville manager explained that rates are set by the CTC on a "value of service" basis. The more numbers a subscriber can reach without paying long distance rates, the more valuable the service is considered to be — and the higher the customer's bill.

Bell Canada is required to report to the CTC twice a year. Mr. Thompson said, the long distance rates, the more valuable the service is considered to be — and the higher the customer's bill.

Bell Canada is required to report to the CTC twice a year. Mr. Thompson said, the upward or downward revisions in rates based on the figures reported follow.

Under the new rate structure, private line residence rates for large majority — would go from $5.30 to $5.55 a month, party line rates from $3.55 to $3.85.

Business service rates would go from $12.85 to $13.50 for private service and $5.95 to $6.25 for party line service.

Municipalities affected under the new rate structure would be Belleville, Tyendinaga, Thurlow, Sophiasburg, Sidney and Ameliasburg townships.

If Procedure calls for the CTC to inform municipalities of impending rate increases and the municipalities have 30 days to decide if they prefer a cut in service to the increase in rates.

Wheels Stolen

City police are investigating the theft of two imitation mag wheels from a 1971 Mustang and two wire wheels from a 1971 Cougar from the lot at Motorland Chrysler Plymouth Ltd. at 20 North Front St.

A city police spokesman said the wheels stolen are worth a total value of about $400 and the theft occurred sometime before 2.10 p.m. Monday.

Season for Painting

Jim Strachan, of Darrah's Paint and Wallpaper, says now's the time to start house painting as temperatures hover around 60 degrees. But, before you start, find out why the last paint peeled off before putting a new coat on. Chances are, if the problem hasn't been solved, the new paint won't stay any longer than the last coat.

To Study Calculators

The pocket calculator — curse or blessing to education? That's the question a 15-member task force will answer in the next few months. Here, two members of the task force, Bill MacKay, principal of Centennial Secondary School and Grade 13 Centennial student Bill Kitcher discuss the pros and cons at Monday's initial meeting. The task force is sanctioned by the Hastings County Board of Education.

Board Task Force to Study Calculator Use in School

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

Pocket calculators — they're here to stay and we have to learn how to take advantage of them, says Jim Robertson, business head at Bayside Secondary School.

The statement was made Monday during the planning stages of a 15-member task force looking into the effects of pocket calculators on today's student. The task force is composed of trustees, teachers and a parent.

Questions the task force will produce a position paper on the use of calculators in the schools and could be adopted by the board as policy. Due to the enormous growth in the number of pocket calculators on the market educators across the province are confronting problems.

At Monday's planning meeting committee members outlined their goals and established lists of advantages and disadvantages. They later combined these lists into areas of concern.

The committee expects to study the impact of calculators on learning as well as its application to basic computations. The committee expects to discover more about the concern for the basics and how they apply to this new learning device.

Some schools are now experiencing problems with students using them on the calculators during examinations. The committee will investigate this area and put forth a policy statement.

It will also consider the cost of these instruments and just how many students could afford to have them and whether the board of education should supply them for the students.

During Monday's meeting it became apparent that new concern of many teachers is that pocket calculators are easily stolen or removed from classrooms by students. Ways of this would put a board of education in a difficult situation.

Most Stations Want No Change in Hours Bylaw

A survey conducted by city manager Wilbur Purcell and reported to Monday's council meeting reveals that the majority of service station operators in the city want regulations governing their hours of business to remain as they are.

Twenty-five replies were received of a total of 31 survey forms mailed and most operators wished to continue under the present bylaw.

Current hours are 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. through the week except May 1 to Nov. 1; no more than 36 per cent of the stations can remain open 7 p.m. to 11 p.m. during the week and 7 a.m. to 11 p.m. Sunday.

Teachers Want Study On Status of Women

Three teachers federations, representing about 1,150 teachers in Hastings County, have asked the board of education to establish a task force on the status of women in the county.

Ben Hutchison, chairman of the Hastings County Board of Education, read a letter from Centennial Secondary School Teachers Federation (CSSTF) meeting Monday which prompted Judge Carty Monday night making the request on behalf of the county's teachers.

Mrs. Carty, a teacher at Centennial Secondary School, said the task force would not just limit itself to education but would take a look view of the status of women across the county. "It would be a benefit to both men and women," she said.

The board indicated an interest but stopped short of establishing a task force until board representatives meet with the various federations to discuss the terms of reference. The Federation of Women Teachers Association of Ontario and the Ontario Public School Men's Teachers Federation also are interested in the study.

Humane Society Still on Job

The City of Belleville, officially without any provision for animal control until Monday, has relayed the Ontario Humane Society to look after its animal control problems.

Under the contract's new terms, the Humane Society will be paid $1 for each city resident for the first half of this year; $1.10 per capita for the second half and $1.25 effective Jan. 1 1976.

Police Busy In April

Ontario Provincial Police officers of the Belleville detachment investigated two fatal motor vehicle collisions in which two persons were killed, a total of 27 at the detachment's April reports show.

There were 37 personal injury collisions in which 35 persons suffered injuries. Total number of reportable property damage collisions was 47. There were 12 of the non-reportable kind.

Criminal charges resulted from their over $200 and 36 charges were laid for the first half of April. Of that 36, 15 were for shoplifting and 11 were various types.

Other criminal code offences numbered 27. There were $4,267.00 worth of property stolen and $2,026.66 worth of property recovered.

There were 127 traffic, 44 criminal and 44 other charges processed through court.

Fire Destroys Old Colborne Building

COLBORNE — A century old village landmark was destroyed here today as Colborne and Brighton firefighters fought to extinguish a blaze that gutted the two - storey Chapman Legion building.

The brick building on King St. built as a public school in 1858 was valued at an estimated $100,000 by village clerk Allan Learmouth.

Mr. Learmouth could not be reached for comment today. No cause or official estimate of damage had been established.

Firefighters were still fighting flames in the basement of the smoking building late this morning.

Corke Named Alternate Mayor

During Mayor Robin Jeffery's absence June 6 to 20 on a visit to Belleville's Enpeso twin city in West Germany, Alderman Ben Corke will assume her duties.

Council Briefs

Seniors Get Week

City council Monday agreed to a request from provincial ministry of community and social services Rene Brunelle to declare June 15 to 21 Senior Citizens' Week in the community.

Legal Firm Retained

The legal firm of Barrett LaRy has again been retained by the City of Belleville as solicitors to act on behalf of the city under a bylaw passed at Monday's council meeting.

Houses to Come Down

Three Frank St. house, numbers 68, 68 and 87, plus - carded dates 1925 as unfit for human occupancy, will be demolished and removed, it was agreed by city councillors Monday.

Toddlers Honored

City council Monday declared Monday, May 21 as Day Care Day. The proclamation by the Belleville and District Branch of the Association for Early Childhood Education.

Street Lights Approved

A $27,777 street lighting program for the city was approved by council at Monday's meeting. The program involves installing new lights, particularly on residential streets, and upgrading existing lights. It will be carried out by the Belleville Utilities Commission.

Finkle Gets Job

Finkle Electric Ltd. has been retained by the city to replace bulbs in the city's traffic lights at a cost of $1,676.

Sewer Work Nears

Work on the northeast Trenton sewer is expected to start in about three weeks, city engineer John Angelo told council Monday. Contract for the job has been awarded to Tripp Construction Co. Ltd. for $173,262.21.

Board Opinion Sought

Mayor Robin Jeffrey wants the Ontario Municipal Board to act as consultants to the city in matters relating to railway relocation. A resolution to that effect was passed at Monday's council meeting.

Meters to be Moved

Four parking meters will be relocated on St. James St., council agreed Monday, to allow safer driveways at 147 and 149 Pinnacle.

CN Reducing Supervisory Staff

An unspecified number of supervisory staff of Canadian National Railways is being reduced from the chain of command, says unnamed sources in Trenton.

The move to cut "unnecessary" positions comes as part of a national streamlining operation for CN, said Mr. Newman during an interview Monday.

Mr. Newman said theaction the CN's part is not to be confused as a layoff but as "job abolishments."

Four Belleville positions have already been cut, but it is not known how many more will be eradicated before the end of the year. Of the four men affected by the cuts, three were close to retirement age and have taken their pensions, said Mr. Newman. The fourth man has been with the railway — has returned "to the ranks," he said.

"We don't know how many more will be affected by the reduction of supervisory positions . . . streamlining must be completed by Dec. 31," said Mr. Newman.

"It's not that we're cutting jobs that are not necessary," said Mr. Newman. "It now is necessary to streamline and make more economic the operation."

"A total hasn't been set but it will likely exceed 20 positions," he said.

Health Board Meets

The Hastings and Prince Edward Counties board of health will hold its regular monthly meeting Wednesday. It will take place in the board room of the administration building at 208 East Bridge St., Starting time will be 9:30 a.m.

EMO Funding Examined

Alderman Stu Meeks, at Monday's council meeting, asked city officials if it would be possible to investigate with the federal government the possibility of municipalities getting funds to support emergency measures programs directly.

With the province announced last month it was planning out its emergency measures operation, federal funds were automatically cut off. Ald. Meeks said.

Council directed city manager Wilbur Purcell to look into the matter and report to council.

New Coat of Paint Won't Cure All Ills

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

It doesn't really matter how good the quality of paint is if your house has structural problems such as poor ventilation.

If the walls can't breathe, chances are your paint is going to peel.

This is one of the biggest problems in the retail paint business is shoppers buying paint without finding the problem that peeled the first paint job," said Jim Strachan, of Sales of Darrah's Paint and Wallpaper.

In the case of painting siding, you have to make sure that the wood has been properly prepared and that blistering has been remedied by wedges or breather holes in the wall.

Basics, before painting, include a thorough scraping job followed by a primer coat and finally a couple of coats of the finished paint, said Mr. Strachan.

With public inquiries now holding around the 50s and 60s, the season is right to begin thinking about painting.

Mr. Strachan said white is still the big color for exteriors in the world, "no matter what color choice.

"The big thing is talk to the salesman and let him know what you intend to paint and what problems you're having now so he can recommend a solution," said Mr. Strachan.

"If you don't fix the problem . . . you defeat your purpose in painting over it."

He said there are many fine shops in the city where the service or the practical painter can get some trustable shooting tips.

The Hawks, Marty, Gordie and Mark, the Stanley Cup deserved rest after the Houston Aeros eliminated Quebec Nordiques from World Hockey Association playoff action Monday night in four straight. The victory gave the Howes and the Aeros their second Avco World Cup in a row.

Aeros Win Second Straight

QUEBEC (CP) — Gordie Howe, the legendary 47-year-old right winger, led Houston Aeros, says there was friendly persuasion from certain partners for him to retire after the club won the World Hockey Association title last year.

But today the Aeros are glad he decided not to listen.

Howe was the dominating figure Monday night as the Aeros trimmed Quebec Nordiques 7-2. The victory enabled the Houston club to win its best-of-seven final series 4-0 and plate off with the Avco Trophy for the second straight year.

With his two assists—left winger Mark and defenceman Mark Howe figures Monday night's victory should be his swan song as a player.

Wilt100 points to his credit last season and 99 in this season's regular schedule, Howe scored his seventh and eighth goals in 13 playoff games this year to help sink the Nordiques.

In addition, he added an assist on one of the two goals scored by right winger Frank Hughes, performed as part of the Howe-Howe power-play unit and helped oubhin the role of peacemaker.

To keep the Howe name on the scoresheet Mark also contributed a goal and gained an assist on the first goal scored by Hughes.

Defenceman Marty, who missed the first three games of the series because of tonsilitis, was used sparingly.

In addition to the three goals scored by the Howe family and the two by Hughes, Gordon Labossiere and Larry Lund added one each. Left winger Rejean Houle scored a pair of power play goals for the Nordiques.

Following a vote by writers covering the series, Gordie announced that the Gordie Howe Trophy, awarded to the outstanding player in the playoffs, has been won by Houston's rookie netminder Ron Grahame.

Grahame had a spectacular series. He won 13 straight games and recorded a record three shutouts.

Gordie said he thinks he will stick to a decision he made earlier to retire.

"Some people said maybe I should have quit last year, but then others asked me to play this season," he said. "I knew we had good team spirit, so I decided to stick."

He said he is slated for a front-office job next season. He would assume the job as president of the Aeros if a proposed change of ownership takes place.

The crowd of 8,638 gave the Aeros a standing ovation after the final buzzer pounded Monday night.

Coach Jean-Guy Gendron said the first game of the series in Houston, when his club went through a series of upsets because of a mix-up in accommodation arrangements, before bowing 6-3 to the Aeros, had "killed" his team.

"But I never thought we would lose four in a row," Gendron said. "It's not an excuse, but we missed J. C. Tremblay." The Nordiques played all four games without Tremblay's services. The veteran defenceman was sidelined by calcium deposits in his right shoulder, a condition that caused the shoulder to stiffen.

Miracles Make It in New York

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — If you believe coach Fred Shero, his Philadelphia Flyers are not playing defensive-minded hockey against New York Islanders.

Assistant coach Mike Nykoluk agrees but goaltender Gerry Cheevers of the Islanders and defenceman Joe Watson of the Flyers have different opinions.

The teams are tied 3-3 in their best-of-seven National Hockey League semi-final series with the final game here tonight, starting at 8 p.m. EDT.

The Islanders, who lost the first three games of the series before coming back with three wins to tie it, could set a Stanley Cup playoff record if they beat the defending champions tonight.

A win at the Spectrum, where the New York club has lost nine in its league and playoff games in its three-year existence, would make the Islanders the first team in NHL history to erase 3-0 series deficits in two consecutive series.

The Islanders' first four-game comeback was against Pittsburgh Penguins in the quarter-final, matching a feat performed only once before, by Toronto Maple Leafs in 1945.

"We're not playing defensive-minded hockey," Shero said Monday. "The goalie (Bench) has been outstanding. We won the first game of the series 4-0, but we played better Sunday in losing 3-1.

"You could have five goals and not play that well. You could win 1-0 and it would be a beautiful game."

Nykoluk said he thought the Flyers had too many faceoffs in Sunday's loss at Uniondale, N.Y. "If you control the faceoffs, you control the puck and the game. We didn't want to make any mistakes when we were ahead so we let it down when we were defensive."

Watson said: "We started taking it to them in the third period after we got behind. We did that in the first and second it would have been our game. Now we played too defensive."

Ross Lonsberry's goal gave the Flyers the lead in the first period Sunday but Denis Potvin scored in the second to tie it up and Gerry Hart's third-period goal put the Flyers in the lead.

Bench, a 36-year-old native of Moose Jaw, Sask., who played only two NHL games before this season, said:

"The Flyers love to sit on a one-goal lead. That's their game.

"They get ahead and play their positional game and frustrate the hell out of you. They try to get you mad that you'll take unnecessary chances and make a mistake, then they pounce on you. You have to be patient against the Flyers, hide your game, play your system, (then you might get a break."

Meanwhile, Flyers goal Bernie Parent allowed himself to be distracted from the playoffs long enough to collect $18,000 cheque Monday. It was the prize for being picked on NHL's outstanding player in a competitive poll by Shero attended the presentation and said he had to share the honor by his players making such appearances during playoffs.

"I don't believe in hiding a team like Montreal Canadiens do," said Shero.

"I've tried that myself and it's never been successful. My body's happy being away from the general run of life. We have to go up into the mountains and look at each other."

The winner of tonight's game, which will be televised on the CBC national network, goes against Buffalo Sabres in the Stanley Cup final series starting Thursday.

How Are We Losing? Let's Count the Ways

By MEL SUPREN
CP Sports Editor

If New York Islanders continue their second playoff comeback in a month by defeating Philadelphia Flyers in tonight's deciding game of the National Hockey League semi-finals they will become part of a proud tradition.

They will add a new chapter to the story of New York's sporting miracles of the last quarter century.

The first, and still most memorable, was the 1951 National League baseball playoff between New York Giants and Brooklyn Dodgers which was decided by Bobby Thomson's dramatic home run.

JOE WATSON

No team has ever come back from a three-game deficit but the Islanders have a chance to do that by knocking off the defending champions, Flyers in Philadelphia tonight.

If they manage it, the Giants, Jets and Mets will have to wait even for another miracle.

Actually, Thomson's homer was only the crowning touch to a miraculous comeback. The Giants had been 13½ games behind the Dodgers on Aug. 11, 1951. The next day they launched a 16-game winning streak and won 37 of 44 games to finish in a tie with Brooklyn.

Each team won one game in the best-of-three National League playoff. The Giants, playing at home in the Polo Grounds, came to the bottom of the ninth in the deciding game trailing 4-1. They scored one run and had Whitey Lockman on second and pinch runner Clint Hartung on third with two out. That's when Thomson hit the homer to send the Giants into the series.

They ran out of miracles at that point however, losing to New York Yankees in six games.

In the 1969 Superbowl, played at the Orange Bowl in Miami on Jan. 11, quarterback Joe Namath seemed the only person willing to give the Jets a chance to defeat the Colts, who had lost only once that season. In fact Namath guaranteed victory, though few believed him.

Before 75,337 fans, Namath converted the skeptics by completing 17 of 28 passes for 206 yards to give the American Football League its first victory over the National Football League. And it wasn't really close. The Jets built up a 16-0 lead before the Colts' Johnny Unitas directed them to their only touchdown late in the fourth quarter.

The 1969 baseball Mets were a bunch of nobodies who had finished in previous season with a 73-89 record, a .328 batting average, good enough for ninth place, they beat even finish in the National League. That, they had two strong arms in Tom Seaver and Jerry Koosman and a pretty fair hitter in Cleon Jones. But that was about it.

After losing the World Series opener, they seemed on their way to defeat.

But they came back with four victories in succession, Koosman winning two, Seaver one and Gary Gentry one, to complete their climb from mediocrity to fame.

OK Islanders, your turn.

FRED SHERO

Another was the completely unexpected 16-7 Jets' triumph over Baltimore Colts in football's 1969 Superbowl.

And a third was the 1969 World Series victory by the Amazin' Mets over the heavily favored Baltimore Orioles.

The Islanders have already performed one minor miracle, coming back to beat Pittsburgh Penguins four in a row after losing the first three games in their best-of-seven Stanley Cup quarter-final.

But there was a precedent for that. Toronto Maple Leafs had performed the feat against Detroit Red Wings in the 1942-43 Stanley Cup.

Sabres' Dudley Will Return

BUFFALO (CP) — Thanks to New York Islanders, winger Rick Dudley will have a chance to play in the Stanley Cup finals.

Dudley, a 31-goal scorer for Buffalo Sabres during the regular National Hockey League season, has been out of action since April 27 when he injured his left knee in the opening game of the Sabres' semi-final series against Montreal Canadiens.

"The knee has been a lot better in the last couple of days," Dudley said Monday.

"I'm real lucky because of the fact the Islanders have extended the series. It's given me a lot of extra time."

The Islanders lost the first three games of their semi-final with Philadelphia Flyers but have extended the series by winning the last three games. The seventh and deciding game of the Philadelphia tonight.

On Thursday night, when the current series starts, the Sabres would have had a week's rest.

Dudley, who plays Toronto during the summer, was a member of the Buffalo Sabres' one League champion Rochester Griffins last year. He has also played on amateur lacrosse championship teams in Toronto as well as with Cincinnati Swords when they won the Canadian Lacrosse League championship in 1972-73.

"It's been a tremendous thrills," Dudley said of his previous championship years. "I don't get too many chances to treat play in the Stanley Cup.

"We (the Sabres) were fighting to battle it out with California for the last playoff spot this year. Some people even thought California ahead of us. Those things just started to jell toward the end.

"It's got to be a bigger thrill when you win and aren't favored."

The Sabres, who defeated Montreal 4-2 in their best-of-seven semi-final last Thursday, were even rated as underdogs in the series against Montreal despite the fact they finished with 113 points during the regular season, the same as Montreal.

Good Publicity Frightens Potvin

UNIONDALE, N.Y. — The hot sudden rise of New York Islanders has generated so much publicity that it frightens Denis Potvin, who is staying in this country this summer to promote the team.

"It's really unbelievable," said the Islander defenceman. "It's like the sports pages because he fears all the nice things writers are saying about him might go to his head at the wrong time.

Underdogs like the Islanders provide the copy that sports writers like to read. The Islander success so far in the playoffs has earned the club title of "hockey's miracle workers," and this scares Potvin.

The job is not yet completed for the Islanders in the trail to the Stanley Cup and it might not be this year. No matter how the Islanders were, they struck in the chase, and tonight they can take a giant step in the deciding semi final game against the defending champion Philadelphia Flyers.

Potvin, of course, has been one of the stars of the Islander success. He was the man who spearheads the Islander power play, one of the factors that the Islanders showing in their best of seven series against the Flyers.

"You know, you read the papers," Potvin said. "I actually try not to do that. You get a little too confident and over aggressive if you read about yourself."

Coach Fred Shero of the Flyers was asked about the chance of introspectivity his club was supposed to have before it was pierced by the Islanders.

"We never thought that way," Shero said after the Islanders won 3-1 here Sunday against the Flyers to deadlock the semi final series 3-3.

"We've not been that way. We know everybody is a challenge and we work just as hard, no matter who it is."

But the Islanders have been more than a challenge to Shero side.

They ended Philadelphia's unbeaten string at 21 games, snapped an eight game playoff winning streak and ended the Flyers record of having won 12 consecutive playoff games on home ice.

In six games the Flyers have outshot New York 171 144, yet they are even in goals scored at 15 apiece. The Islander power play produced six goals, the Flyers got only two, plus one shorthanded effort.

In the sets, Glenn Resch has emerged as the sports hero. Flyers' Venina Trophy winner, Bernie has allowed 11 goals in four games, Resch 10 in five. Parent 6 1-3, Resch 3 1.

Parent hasn't said much about his right knee, injured during a pre-game warmup April 29.

Wayne Stephenson appeared to be the first two games and won 4-0 and 5-4. Bernie had a 1-4 shutout in the third game very little work. Then he had the next three by 4-3, 5-1 and 3-1.

BISL Start Looks Good

The Belleville Industrial Softball League got under way on two fronts Monday night and if initial contests are any indication of what's to come, BISL fans are in for some keen competition.

At Sir Mackenzie Bowell Black Diamond nipped Brooks Band 4-3 and at Queen Elizabeth Mead Johnson and the Independents battled to a 3-3 tie.

Black Diamond took the win with a single run in the sixth, inning after Brooke Bond had rallied with four in the fifth to tie things at five apiece.

Dale Acorn shared mound duties for the chemsemen fanning nine and walking seven. Tom St. Jules was the loser striking out eight and walking none.

Acorn helped his own cause with a three run homer in the first inning. Jack Francis supported him with a four bagger of his own and two singles.

Don Goddefroy was tops for Brooke Bond with a double.

Meads rallied with two runs in the top of the seventh to earn the split with the Independents. Sonny Holoway and Harold Wilkenson fanned 11 in defendents in all while Fred Davis, Greg Bellis and Earl Colins put together four strikeouts.

Ken Bertrand cranked a home run and a single, Doug Boonshower got a triple and a double and George Foote added a double and a single to lead up the Independents attack.

Rick Farrell was tops for Meads with a double and a single.

Computer Picks Parent

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Goalie Bernie Parent of Philadelphia Flyers received a $10,000 award Monday for being judged the outstanding player in the National Hockey League in the 1974-75 season.

Based on a computer analysis, he was the most productive and consistent player in the NHL. Every statistical x-ray of his goaltending play was recorded, computed and then applied against a mean standard of excellence for goalies.

Parent the computer said exceeded the standard by a larger margin than any other player at any other position.

Parent, who was the league's Vezina Trophy this past season as the best goalie, had the lowest goals against average (3.03), the most shutouts (12) and the most victories (44).

He had a saves percentage of .917 and was one of two goalies to play more than 4,000 minutes. He compiled a productive efficiency rating (PER) of 67.2 in the computer study.

HOCKEY TIPS

Copyright 1976, Toronto Sun Syndicate

CUTTING AROUND PLAYERS

Using one hand on the stick is not one thing which minor hockey players should do generally. However, when it comes to cutting around players, one hand on the stick might be a way of doing it.

In football, I'm sure you've seen plays where the ball carrier uses a straight arm or employs his free arm in ward off a tackler. Hockey players often come close to doing the very same things because sometimes the best way to cut around a man is to put the puck on the backhand to your offwing and, leaning slightly, use the other arm to prevent him from stopping you.

In the picture, you'll note the puck was on my backhand and I was cutting around Ron Ellis of Toronto Maple Leafs but he avoided my progress by wrapping me up momentarily.

I continued to move forward and used my left arm for balance expecting to complete the move around Ellis. On plays such as this, the checker, in this case Ellis, might be in line for a penalty, but I can't stop to wait for an official to call a penalty. It's wise to keep moving just in case an infraction is missed.

Once the checker is bypassed, it's vital to put your head up and move the puck to the punch easier forehand.

Another way of cutting around players can be done on the forehand by simply keeping both hands on your stick and leaning on the opposing player with your body.

There's still enough time to practice this skill by getting a teammate to practice with you. Try leaning into the checker, then try using the extended arm method.

If you can't get a partner, set up a series of chairs and cut around them. You might even consider cutting around the net.

Cross - Country Attracts 150

BANCROFT A rugged 3-600 meter cross country race course set out in Bancroft last week was used by more than 150 Hastings County elementary school children for the first county-wide meet.

According to the coaches of the teams from Bancroft, Belleville, Centre Hastings and Trenton, the meet was well run and of value to the youngsters who participated.

Approximately 20 young athletes were entered in the meet from each of the Associated School groups in the county.

A large van was also fielded from Sir James Whitney School.

Olympic Report A Bit Deceiving

MONTREAL (CP) The International Olympic Committee in Rome will be presented today with an optimistic report on preparations for the 1976 Olympic Games.

The report, released at a news conference Monday by the Olympics organizing committee, paints a rosy picture of progress towards the July 17 opening date.

The report was prepared before a walkout by construction workers last month paralyzed Olympic building sites.

Should the work stoppage continue for a long time, the costs could rise, Simon St. Pierre, executive vice-president of the organizing committee, told reporters. But he insisted he was confident that the Games would begin on schedule.

The report said that in general, "construction is adhering to critical deadlines" on all projects.

Work on the Olympic Village, which will house athletes, is "in about 90 per cent of schedule," despite a seven-week strike of iron workers last December and January, which interrupted all construction at the east-end site, and that it may be completed before the end of 1975, the report says.

Although the report did not say the Olympic cost program was not yielding anticipated returns, it said the program had "felt the impact of the world economic situation and the labor disruption at the Royal Canadian Mint."

To date, the program has realized net profits of less than $20 million on gross sales of $225 million. The Olympic organizing committee expects $22 million of these profits.

The Olympic stamp program was faring better and was on target towards its goal of providing $10 million revenue for the Games. The first four of eight issues returned $2 million net revenue to the organizing committee, the report said.

Athletes Will Do Well Despite Help

WINNIPEG (CP) Performances by Canadian athletes in international competitions, including the 1976 Olympics, will be achieved in spite of the Canadian system, not because of it, says Canadian shotputter Bruce Pirnie.

"I'M the Canadian people, whether they like it or not, are going to be disappointed in the sporting world by the athletes' performances . . . performances which for the most part, will be achieved in spite of the Canadian system, not because of it," he told the Provincial sports awards banquet Saturday.

The bronze medal winner at the 1974 Commonwealth Games said it cost him more than $7,000 in lost wages to train for the Olympic Games in Munich.

Four Innings a Lot Of Work

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Relieve John Denner of Los Angeles Dodgers probably couldn't pitch four innings every day, his manager Walter Alston says. But he certainly could, and did, Monday night.

The left-hander, usually called in during shaky situations, entered the game against St. Louis in the seventh inning and secured a victory as the Dodgers defeated the Cardinals 8-4 in 10 innings.

Expos Trounce Braves

Scanlon Roars Into Lineup

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Expos discovered Monday night that they have had a tiger sitting on his tail.

Pat Scanlon came off the bench because regular third baseman Larry Parrish was ailing and Scanlon responded to his first starting appearance by collecting two hits, including a three-run home run, to behind the Expos to an 11-1 win over Atlanta Braves in National League baseball action.

"I felt good hitting early," said Scanlon, who also drops in a run with a first-inning infield out.

PAT SCANLON

Scanlon, who had two hits in his 4-hole going into the game, said his homer that helped a five-run third inning came on a timely swing. The ball stayed fair in the foul pole down the right-field line.

"Heck, a ball like that I usually foul off," the left-handed hitter said of the inside fastball. "The swing I had at that ball was the only one I could have hit and keep it fair."

Manager Gene Mauch said he decided to start Scanlon after a game Sunday against Houston Astros. "It was in the training room when I saw Parrish's knee and thumb. He's banged up a little. But they're all knees because we know they can do some things."

The Expos scored two runs in the first, another in the second on Gary Carter's second homer of the season, and chased Braves starter Carl Morton, now 5-3, with the third-inning offensive. It was the fourth Expos's first loss in seven decisions against his old club.

Wisner Reves Rogers, 2-4, picked up his first victory by five lifetime decisions against the Braves. He scored a fifth-inning run, drawing a walk, advancing to third on a single and coming home on a fielder's choice.

Tony Scott drilled a seventh-inning single to score the other Expos run and Earl Williams led off the ninth with his third homer of the season to account for Atlanta's only score.

Marshall Placed On Disabled List

MIKE MARSHALL

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Mike Marshall, ace reliever of Los Angeles Dodgers, was placed on the 21-day disabled list Monday.

Since April 28, the Cy Young award winner for the best National League pitcher of 1974 has collected 7 hits in 3 scoreless outings in his left ub cage, and manager Walter Alston doesn't want to use him until he is well.

Marshall's stint on the disabled list will be retroactive to May 10, meaning he can appear again May 31.

Injured while pitching against San Francisco, he left the game, returned May 3 against San Diego and aggravated the injury.

Six days later, he tried again against Pittsburgh and was ineffective. He said there still was pain.

Roberts Does Re-write Job

LEON ROBERTS

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pitcher Dennis Leonard may have the book on Leon Roberts, but he apparently didn't read up on him Monday night.

Instead, Roberts may have wrote a new job.

he husky right fielder connected his fifth home run in 11 games—that's every game he's whacked off the ball this season—and unloaded a three-run homer off Leonard in the sixth-inning to help Detroit Tigers beat Kansas City Royals 8-4.

In the only other American League baseball game Monday, Oakland A's beat Boston Red Sox 5-3.

Roberts' fellow rookie Vern Ruhle, who relief-hels in the eighth inning from John Hiller, got the victory, although he broke his left ankle sliding, two short of the team record.

Kansas City manager Jack McKeon couldn't figure out how Leonard offers up the gopher ball.

"He did not pitch the way we talked about pitching him," McKeon said. "He's got the book on him. Roberts had a tough time against him in the minors."

Roberts seemed almost surprised as anyone that he got the homer, his third of the season, off Leonard.

"I saw him last year (in the American Association) and he had a good year," said the 6-foot-3, 205-pounder. "He was tough on me. I'd say he was the best pitcher in the league.

Roberts, a right-handed hitter, was platooned the first few weeks of the season, batting only against left-handed pitchers. Now he plays every day. Leonard is a right-hander.

His homer followed a walk and a single by Bill Freehan. Willie Horton contributed a double, two-run single in the third for the Tigers.

Jim Hoit's two-run pinch single highlighted a four-run rally in the seventh for Oakland.

ANNOUNCE TOUR

GLASGOW (Reuter) — The Scottish Football League chairman Rangers announced Monday a soccer tour of Canada. New Zealand has been invited to play May and June. The team will fly 32 players to Canada for a game on May 29, then fly to New Zealand for two games and to Australia for four.

AEGON SIGN SCOTT

TORONTO (CP) — Bruce Scott, a six-foot-two 205-pound defensive end and offensive guard from the University of Maryland, has been signed by Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League. He played with Philadelphia Bell of the World Football League last season.

Post Amazed By Popularity

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — The glamor and excitement of Hockey Canada's pro tour still doesn't seem to have caught up to Sandra Post, whose seven-year pro career has suddenly taken a turn for the better.

For example, Miss Post was chased when on vacation here and, as a result, she saw her family for "a total of about five minutes" during the first 48 hours of her visit.

But she's not complaining. "I think it would upset me more if nobody called."

And she shook her head in amazement when she recalled how one magazine "writer recently spent five days interviewing her for one article.

But while Sandra refuses to take herself seriously as a celebrity, she is very serious about playing winning golf.

After a promising start in 1968 when she won the LPGA Rookie of the Year award on her appearance, her career hit the doldrums about four years ago. Her confidence was shot, the emotional upheaval of her divorce from Ken Post was hard on her way back to the top and last December she won the Colgate Far East tournament in Chinese, Australia.

Her career earnings on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour for four years ago was about $6th.

Last year, she was ranked 18th and earned more than $20,000. This year she is 6th on the LPGA official LPGA earnings and she is seventh on the money list.

"I got my determination back and I started regaining really confidence. I believe in my ability now. That's the important thing."

Montreal Trounces Maryland

MONTREAL (CP) — Brian Tasker's three-goal explosion in the final period couldn't save the Maryland Arrows from a 22-8 loss to Montreal Quebecois in a National Lacrosse League game Monday.

Tasker, who top scorer for his team, followed by Paul Saggese with three goals, and single goals added by John McKenna, Bill Cuthill, Rick McKenna and Jerry McKenna.

Ken Montouri scored four Quebecois goals. Dale Mackenzie, Gerry Gaudet, Gerry Fisher and John Davis netted two apiece while Bruce Tunney, Jim Limmeberger, Gord Ostiecheck, Serge Latour, Bill Cuthill, Paul Nunn and Bill Sheehan added singles.

Arrows, Quebecois Most Proficient

MONTREAL (CP) — The only National Lacrosse League game Monday night pitted Maryland Arrows, owners of the league's most effective power play, against Montreal Quebecois, who boasted the best penalty-killing record.

Going into the game at Montreal, the Arrows had scored 17 power-play goals in 97 numerical advantages for a 52.5-percent efficiency mark.

The Quebecois, meanwhile, had given up 25 goals in 69 disadvantages for a 63.8-per-cent penalty-killing success record.

Long Island Tomahawks, mired in last place, boasted the second-best power play, scoring 19 goals in 79 chances for 48.7 per cent. Third-place Philadelphia Wings were third in power-play success, scoring 46.9 per cent of the time.

Second-place Montreal followed with a 46.6-per-cent mark and Boston Bolts were successful on 40.4 per cent of their chances. Quebec Carbines are struggling with only nine power-play goals in 39 tries for 23.1 per cent.

Indian Boutique Opens in Picton

By MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Ved Sethi, an aspiring Indian actor was rejected for lead roles in the movies because he was "just too short for a hero" but his dramatic clothing designs imported to a new Picton shop lead the fashion scene.

Orient Clothing, a third store in Mr. Sethis' chain opened in the Armory Mall this week featuring dresses of handmade and hand-embroidered blouses, dresses and Unisex apparel.

Mr. Sethi says he worked as an assistant film director and a building contractor in Delhi, India, until about six years ago when he visited Canada for a reunion with his brother.

"It is a young country filled with new things," he observed.

Impressed by what he had seen he decided to leave India permanently.

In 1972, he opened a clothing boutique in Kingston and later followed this business venture with a shop in Napanee. The Picton boutique is the third link in a growing chain of sales outlets for colorful crafts.

"Everything is from India and Pakistan," said Mr. Sethi, indicating his stock.

He observed most of the clothing items were popular in India until recently, but some have been replaced by other new styles. In Canada however, the bright cotton tops embroidered with flowers and intricate designs remain perennial favorites.

In addition to clothing the boutique specializes in brass ware and wooden ware, all hand-made and hand-designed. There are also several Mexican and West African pieces.

"Ninety-five percent of the things are from India," said Mr. Sethi.

Orient Clothing also features accessories such as handbags and sandals crafted from buffalo leather and exotic jewelery.

Mr. Sethi says he designs much of the clothing sold in his shops and sends drawings to his workmen in India.

The proprietor of Picton's newest boutique lives in Kingston and commutes his shops in Napanee and Picton daily.

Eastern Promise

LONDON (CP)—In recognition of the growing oil wealth of the Middle East, Sotheby's, the international fine art auctioneers, will open an office in Tehran to give information and advice and to distribute catalogues. But no sales are planned there yet.

Home of The Week

DESIGN R3-476
1,832 Sq. Ft.

An essentially maintenance-free exterior is a prime consideration in this elegant ranch style home. Stone and brick veneer and small areas of cedar shakes will last many, many years without any care.

An excellent floor plan is provided. Note the convenience of being able to enter from three outdoor areas and from the rear of the garage. A corner fireplace in the living room will provide many hours of enjoyment on cold winter evenings.

The kitchen is in the form of a compact U, starting with the built-in oven and ending with the built-in range and it serves both a family-sized breakfast nook and a separate dining room. A main floor laundry is conveniently nearby.

The large main bathroom is entered directly from two bedrooms and from the hall which makes it, in effect, ensuite with either of the two large bedrooms. It has an angled tub with shower over and double and single vanities. A convenient powder room is located at the other end of the house. Plans cover building with or without a basement.

Plans for Design R3-476 cost $35 for the first set, $11 each additional set and are supplied by return mail.

Order from Home Planning, 40 Jarvis St., Toronto, Ont.

Bedore Charged Following Crash

MARMORA — An RR3, Marmora man has been charged by provincial police with making an improper turn following a two-car collision one half mile east of Marmora on Highway 7, Sunday.

Charged is Dale Bedore, 17, of RR2, Marmora.

Both vehicles were eastbound on the roadway when Doug Smith, 18, of Marmora driving a pickup truck, attempted to pass the Bedore vehicle.

IN MEMORIAM

LANGHOLT — In loving memory of a loving son, Larry Arthur Langholt who passed away May 14, 1968. Your heart was the dearest in all the world, dear Larry.

For love is love and nothing else matters in the world, or could take your place.

You are still the dearest of all.

Sadly lost, but never forgotten.

Remembered by Mom, Dad, sisters and brothers.

LANGHOLT — In loving memory of our dear son and brother, Larry Langholt.

Of longer hours we once enjoyed, How sweet their memory still.

But now we walk in sadness,

The world has lost its charm.

Always remembered by grandmother and Mrs. Langholt and children.

DEVINEAU — In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother, Mrs. Hazel Devineau, who died May 14, 1971.

Time doesn't erase the memory,

Or cover over pain for the loss

And those who think of her today,

Are those who think of her always.

The memory of her never let grow cold,

But let it live in the heart she has left behind.

Never fade away.

—Lovingly remembered by Mary and Bill Gordon, grandchildren.

CARDS OF THANKS

Mrs. Peter James Laskaris and family wish to express their sincere thanks to relatives, friends and neighbours for their kindness and expressions of sympathy during their loss in the death of a loving husband, father and stepfather. We wish to express our thanks to Dr. Patterson, Mr. Bedford, Mrs. Ketcheson, the Belleville Ambulance Service for all care and attention given to our husband and father. Special thanks to the Rev. Special Housing Assistance for Veterans
The Department of Veterans Affairs will provide
- an additional grant of up to $600 a year—for veterans* who obtain new house loans from Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation and who require additional assistance to the interest reducing grants available to moderate income families under the Assisted Home Ownership Program. AHOP reduces monthly payments to a reasonable proportion of a family's income.
- an additional grant of up to $600 a year—for veterans* who obtain new house loans from NHA approved lenders and who require additional assistance to the that available under AHOP. This will enable many veterans to become homeowners who would not otherwise find it possible despite the existing favourable provisions of the AHOP plan.
- a grant of up to $600 a year—for veterans* who do not qualify for AHOP because they have no dependent children or because they want to buy an existing house. To qualify a veteran must obtain an NHA insured loan from an approved lender and must not have owned a house in the previous three years.
- a grant of 10% of capital costs—in addition to CMHC benefits —for non-profit groups who obtain NHA loans to develop low-rental housing projects intended primarily, but not exclusively, for veterans.

*Veterans of World War II and the Korean conflict as defined in the Veterans' Land Act.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Wednesday, May 14, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be sure to keep promises you make in the morning, especially those involving family members who believe in Santa Claus.

TAURUS (April 20-May 2.) A co-worker may be depending on you. Don't simply assume you wrote today because he's uncertain of your motives. Don't be subtle.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Don't lend your money or something you prize to one you know may be a bad risk in any way. You could wind up a loser.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your mind and emotions are extremely important today. Others will tend to judge you on your decisions.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) What may be just a harmless fling on your part may be taken seriously by the object of your intentions. Be careful.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be on your guard not to be drawn into an expensive outside activity by a friend who can afford it. You can't.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) When dealing with an financial contact today, be sure you doesn't feel you're being her. Show proper gratitude for concessions of favors.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 22) Generosity is a virtue you're fortunate to have, but avoid the habit of giving a person more than he has a right to ask.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 22) You'll have to be much firmer than you've been if you expect a friend to take care of a long-standing obligation she owes you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 23-Jan. 20) You'll yield too easily to pressure in making a decision today. The end result will benefit only the other party.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Don't lay too much of the burden you should be carrying upon others today or you'll have a 48-hour strike to contend with.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You'll going in contact with socially today is not all he appears to be. Don't be captivated by his charm.

Opening lead — 3 ♦

By OSWALD AND JAMES JACOBY

Here is another Belladonna hand that shows the advantage gained by defeats in holding back his ace of trumps. Unlike some cards, that one ace is worth to win a trick whenever it is played.

West opens the three of diamonds against South's four-heart contract. You East analyze the lead as fourth best from a four or five-card suit. You Review the bidding and assume that South has seven hearts. He also holds at least three diamonds in you opinion. You expect to score three diamond tricks if your partner holds the king.

Your first impulse is to play the ace and another trump. If you do this declarer will discard his four of diamonds on dummy's spades and make an overtrick. If you don't lead trumps he will ruff his third diamond. Then what can you do?

Just lead your low trump! If South leads a second diamond your partner will win and play his last trump. Your ace of trumps and 10 of diamonds will set declarer.

All other lines of play will also leave him one trick short. That had of the low trump has cooked his goose.

What do you do now?

A — Bid three hearts. Your partner showed strength by his two-diamond call. He may have a very strong diamond suit. Some further forcing bid is indicated.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Your partner continues to three notrump. What do you do now?

To Your Good Health

Joint Inflammation Called Synovitis

By G. C. THOREESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thoreson: I am 32 years old. Two years ago an orthopedic surgeon told me I had synovitis in both knees. I got an injection in the knees, but I didn't notice any difference.

I've been told that outside of wearing a knee brace there is not much I can do about it, that it could go away as quickly as it appeared. I am limited when it comes to bending or kneeling.

Is it really a condition that cannot be treated?—Mrs. S. M.

Two years is a rather long time for such a condition to remain, and you should be re-examined to determine why healing has not occurred.

Synovitis (which has nothing to do with the synovial) is an inflammation of what is called the "synovial membrane," a viscous material which lines joint cavities. The inflammation can result from either an infection or an injury. In some cases there is a secretion of fluid into the joint cavity and result pain, especially when the limb is moved.

"Water on the knee" is a common term for what you experienced had. As in any joint disorder the symptoms may remain for a long time until the infection disappears or the fluid is removed and the joint gets back to normal. The goal of treatment is to promote absorption of the fluid out into the surrounding tissues. Conservative measures include resting of the joint. A gentle-pressure bandage can also help.

Dear Dr. Thoreson: I have heard that women of childbearing age do not have to worry about their intake of cholesterol, in the form of foods, have all the eggs and cheese decaloes can produce.

Yes, but that is what I like to call a "dangerous truth."

Thanks to the female hormones being produced during these years women do enjoy some immunity from the cholesterol problem. You will notice I say "some immunity." It is rather small, and not sufficient to allow a woman to ignore the matter entirely.

A sensible approach to cholesterol is to order at any age for either sex. That's because hardening of the arteries (in which cholesterol plays some role) begins at an early age and continues to do so throughout our lives. It, in fact, may be the great respecter of sex.

Cholesterol is a complex subject about which much has been written, some true but much of it of doubtful validity and medical soundness. As my readers know, I am a "middle-of-the-road" in this matter.

Dear Dr. Thoreson: Some recipes for making soup suggest boiling a whole chicken, turkey or beef bones for two or three hours, using the remaining liquid as a base for soups and for which to cook vegetables, beans, etc.

Does such a liquid contain things injurious to good health?—A. W.

This would not fall into the category of most critical of surgeries, usually a no-no in a great deal of cases, but it is a great diet. I see no objection to it.

It is chiefly the high-purine foods (organ meats, etc.) that are to be avoided. Dieting for gout has been demonstrated in recent years in favor of the new drugs which can keep the gout in bounds.

I must add, however, that the beans you mention using for a soup are considered purine-food, and, strictly speaking, should also be avoided.

Dear Doctor: Please tell me what the function of the brain is? When it becomes changed, can it be cured? Is it a personal sign? Can the end be subpoed? If so, would it cause any speech impairment?—Mrs. L. T.

Respecting your wish not to use your real initials, I'll inform readers that "L. T." stands for "long uvula."

The uvula (which means "little grape" in its Latin derivation) is a hanging, fleshy tissue. The one to which you refer is obviously the pulmonic uvula, the bit of tissue "left over" in the formation of the palate.

To your knowledge, it has no obvious function. If it is too long, the uvula can be a nuisance, tickling the back of the throat, causing the cough, especially when lying down. It can be removed surgically to bring it down to a reasonable size, and this will not affect your speech. But it cannot be reduced by dieting.

Dear Dr. Thoreson: I am a woman 70 years old, and have been in good health all of my life.

Recently my stool has become black. Can you explain this?—A. M.

A black stool that persists for over two movements is sometimes a cause for medical investigation. It can indicate bleeding from an ulcer or a diverticulum, or from some infection.

Occasionally dark stool can result from medication—bismuth, for example. Also, food high in iron content or iron supplement—L. T.

It can be any of these things, but the black stool has persisted you should be checked promptly.

Dear Dr. Thoreson: When you overfeed a baby, do fat cells develop which make it difficult to lose weight when the child is an adult?—Mrs. W. J.

Yes, larger, than-normal fat cells can develop in the overfed infant and carry over into adulthood. Such cells do not disintegrate readily with the usual weight-reduction attempts.

This can account for some of the measures reducers encounter. Also, as Dr. H's. L. Ch. Ter. reasons not is make the baby fat with overeating.

CP News Roundup

Man Held For Murder

TORONTO (CP) — John Bednar, 39, of Toronto was charged early today with murder punishable by life imprisonment in the death of Margaret Fraser of Toronto, whose mutilated body was found Monday in a downtown laneway.

Police said the legs of the 30-year-old woman were missing, that her head had been cut and stabbed several times.

Sgt. James Mabury said the legs of the woman had been cut off after death. He refused to say whether the legs had been found.

There were no signs of blood leading to the lane and police believe the body had been dumped there.

It is believed the woman, also known as Margaret Fox, was killed within the last few days, police said.

Lots of Gas

WASHINGTON (CP) — A key executive of Alaskan Arctic Natural Gas (AAG) estimated Monday before the Federal Power Commission (FPC) that Canada's Mackenzie Delta has an estimated 35.3 trillion cubic feet of natural gas available for use.

E. A. Olson, vice-president of AAG, said the total includes a potential 20 trillion cubic feet beneath the neighboring Beaufort Sea and another 8.3 trillion feet of proven, probable and possible reserves within the delta itself.

He testified as the commission continued its study of an Alaskan Arctic proposal to tap the gas fields of Prudhoe Bay, Alaska, and the Mackenzie Delta and pipe the gas south through Canada to markets in Western Canada and the U.S.

Fall 22 Storeys

MONTREAL (CP) — Two window washers who fell 22 storeys to a concrete roof Monday were listed in satisfactory condition by doctors at St. Luc Hospital.

"I guess it wasn't my hour to die," Gilles Campeau, 36, said from his hospital bed Monday night as nurses tried to find feeling in his legs.

Mr. Campeau and Pierre Picke, 41, suffered multiple bone fractures in the fall from the face of the Maison Radio Canada, the CBC tower in downtown Montreal. But only Picke sustained a head injury.

Fatalities Fewer

TORONTO (CP)—The number of car crashes increased in 1974 but a lower percentage of them involved fatalities, says a survey released Monday by the Ontario ministry of transportation and communications.

More Charges Laid

TORONTO (CP) — Ronald Steven Fox, 21, faces a third murder in connection with the shooting last Wednesday of Michael Hanlon, a 15-year-old Jamaican, was charged Monday with attempted murder in connection with the shooting of two black musicians last January, police said.

Both charges carry a maximum sentence of life imprisonment.

Reactor Leaks

PICKERING, Ont. (CP) — Heavy water has been discovered in the closed-collection system of Reactor No. 4 at the nuclear power station in the community of about 15 miles northeast of Toronto, Ontario Hydro reported Monday.

Hydro officials said in a news release that the heavy water, discovered late Saturday, is contained and no radioactivity can escape to the atmosphere.

Back Women

Detect Cancer

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Paul Gold of Montreal said Monday a test for intestinal cancer that shows the exact location of a tumor works in experimental animals with colon cancer and is being applied for possible human application.

Thomson in China

HONG KONG (CP) — Canadian-born newspaper magnate Lord Thomson of Fleet left for Canton by train today on a visit to China at the invitation of the Chinese government.

Lord Thomson, 81, owner of more than 200 newspapers in the world, quipped:

"As a Canadian to an optician to an officer I want to challenge Chairman Mao to a swim in the river."

Choice Hard

OTTAWA (CP) — A seminar on the health effects of chemicals in foods was told Monday that modern man has the choice of more food through the use of pesticides and other chemicals, or more starvation in a "clean and pure external environment."

Harding le Riche, a professor of epidemiology at the University of Toronto, said that in this chemical age man must learn to make the best use of "these remarkable substances we have made."

Foreigners Best

OTTAWA (CP) — Many farmers find imported seasonal labourers more attractive than Canadian workers because offshore recruits are a more stable source of supply, federal manpower officials say.

The situation is occurring despite general policy that domestic workers must be given first chance at farm labor jobs, the officials said in a recent interview on the government's farm labor pool program.

Meat Said Tainted

OTTAWA (CP) — Gus Mingo (PC—Grey-Simcoe) asked in the Commons Monday what action the government contemplated against Federal Packing Inc. of Magog, Que., or against retailers that bought meat from the company.

He said he has lots of bad meat—from dead and diseased animals, had been distributed. Mr. Mingo was a federal meat inspector before entering politics.

The federal health department issued an official warning Friday to consumers to be on the alert for tainted meat distributed by the company.

Rate Remains

OTTAWA (CP) — The traditional low rail rate for moving grain from Prairie elevators will remain in effect until the federal government can find a better way to subsidize Western farmers, Justice Minister Otto Lang said Monday.

Law No Answer

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis told the legislature Monday that the government cannot legislate against racism.

He was replying to Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party, who asked what action the province planned in light of the "obvious anxiety of the black community and the extremism of some tiny segments of the white community."

Nixon Challenges Davis To Legislate or Set Date

TORONTO (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Nixon challenged Premier William Davis Monday to present "a body of legislation" to members of the Ontario legislature, or call a spring election.

Mr. Nixon and the premier traded jibes in the legislature but Mr. Davis refused to commit himself to an election date.

"When are we going to get a legislative program or are we going to continue fiddling around here while you decide whether or not to have a spring election?" Mr. Nixon asked.

The only date left for Mr. Davis for an early election is June 28 and he would have to announce it by next Monday.

Will Co-operate

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Unions are ready to co-operate with provincial suggestions for economic restraints but only if all segments are equally controlled, says George Watson, Canadian director of the Textiles Workers of America.

Lodge Won't Open

TORONTO (CP) — Minaki Lodge, the provincial government's 77-room luxury tourist resort near Kenora, Ont., will remain closed this summer, Eric Winkler, chairman of cabinet's management board, told the legislature Monday.

Teen-agers Rejected

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's agriculture ministry is unable to expand its program to send city teen-agers to farms for summer visits because there are not enough farmers willing to take them, Agriculture Minister William Stewart said Monday. He said two of every three applications by this summer's junior agriculturist program are rejected by the ministry and be- turned down. There were more than 600 applicants but only 200 farmers willing to take part, he told Murray Gaunt (L—Huron-Bruce) during a debate on 1975-76 budget estimates of the ministry.

Changes Unlikely

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government is studying university-admission standards but it is unlikely any changes will be made before next year, James Auld, minister of colleges and universities, said Monday.

Picking Jurors

HAMILTON (CP) — Seven of 12 jurors were sworn in Monday for the trial of two men charged in connection with alleged Hamilton harbor dredging contract kickbacks.

Five men and two women were sworn in Monday and the process of jury selection continues today.

Hint at More Skeletons In Air Canada Closet Denied

OTTAWA (CP) — The opposition suggested Monday that Air Canada may have other skeletons in its closet but the allegation was quickly denied by the government and outside officials.

Elmer MacKay (PC—Central Nova) raised the issue by calling for an investigation of links between the public airline and management placement firms.

He said in the Commons he understood that a finder's fee had been paid in an executive of a replacement company who "arranged to have himself placed with Air Canada."

The individual stayed only nine months, then resigned. The finder's fee amounted to half the individuals Air Canada salary, he said, suggesting that a statement later denying any several.

But transport officials issued a statement later denying any improperly.

They identified the individual as Philippe Valois of Stethem Gareau-MSL Ltd., a Montreal placement agency, hired as director of organization and planning.

Mr. Valois stayed a total of 18 months with Air Canada, then left but did not return to his former employer. No placement fee was paid to Stethem Gareau, they said.

Trees, a City Trademark

John Bonter, a tree man with the Belleville parks board, prunes a young ash tree moments before it is given a permanent home on the lawn of the Belleville armories. Seven trees were planted Tuesday by Mr. Bonter and his aide, Doug McDermott. Initial pruning gives the young tree the best chance of growing strong and straight, said Mr. Bonter.

U.S. Given Three Days To Remove 800 Marines

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Premier Kukrit Pramoj has given the United States until Tuesday to remove 800 marines he said were landed in Thailand today without his permission.

The marines came ashore back up President Ford's demand for release of the U.S. freighter held by Cambodia's new Communist government.

Kukrit told reporters he would take "drastic action" if the U.S. did nothing after the marines from the territory of its only remaining ally on the Southeast Asian mainland.

Kukrit said Thailand does not intend to be drafted into U.S. preparations to take the ship back by force.

The premier delivered his ultimatum to U.S. Charge D'Affaires Edward Masters.

Neither the Thai government nor the U.S. embassy in Bangkok was informed in advance of the marines' arrival before dawn today.

Pro-Communist carrying anti-American posters flocked to the Bangkok airport to watch the arrival of the new U.S. ambassador, Charles Widmann.

The National Student Center, which led the uprising that ended the military dictatorship 19 months ago, accused the United States of using the Cambodian seizure of the freighter Mayaguez as an excuse to intervene again in Indochina.

Meanwhile, Thai communist sources reported that the Cambodians seized another foreign ship, the British-flag Grand, registered in Panama, today but released it after nearly two hours.

The sources said the ship was intercepted near the island of Poulopai, about 25 miles off the Cambodian and South Vietnamese coasts about 60 miles from where the Mayaguez was fired on and boarded Monday.

It was the fourth foreign freighter reported to have been seized by Cambodian gunboats since the Communist takeover in Phnom Penh. One of the others, another British freighter, was reported seized May 7 but was released after 48 hours.

U.S. planes kept watch on the 16,000-ton freighter Mayagues in the Gulf of Thailand. It was reported stationary near Cambodia's Poulo Wai Islands, 60 miles off the Cambodian coast.

The ship, manned by a crew of 39, was captured while on route from Hong Kong to Thailand with a cargo of military and civilian freight.

Pentagon sources said the aircraft carrier Coral Sea, escorting destroyers and at least two other destroyer vessels are close to the Gulf of Thailand.

Schools Said Not Serving Working Class

TORONTO (CP) — Leaders of Ontario and Quebec teachers agreed Tuesday that schools as they operate now are not serving the interests of working-class children.

James Forster, president of the 34,000-member Ontario Secondary School Teachers Federation, told a public meeting that "it is obvious that the schools of Ontario are not serving the interests of children of workers as they should."

Yves Charbonneau, president of the Quebec Teachers Corp. urged Ontario teachers to follow the example of their Quebec colleagues and "leave the ivory tower of professionalism" to join forces with other members of the working class in order to change the schools to help create a more egalitarian society.

Peterborough Sniper Dies

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — A major adult police at bay for more than two hours from a downtown home Tuesday before taking his own life. No one else was injured in the incident.

The sniper, identified by police as James Stewart, 24, of Peterborough, began firing random shots from the home at about 5 p.m. Tuesday. The home was quickly surrounded by 15 heavily armed officers but the man refused repeated requests to surrender.

A rifled shot was heard coming from the house at about 9 p.m., when police stormed the building an minutes later they found the man's body lying on a basement chesterfield. A .30-30 rifle lay nearby, next to the body.

Police Chief Jack Strubb said he tried to coax the gunman into surrender over the telephone, but that the man said he was afraid police would shoot him.

Social Order Put Ahead of Olympics

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Robert Bourassa, determined to re-establish order in his province's troubled construction industry, said Tuesday preservation of Quebec's social order is more important than staging the 1976 Olympic Games.

"Social order comes before everything, all events, and so matter how important they are," Mr. Bourassa said.

Work on the Olympics site and other major construction projects stopped May 5 when 5,000 workers walked off the job as part of a union confrontation with the Quebec government.

The government has tabled legislation which would put the construction union heads under trusteeship, following a recommendation of the Cliche commission which just completed a study of the province's construction industry.

A motion was passed in the national assembly Tuesday giving priority to emergency debate on the legislation, which passed second reading at dawn night Tuesday.

Premier Bourassa said later "My government possesses all the legislative powers to deal with the situation." Both the Olympic Games and social order were important. Neither was more important than the other.

But his earlier statement drew scathing reactions from Montreal municipal and Olympic organizing officials.

Raymond Beauchemin, an Olympic organizing committee official, said he did not believe that Premier Bourassa meant that the Games could be sacrificed. He said the organizing committee is at the mercy of the provincial government and the trade unions.

Mayor Jean Drapeau said if the Games were cancelled, "we'd be left with 500 more costly ruins in the world." He said all revenue-producing programs designed to pay the Games' $480 million bill would have to be halted.

Lawrence Hatfield, chairman of the Montreal Urban Community said Montreal would also suffer a serious setback if the Quebec government dropped the Olympics to pay labor peace. Construction has a wide impact on the whole economy of this city, he said.

More than 40 construction sites were shutdown with the walkout of 5,000 workers Tuesday; the strikes spread from the Montreal area to provincial centres, including Chicoutimi and Hull.

Nobody Working At Games Sites

MONTREAL (CP) — The cost-end Olympic Games building sites were idle again today as construction workers continued a walkout in protest against provincial government legislation designed to restore order in the industry.

About 9,000 workers went off the job at major building sites in the province at the work stoppages which began May 5 spread to areas outside Montreal.

Premier Robert Bourassa said in Quebec City Tuesday the 1976 Games would be "seriously threatened" if many more working days were lost through the dispute.

Mr. Bourassa said Tuesday the Games could not be postponed and would have to be held in 1976 or not at all.

Trudeau Will Visit School Here

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau will make a one-day visit to Belleville May 27 to address a town hall meeting at Centennial Secondary School.

Frank Chapman, president of the Belleville and District Liberal Association said today the prime minister will arrive by helicopter late Thursday afternoon and leave early Friday morning. He will spend the night at the Four Seasons Hotel.

Mr. Chapman said the meeting, which will begin at 8 p.m. will be a question and answer session, and is open to the public.

Northern To Close 3 Weeks

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Belleville's Northern Electric plant will be shut down for three weeks, instead of two weeks, in July, as a result of softness in product sales.

Milt Duffey, staffing manager for Northern here, Tuesday said the plant has a usual shut down for two weeks each July and that the extension this year to three weeks comes "because business volume is down."

Company employees would generally take two weeks paid holiday during the normal shut down, said Mr. Duffey. Some get three weeks holiday. "The company is encouraging staff to take their third week of holidays during the six-week shutdown extension."

Since last November the plant has suffered layoffs and setbacks in orders and has been forced to lay off approximately 475 of its original staff of 1,350.

"With this complete shutdown for three weeks it will make it possible to avoid a layoff," said Mr. Duffey.

He said it is difficult to predict the future but he does believe there will be layoffs between now and July.

"Though it sounds pessimistic, "we haven't turned the corner into strong, volume orders and there seem no signs for cheering."

Business Heads Meet Ministers

OTTAWA (CP) — Heads of some of the country's largest corporations and representatives of business organizations met here today with four cabinet members to discuss the government's voluntary wage and price control proposals.

This is the last in a series of meetings scheduled so far and the government plan has been stalled because of a cool reception from labor.

Included in the 37 businessmen were executive officers from such companies as Imperial Oil, International Nickel, MacMillan Bloedel, Royal Bank, General Motors, Steinberg-Sears, Dominion Stores, and Massey Ferguson.

The business leaders had few comments as they hurried into the meeting.

The possibility for success of the government efforts, being directed by Finance Minister John Turner, depends largely on whether further meetings with labor can be arranged. Mr. Turner is to be discussing the proposal with Prime Minister Trudeau and the anti-inflation program is expected to be debated fully at a cabinet meeting scheduled Friday.

The other three cabinet members at today's meeting were John Munro, labor; Alastair Gillespie, industry, trade and commerce; Don Jamieson, regional economic expansion.

News Briefs

Sue to Get Children

TORONTO (CP) — Kuan Yin Foundation of Burlington, Ont., a private adoption agency, said Tuesday it plans to file a lawsuit in the United States to secure the release of some children flown in to U.S. from Saigon. The agency said he has Canadian homes waiting for the children, who have been accepted as landed immigrants in Canada. All of them are severely physically handicapped from polio.

Snatra Wins Suit

LONDON (AP) — Singer Frank Sinatra won a libel suit today against the British Broadcasting Corp. which suggested in a television program he had connections with the Mafia. A high court judge awarded the United States entertainer "substantial" but undisclosed damages and the lawyer for the BBC defendants apologized to Sinatra "for the distress and damage to his reputation which they have caused."

Police Praised

QUEBEC (CP) — Justice Minister Jerome Choquette said Tuesday police conduct during the occupation of a United Aircraft of Canada Ltd. plant in the Montreal suburb of Longueuil, was "irreproachable." Mr. Choquette told a news conference that six police "acted properly" in evacuating about 50 men who occupied a part of the plant. "I am completely satisfied with the conduct of the police."

Dome Plan Backed

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Two St. Lawrence College students who plan to construct a geodesic dome over a model city somewhere in Northern Ontario, said Tuesday that they are receiving financial support. Larry Babcock, 19, and Robert Dupcun, 20, say they have financial backers who are willing to contribute from $100,000 to $300,000 toward the project.

Hastings Survey Made

Most Public School Teachers Expect 30 Per Cent More Pay

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

A majority of Hastings elementary teachers expect a salary increase of about 30 per cent this year with an adjustable cost-of-living clause in their new contract, The Intelligencer has learned.

An informal survey says that two-third of elementary teachers in Hastings County were surveyed earlier this year. The survey was designed to sample teacher expectations on salaries, fringe benefits and working conditions. It was conducted jointly by the local branches of the Ontario Public School Men's Teachers Federation and the Federation of Women Teachers Associations of Ontario.

Salary negotiations are now ongoing in the county between the Hastings County Board of Education and representatives of the county's 1,125 elementary and secondary school teachers. No settlement has been reached.

Director of education Eric Romanes said today he was unaware of the survey and its results. He said he could not make a comment due to an agreement between negotiating parties.

However, he did say negotiations are "proceeding extremely well" and that a settlement could be reached in the "near future."

The source said more than 90 per cent of teachers surveyed favored a 30 per cent salary increase and a cost-of-living clause (COLA) which would be adjusted every six months according to the consumer price index. These clauses are not unusual in recent labor contracts.

Apparently, the cost-of-living clause has been a contentious point in the current negotiations. Last year Hastings teachers received a salary increase of about 10 per cent with no cost-of-living clause.

Teachers also expressed a concern over the establishment of the Qualification Evaluation Council of Ontario (QECO), an informal council made up of four teachers' federations in the province.

The survey revealed that a majority of teachers wanted the QECO replacement dropped, requiring in some cases that department courses be replaced by university courses, removed from the agreement.

Teachers view this clause as a hardship on the senior teachers. They also wanted the QECO category less penalty to be removed. This clause would penalize teachers for not meeting certain qualifications.

The QECO is a type of disciplinary board which is attempting to establish a standard set of requirements across the province for teachers. Hastings teachers said they would only accept QECO as implemented in 1975.

Everything Is Ducky

A couple of ducks have found an ideal place for a nest . . . in a mooring buoy in the basing of the National Yacht Club in Toronto. The enterprising ducks don't even have to leave home for food as one demonstrates his skill by reaching into the water and grabbing a floating fish. It's anybody's guess what will happen when a boat owner wants to use the floating home as a moor. (CP Photo)

Boaters Given Reprieve On Trent Lockage Fees

By AL ZARAS
Staff Reporter

TRENT — Boaters on the Trent Waterway here have been given an unexpected period of grace, with the Parks Canada office closed on Tuesday that lockage fees on the Trent will be paid, after all, until next month.

Information of the fees, the first in the history of the canal, was released last year, but today, the opening of the operating season on the canal, recently renamed Trent Waterway, Alan Kaiser, Parks Canada official, said Tuesday that June 1 is the "more realistic target date" for instituting the fees. But he said the data is not firm and may be altered, depending on action in Ottawa.

Gabriel's earlier information officer for Parks Canada, he said institution of the fee schedule has been held up in Ottawa, where final approval of the program is still awaited.

"For the first three years of the program, we had asked, with the delay in instituting fees in mind, that we have a chance to spread the word to the boaters here."

Setting of fees by the federal agency has come under fire from the public since Indian affairs Minister Arthur Laing announced the program in March. Mr. Bud Cole, Liberal member of parliament for Parks Canada, the agency that controls Canada's national historic sites and national parks.

Fees for use of locks on canals are set at 10 a day, $25 a month, and $50 a season (May to October) for boats under 16-foot in length.

For commercial vessels and boats over 16 feet, owners will pay $1 a day, $40 a month, and $80 a season. For both groups, the fees are charged throughout the season, regardless of how many times and canals will use locks during that period.

In addition, boaters using Parks Canada docking facilities will form a daily mooring fee, boat after which a $5 daily fee will be levied.

Passes will be available at boat locks, marinas and town Chamber of Commerce offices throughout the area.

Mr. Kaiser said recently he felt the public outcry over the fees arose because people felt it measure of the amount of money spent into Canadian canals by the federal government.

In 1973-74, Parks Canada spent $34.6-million to operate canals and another $15-million in capital costs. In addition, the agency plans a massive five-year, $100-million improvement program on its Rideau canal with $20-million in operating expenses.

On the Trent, 1975-76 plans call for $3.6-million in capital spending.

Mr. Kaiser said the boating public is being asked to pay seven per cent of operating costs for the Rideau.

"The survey of they've conducted the cost of Canadian taxpayers are kicking in 93," he said. "The problem is that boaters aren't paying fees along on canals all along.

The agency, he said, is not trying to fool anyone, but was forced to establish the fees when it asked the treasury board for money for its five-year improvement program. "The treasury board is not stupid, remember, you've got to get money from the user."

Surrounded!

Now there's a switch. Instead of the police surrounding, the police are surrounded — by children. About 40 Murray Centennial School children encircled OPP officer Gary Miller of Lindsay as he explained, and demonstrated fingerprinting by the provincial police force.

Student Police Display Attracts OPP Interest

BRIGHTON — A display depicting a segment of police history in Ontario covered one entire wall of a display room at provincial police headquarters in Brighton during an open house here Tuesday.

The display was produced by two Smithfield Public School pupils as a history project that subsequently sparked the interest of OPP officers, including relations officer Bill Rokowsky.

Constable Rokowsky asked the two girls, Kathy Landy, 14, and Lorene Rudkin, 15 to bring it to the open house, held in conjunction with Police Week in Ontario this year. Both girls expressed their pleasure, though shyly, at the reaction of public and police.

Miss Rudkin, whose uncle is an OPP officer in Yoho, said the project, which Miss Landy had been high among younger students, and Miss Landy herself, herself have showed little interest in some displeasure, "Some students, she said, tried to mock up the project."

Their project was among exhibits gathered by provincial police in Brighton for a series of public school tours for area children. An OPP patrol car, motorbike and motorcycle from Lindsay were made available.

County Education Levy Up by 14 Per Cent

BLOOMFIELD — The Prince Edward County Board of Education this year will spend more on a little school board in Ontario is operate below provincial collapse but the board of trustees have forced an increase of 13.2 per cent in over-all expenditures.

A press release issued by trustees states during the past five years the board has operated below provincial grouping ceiling and kept the local educational tax levy less than that of the initial year, 1969, when the county board was formed. Total of the educational taxlevies for Prince Edward's 18 municipalities for 1975 is $1,323,718. In comparison with $1,137,668 last year.

"This year, 1975, the board remains one of the few school boards in Ontario able to operate below provincial ceilings, but due to the pressure of inflation with increased costs in every major item of expenditure — salaries, supplies and equipment, heating oil, hydro, school bus transportation — overall costs have increased by 13.2 per cent," says the board.

It was noted an increase in expenditures normally reflects a similar adjustment in the local educational tax levy. Because, however, it is county assessment which is levied by almost 65 million, local ratepayers will actually experience an increase of approximately 14 per cent in their educational taxes.

Pupils On TV

BEAVER MEADOW — A Grade 5 class from Pinecrest Memorial School, Trenton, went on camera in Beaver Meadow on wednesday of a conservation competition sponsored by the Ontario Educational Communication Authority.

The 37 pupils who had visited the Beaver Meadow site in April returned Tuesday with their teacher Kevin Boyd, and a film crew who shot scenes for a segment of Ontario, Our Science Lab. The CBC TV network will broadcast the segment on Channel 11, will feature Pinecrest pupils, and will be shown on June 1, subject to moderator John Kozak.

Miss Bryant said her pupils surveyed plant life and bird and animal species during their first visit to the Prince Edward Region Conservation Authority site of Beaver Meadow. The students assessed the species found there in the spring and attempted to do "only what the beaver would — a suitable habitat."

The information was prepared for insertion in the centre of footage filmed with pupils shown from Beaver Meadow creek.

Tuesday's return visit to Beaver Meadow was followed the students to study how plant and animal life and to ask their questions for television interviewer Kim Kosak.

Miss Bryant and her class were accompanied on the field trip by Pinecrest principal Mr. Hal Ruhsey, Harry Lawrence, chairman of the Prince Edward Region Conservation Authority and Ian Mackie, a supervisor with the PERCA.

Miss Bryant's class will receive the Young Scientists Award earned in provincial competition.

Prime Minister's Residence Seems to Have Lost Some Hospitality

By RICHARD JACKSON
OTTAWA (CP) — The Prime Minister's official residence, a rambling gray stone mansion built for a fur trader in the last century, is being turned into a museum to remember how it was when Pierre Trudeau and family lived there and ran the country.

Trudeau, his wife Margaret and the Prime Minister's sons Michael and Alexandre have been moving in the Canadian capital to make way for the Mulroneys.

But, looking at the old corridors, paneled in dark wood, peeling on the edge of wallpaper that had for 100 years, swimming pool and the Spartan accommodations of the Ottawa River, who could tell the difference.

The stone house, a landmark since it was built, is a great place, guarded by the RCMP and surrounded by almost pathological privacy on which the Trudeaus have left behind.

Only a few of the "beautiful people", the elite or rarefied people, the stars or minor stars who made the Trudeau era gilted, yet to serve the antique elegance, the outrageously expensive tastes of the monarchs.

And of course, the provincial premiers, and at least some of the media people who were invited abroad when weight in national and international affairs lent more than the most secretive door of the official residence.

Congressional hungry is the style.

The fortress, courtesy of the Trudeaus, is a place of strictest, redecoration, refurbishing.

The rare and precious gifts, tribute from the world's leaders to a Prime Minister who has publicly announced he not only accepts, but relishes the ceremonial duties and who is to be given a Dowgift of protocol.

In the garage, the racy Mercedes sports job and the sleek grey Citroen, the armour plate and steel and bullet-proof glass, a Renault, one of a kind, a gift from the Quebec nationalist St. Jo a defeat of a beaten regime.

The place at once is a palace and a cave.

And the thing that disturbed many Canadians, that it lacked a function as the rust and retreat of them in High Places in the drastic, even radical way it has changed.

It used to be a, well, call it "people place," a sort of national community centre when first Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent, then John Diefenbaker and later, Lester Pearson lived there.

Mrs. St. Laurent used to bring in her small circle of intimates a dish of pot-au-feu (beef with vegetables whatever), bridge, and friends visiting played at the time, poker.

Warm, warm and hospitable and with not exactly open to the public, it was almost casually visited by friends of the Prime Minister and their children.

The welcome was even warmer and wider when the Diefenbakers moved in.

People were invited by the score.

Diplomats and politicians, of course or sometimes the whole family of Diefenbaker, their children, visiting IODE and church groups, journalists, both Ottawa and the Parliament Hill based in the Parliamentary Press Gallery, Everyone.

Dief, characteristically, made it a place of old cherry style to beat dry recollection, but those who knew Dief, his family and sometimes fortified the punch.

Gossip whispered that Dief kept a case of such secreted in his wife Olive's bedroom room and the Dief's people in by the score on the lawns of the Rideau Hall, Lake on occasion, barbecues.

It was all very chummy and very Dief with the wife of Prime Minister leading around in sneakers, slacks and a sport shirt.

Evenings and afternoons were filled with Dief and friends and years such as Mike Pearson's above, Mrs. Diefenbaker would have to pick up a pound of hamburger on the way home for the baby sitting events in so Liberal leader.

As the song goes, "Times were the days."

How changed now the times and the style.

Council Missed Boat

City manager Wilbur Purcell is to be congratulated for preventing city council with budget that represents only a 5.4 per cent increase in assessment over that of the previous year.

Naturally, increased senior government grants and higher assessment rolls helped, but, given such factors a spiralling salaries, Mr. Purcell did an excellent job in keeping the average taxpayer's additional levy to $40 this year.

There is always room for complaints about anything so complicated as a budget, depending on what particular axe one might have to grind.

We can expect a bevvy of complaints, for example, from Citizens' Bureau spokesmen — or their appointed letter-writers or talk-show phoners — after their $4,700 request was canned by council while such "establishment" organizations, as the YMCA and the Chamber of Commerce are often labelled by their critics, DID receive funding.

And the $4,800 city residents who can't make the 200-seat June "Friendship Flight" to Lake Ontario, will be too thrilled about a $1,000 wine and cheese party, courtesy Belleville tax money.

One budget proposal that got short shrift was a suggestion for shower facilities at Victoria Park to accommodate boaters. The estimated total cost would have been $3,500.

As of now, there are no shower facilities for visiting boaters, not even at the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club.

Tourism experts estimate holidaying boaters spend an average $100 a day, which would deposit a lot in Belleville tills at last year's average 33 guest boats per day.

One mustn't forget estimates that as many as a quarter of a million craft are expected to be in area waters to watch next summer's Olympic sailing events at Kingston.

In this one budget area, we feel Belleville councillors literally missed the boat.

Plumptre Quiet

Remember the Food Prices Review Board?

It has been quiet of late. The last known statement of its chairman, Beryl Plumptre, was two or three months ago perhaps, when she lamented the fact the board might be acquiring "respectability."

Public scepticism was being replaced by public acceptance, even support.

Of course there could be another reason. Food prices have stabilized somewhat. Even the price of sugar has dropped sharply.

Lest We Forget...

As each year takes us further away from World War II, changing attitudes make themselves evident concerning wartime "anniversaries."

There is the school of thought that feels the least a nation can do is pay honour to its sons who defended their country in battle.

Which of us would not buy a poppy in November?

But there is emerging another sentiment, one that says to celebrate past wars merely opens old wounds.

No less a personage than French president Valery Giscard d'Estaing has announced that his country will never again celebrate the anniversary of V-E Day, May 8.

He made the announcement after attending 30th anniversary celebrations of the day Nazi Germany surrendered unconditionally to Allied forces.

Here on the home front, where scarcely a day passes without another name appearing on the ever-lengthening list in veterans' clubs, one wonders about the future of such organizations.

— In Belleville, the Royal Canadian Legion Branch 99 has always actively supported minor sports.

The Duke of Edinburgh Unit, Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans are big in the air cadet movement.

The future of such groups lies in the hands of many who weren't born when VE Day bannered North American newspapers.

They must be conscious of the fact that, while remembering the past helps strengthen our democratic traditions, looking to the future assures that we keep them.

Portuguese Military Coup Signalled Shift to Left

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Events in tiny Portugal, once similarly ruled by Dong life of a dictatorship which began in 1926 with the late president Antonio Salazar in supreme control, are now as confusing as those of Latin American republics.

The military coup last year which overthrew right wing President Marcelo Caetano who had succeeded Salazar, was the handiwork of General Antonio Spinola, one of Portugal's best-known African guerrilla fighters.

On this basis, the coup of April, 1974 looked like one favoring the right wing, although General Spinola had written a revolutionary book calling for the end of Portuguese colonial rule in Africa and the substitution of a British-style Commonwealth over the former territories.

The Portuguese army has turned out to be as complex an organism as the dozen or more political parties which emerged as a result of General Spinola's coup, with even a Maoist element among its younger officers.

As for the parties themselves, the Communist party hatched in Portugal for half a century was easily enough to identify as is Alvaro Cunhal its leaseholder of no longer young leader.

The so-called "Armed Forces Movement" which "permitted" Portugal's first election in half a century, appeared to be more to the left than even the newly-emerging socialist and Catholic centre parties.

Ominous signs of the army's long-term intent was the pre-election announcement that the military would continue to rule for the benefit of the nation regardless of the results.

That could not have meant fear from a Communist victory at the polls, but rather the reverse, that the moderate centre parties would win.

In fact this latter happened, with one of the moderate parties winning, but not with sufficient support to form a strong democratic government.

Hence my opening remark about the growing confusion in politics in a nation once ruled by the heavy hand of a few.

What is certain, the shift to the left, was made clear by the various recent decrees of the Armed Forces Movement to nationalize just about every industry and already controlled by the state.

Foreign-owned banks, manufacturing subsidiaries, dealerships, sales agencies have all been taken over by the state. And if this trend as well as the leftist orientation of the Armed Forces Movement spells a "people's democracy," then this is what presently exists in Lisbon.

The next obvious stage is what all this political shifting means in a country which was the kingpin of Nato at the western entrance to the Mediterranean and whether the Azores Island bases would now be open to Soviet warships and factory trawlers looking for a South Atlantic base for maintenance and re-fueling.

Worried NATO naval brass interviewed here in Norfolk, Virginia, for all the NATO fleets, have been told by Lisbon not to worry. The Azores will still be available for use in the defences of Western Europe.

Here's how Canada's finance minister described our predicament, at almost the same moment that his friend, Secretary Simon, was dismissing the idea of an economic policy.

"Somehow in this country, we may or may not, we are going to have to bring our prices and our costs of production back to within international ranges with the United States, which is our principal market, and with the rates of our Europe and Japanese competitors."

Mr. Turner is correct in describing controls as more desirable than the alternative, mass unemployment.

But so is Mr. Simon, in rejecting controls, at least for the time being, where voluntary or even mandatory controls have proved satisfactory for more than a short period.

Events in Portugal, once similarly ruled by Dong life of a dictatorship which began in 1926 with the late president Antonio Salazar in supreme control, are now as confusing as those of Latin American republics.

The military coup last year which overthrew right wing President Marcelo Caetano who had succeeded Salazar, was the handiwork of General Antonio Spinola, one of Portugal's best-known African guerrilla fighters.

With Friends Like Simon, Who Needs Enemies?

By VINCENT EGAN

With friends like William Simon, John Turner doesn't need enemies.

The secretary of the treasury of the United States made a surprise visit last Friday with his Canadian counterpart, John Turner, to Ottawa, where they held a press conference and issued a joint statement of financial analysis.

At one time, it was the intention of the Ottawa Government to use the occasion to publicize what was thought to be friendship with the Nixon Administration, but the Finance Minister Turner has not had much to boast about in his relationship with Washington since he became the chief spokesman for the Liberal government.

Mr. Turner, a Liberal, was elected on a platform of

Park Lowers Rate For Area Residents

MARMORA — In an effort to interest more village residents to use the facilities at Bonaker Park, provision has been made in a new set of rates, drawn up by the joint Marmora — Village-Marmora and Lake Townships parks committee, for a discount to local users.

Coun. Gordon Bennett of Marmora, chairman of the joint committee, recently outlined the new proposals which include a reduction from 40 to 30 trailers to be allowed seasonal space at the park; 20 spaces left open for overnight or week-long visitors; rental fees to be paid in advance; no rights to be carried from one season to the next; trailers must be removed before winter; and only canvas awnings may be attached while the trailers are in use during the summer.

The committee has approved an increase in the weekly pay of caretaker Clayton Smith to $135 plus living accommodation and gave permission for him to operate a concession booth in the park.

New rate cards will be printed with the rules on the reverse for distribution by Mr. Smith to people entering the park.

On Their Way

Five years after an exchange visit from students from Webster City, Iowa, students of North Trenton School are repaying the visit. Students raised the $2,000 bus fare and expenses for the trip with a variety of projects; Thirty Grade 5 and 6 students boarded the bus Sunday and will return next Sunday. School principal Murray Workman, while teaching in Belleville, was host five years ago to students from the Iowa city. On the trip are students from Trenton and the southwestern part of Hastings County.

Water System Top Priority

MARMORA — Coun. Bert Gray, chairman of fire, water and sewage for village council, says his committee will have to take a close look at all new items to be included in the 1975 budget including the badly-needed new fire truck in light of the increased county demand and education levy. He points out top priority must be the water system which has to be put into proper condition in case of fire.

Hastings Highlights

More Industry Sought

MARMORA — An inquiry as to how this village should go about obtaining an industry will be sent to Claude Bennett, provincial minister of industry and tourism.

Jack Reynolds, village reeve, says he has been urged by businessmen to inquire and has contacted Clarke Rollins, Hastings M.L.A. on how to proceed.

Reeve Reynolds says he thinks Mr. Bennett might arrange to hold a meeting with all interested area councils resulting in the possible formation of an industrial development committee.

Village Held Responsible

MARMORA — Donald and Marie Logan, village residents, have advised Marmora council they are holding the village responsible for damages to their house on Forsyth St. during the recent sewage installation. The claim will be relayed to the contractor, Clairson Construction Co., for investigation.

Razing Razzed

MARMORA — When village councillors here want a job done, they want it done quickly. William Shannon, village clerk-treasurer, has been directed by council to write the building inspector for Hastings County and ask why a long-standing, partially-demolished house on Mary St. has not been razed to the ground.

Council Ups Rent

MARMORA — Rents on two apartments in the Memorial Building here will be raised by $65 and $20 following a review by village council's property committee under Chairman David McLellan.

One of the apartments recently underwent extensive renovations and the committee says it feels the new rates are more in line with similar accommodations elsewhere in the village.

The new rents are effective July 1.

INTRODUCING A NEW BEER

WHO'S GOING TO DRINK IT?

Cool Spring is a new light beer brewed especially for the person who likes the refreshment of a beer but wants a lighter taste. Cool Spring contains less alcohol than other Canadian beers. (For example, most beers offer around 5% alcohol by volume; Cool Spring's content is 3.9%). It's been brewed for the person who enjoys a light beer, now and then. But who is that person? It could be the business executive out at his local. A couple relaxing at home. Or a guy who likes to balance a large sandwich with a light refreshment.

Choosing a beer is a personal thing. And there are just as many reasons to drink Cool Spring as there are people who enjoy it. But wherever or whenever, we think that Cool Spring has a unique lightness which will appeal to people who enjoy the refreshment of a light beer. Now and then.

Cool Spring by Labatt's. Maybe it's for you.

LIGHT, REFRESHING

Cool Spring

MAYBE IT'S FOR YOU

Ann Landers

Impotency 'Vicious Circle'

Dear Ann Landers: I could have written that letter signed, "Married In Name Only." I also read the tie-in letter signed "Most Happy Fella." He told about how his wife dealt with his impotency.

I very that man. He is fortunate to have such a understanding partner.

However, having first said the prettiest speech for two years (I'm 72 or my sex, my husband is in his late 60s) I know that the frustration and guilt can be devastating.

It's a vicious circle, Ann. When a man becomes incapable of functioning sexually, the natural response of a wife who loves him is to feel rejected. The more rejected she feels, the more he is turned off by guilt and fear of failure.

Many of my wives with impotent husbands do keep trying and don't become discouraged. Every married woman is entitled to a sex life, too. Furthermore, the husband who isn't making the grade feels the loss of a man—and that often leads to other problems.—Suffering Betty

Dear B. B.: Thanks for the report from the four-poster. Would it surprise you to know that male impotency is not a problem confined to middle age? It's the No. 1 complaint heard in the health clinics on our country's campuses.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 27-year-old girl, so I know a thing with sense. I'm ashamed to be writing about this trifle but I need to know if I'm right or wrong.

There's this huge picture of my mother on the plate in our living room. It's 12 by 14 and you can't miss it. The picture was taken 15 years ago, at least. Mom was 35, lighter then, her hair was a different color and she wasn't wearing glasses in those days. I also might add the photographer must have been a genius. He made Mom look like Liv Ullman.

At least a dozen kids have asked, "Who's that?" When I say, "It's my mother, five years ago," they always make some remark like—"Boy you has changed." or "What happened to her? She doesn't look like that NOW! It's very embarrassing.

I don't want to hurt Mom's feelings but I really think that picture ought to go. For one thing I can't understand why a woman would want to have something around that emphasizes how much she has aged.

Should I keep my mouth shut or should I say something? If so, what?—Ex Ex

Dear Ex: Tell your mom the picture on the plate is out of date and she now has a more mature beauty you'd love to see captured on film. Urge her to replace the old picture with a new one. And by all means suggest that she use the same photographer—if he's still living.

Dear Ann Landers: Air-conditioning weather will be here before we know it. Help! Please!

Three women who in this office are in the change of life. They are alternately freezing and sweating, turning the thermostats off and on. The thermostat is the prerogative of the oldest and younger women hate it. What can be done?—Very Hot

Dear U. P.: The menopausal ladies should wear light cotton dresses and keep a cocktail handy. Orders from "on high" should be posted: "No one is permitted to touch the thermostats." The majority should decide on the desired temperature and that should settle it.

Doris Clark

Puppets Are Teachers

When do you think of puppet shows as educational aids?

World Literacy of Canada's Literacy House in India discovered that the form of entertaining was traditional in remote parts of Eastern India, so it was adapted for adult education.

Puppets are just little dolls, aren't they? So they are ideal for showing, as they do, without castes or prejudice; they can make fun of and criticize without offending people.

World Literacy is finding them particularly appropriate in dealing with such topics as family planning, co-operatives, money lenders and corruption.

Important note: World Literacy of Canada is asking organizations and private individuals to write, the Ontario institute for studies in the development of an Ontario Country Life Museum Agencies. The Prairie Provinces have museums, but no "Ontario" one.

Dear Doris: I am living common-law with a divorced man who led me to believe we would be married. He has mistreated me and I have found him to be TWO. His defence is, "A lie like that doesn't hurt."

As far as I'm concerned all lies hurt.

He is the father of two children. He says that he is proud of them. He calls, on each of his birthdays, and I call me a B-. He continues to wear the ring his ex-wife gave him as a gift. Do you think this indicates he cares for her?

Your insulted: He is selfdefined and immature. I don't think he wears the ring because he cares about his ex-wife; but because he is vain and wants to have some jewellery on.

This is a situation in which you need the services of a trained social worker.

Dear Doris: I have a sister. Doris cou. I use your sister's column (no cooking) very often. So I feel that I should know you both. Often the first step in setting our problems straight is putting the basic problem on paper to discover we trust to understand us.

I have been a widow eight years now and it took a long time to adjust. I now belong to Widows United, a year-old club of Kingston and area. Alma are: can, to most widely; and too, to protect, through legislation, financial and legal discrimination against widows. When we feel big enough we plan to help others starting to get set up on their own clubs.

All widows are welcome and we put a strong front forward for our rights, such as more pension money, (some company pensions end, being payable to a man's widow); less reluctance to rent to widows, etc.

You would be surprised at the number of ways in which widows are downgraded.

Dear Doris: Before About This. Dear Sorlen: More power to you! It women to present and seeking better status (as they are, through the Status of Women Committee), some of the concessions are bound to benefit widows. I'll be glad to pass along your address to Widows United.

Putting a problem on paper is a fine, analytical way of sorting it out. Having an understanding friend makes it twice as valuable.

Volunteer Marion Townsley is greeted by Phillip Rickard, Kerry Marshall and Bill McCrea.

Tea Honors Volunteers

Senior Belleville General Hospital staff served members of the hospital auxiliary Tuesday at the annual Board of Governors tea.

The event, which is designed to honor the volunteers who work at the hospital, took place at Education Hall.

Guests were welcomed by auxiliary president Selma Bochnak; chairman of the board of governors Carl Bateman; Kerry Marshall, director of nursing; Bill McCrea, warden of Hastings County and Phillip Rickard, executive director of the hospital.

Tea poured were Shirley Kelleher, chief medical records librarian; Jim [illegible]nor, employee health supervisor; Kerry Marshall; Phillip Vaughan, discharge planning officer; Margaret Barrett, nursing office; Lilly Cheng, speech pathologist; Shirley Gallinger, admitting officer; Mrs. J. E. Marsh, board of governors.

Serving tea were Dr. Reg Anderson, Ray Krock, Ivan Wright, John Campbell, Helen Schooer, Ross Christian, Dalton Pratt, Lionel Cormier, Jim Talker, Dr. Robert Smith and Jerry Fraser.

Brings Fathers Back

CHATHAM, Ont. (CP) — Dr. Ross Parks of the Fairs Research Institute in Yellowspings, Ohio, says new fathers have been a biological necessity but a social accident for too long. He told a meeting that because fathers have had to view their infants through hospital glass and touching is taboo, his studies put both parents with the infant from the time of birth. He said that fathers tended to hold, talk, rock and touch the infant more than mothers in the second or third day of its life.

Showed Approval

CALGARY (CP) — A satisfied customer showed her appreciation to Canadian Western Natural Gas Co. Ltd. in a manner which all the employees in the marketing department could enjoy. The company reported that the customer, pleased with her new gas range, baked 30 apple pies in her new appliance and sent them over to the marketing department.

Serve Asparagus in Great Classic Ways

That popular French cooking book, Mastering the Art of French Cooking, says that you must always peel asparagus to produce a tender but not limp fresh-tasting vegetable.

Other authorities prefer steaming just the tips while boiling the tender butts. Still others dispense with anything but the tendrest tips. Home growers swear by this method, others say the fat bites once are the most tender.

When choosing asparagus pick firm, moist spears with compact tips.

To prepare in the French way, peel with a knife, beginning at the butt end, paring as deep as one-eighth inch and setting more shallowly towards the tip. Tie the asparagus in bundles about three inches in diameter — its once near the base and once near the tip.

Lay the asparagus bundles in the rapidly boiling salted water and bring water to the boil again as quickly as possible. Boil 12 minutes. Pick up by strings and allow to drain briefly over pot. Place on serving platter and cut strings. Serve.

Hot asparagus cooked in the above fashion or by any other plain method may be served as is or with one of several classic sauces.

A Hollandaise is traditional, as is a lemon butter sauce.

Lemon Butter Sauce.

¼ cup lemon juice
dash salt
dash white pepper
¼ lb. butter, chilled

Boil down the lemon juice with the salt and pepper until it is reduced by two-thirds. Cut the butter into eight pieces. Remove juice from heat and beat in two pieces of butter. Put over low heat and beat in the rest of the butter one piece at a time, to make a thick sauce. Remove from heat and serve.

Hollandaise

¼ cup butter
two tbsp. lemon juice
¼ tsp. salt
dash white pepper
four egg yolks

Heat butter until bubbling. Place egg yolks, lemon juice, salt and pepper in blender. Turn blender on and off again quickly. Then turn to very high speed and slowly add the bubbling butter in a very thin steady stream. Turn off blender and serve immediately.

* * *

Cold asparagus can be served with a mustard sauce or in a simple French dressing or with home-made mayonnaise.

Mustard Sauce

two tbsp. Dijon mustard three tbsp. boiling water one-third cup oil salt and pepper
one tsp. lemon juice
two tbsp. parsley

In a small mixing bowl, beat mustard with a wire whisk, adding the boiling water by droplets. Beat in the olive oil by droplets to make a thick, creamy sauce. Beat in salt, pepper and lemon juice and add parsley.

Asparagus Vinaigrette

asparagus
one clove garlic
¼ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
one tsp oregano
¼ tsp. mustard
3½ tbsp cider vinegar
¼ cup olive oil

Cook asparagus by your favorite method, leaving it slightly underdone. Drain well. Combine remaining ingredients and pour over the asparagus in a shallow glass or stainless steel pan. Cover lightly with foil and refrigerate for at least three hours, basting occasionally. Serve as a salad on a bed of lettuce or as a cold vegetable on the buffet table.

* * *

In traditional cuisine, asparagus is most often combined with eggs and cheese or chicken. Here are some classic recipes.

Asparagus Quiche

four eggs
1½ cups milk
¼ tsp. nutmeg
¼ tsp. pepper
one cup shredded swiss cheese
¼ cup mild onion, minced
2 to 10 asparagus spears
unbaked pie shell.

Precook asparagus spears until just tender. Reserve about four inch sections of the tender tips, dice the bottom part of the stalks.

Preheat the oven to 400. In a large bowl, beat eggs slightly. Beat in 1½ cups milk, nutmeg and pepper until well blended. Stir in diced asparagus. Sprinkle cheese and onion in the bottom of the pie shell and pour in egg mix. Lay spears in egg mix, radiating from the centre. Place in oven and reduce heat to 375. Bake 35 minutes. Let pie cool in pan on cooling rack for 15 minutes, then cut and serve. Serves 6 to 8.

Chicken with Asparagus cold sliced chicken

asparagus spears
toast

Lay chicken slices on hot buttered toast. Add asparagus spears and top with warm Hollandaise. Serve immediately.

Asparagus Crepes with Tarragon Cheese Sauce

Crepes:
three eggs
two cups milk
one tsp. salt
one cup flour
two tbsp. butter, melted

Beat the eggs, add the milk, and beat together.

In another bowl, sift the flour and salt. Pour the egg and milk mixture into the flour slowly, mixing it thoroughly. Stir briskly, add melted butter and mix it in well.

Pour the crepe batter onto a hot, greased griddle, one small ladle at a time, spreading the batter out thinly in a circle. When the crepe begins to form small bubbles all over its surface, use an egg flipper to turn it over. Cook for another minute or two, and then place on an ovenproof plate in a warm oven until serving.

This recipe makes 30 small, or 16 medium crepes.

Sauce:
two tbsp. butter
two tbsp. flour
one cup milk (approximately) two cups grated sharp cheddar
¼ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. black pepper, coarsely ground one tbsp. dried tarragon, or more one dry white wine, approx.

Melt the butter in a saucepan, add the flour slowly, stirring it into the butter to make a paste. Over slow heat, add the milk bit by bit, stirring all the while until there are no lumps. Increase or decrease the amount of milk as you require, to make a light, creamy sauce.

Add the salt, pepper and tarragon to the sauce. Stirring free to take a heavy hand with the tarragon since its flavor is what makes this sauce so distinctive. Add the cheese slowly, and stir until it is dissolved. Continue cooking over a low heat until the sauce becomes quite thick.

A few minutes before serving, add the wine, and stir the sauce vigorously, to lighten its consistency. More or less wine can be added as you require.

While the sauce is cooking, and while you are preparing the crepes, cook 30 spears of asparagus (five for each medium-sized crepe) according to your usual method, being sure to keep them bright green in color and cooked only until tender, not soupy.

Wrap five spears of asparagus in each crepe, rolling each one into a neat, slim cylinder. Place on heated dinner plates, two for each person, or serve all together on a large, heated platter.

Pour the bubbling cheese sauce over the crepes, and garnish with fresh parsley.

Secretive Officials Plague Baffin Editor

FROBISHER BAY, N.W.T. (CP) — The Baffin Island's largest newspaper has a circulation of about 1,500 and is printed in settlies by hundreds of miles from Ottawa. But Nedra Grossavy, editor of the weekly, is always in a hurry.

She says the weekly is over-staffed, distributed by over-staffed airplanes and many other parts of the world, are trouble-free and not quite crazy.

Some local officials are unpreachable, she said, but other refuse to get beyond the traditional "no comment."

"It depends on the guy and how secrete he is, I guess."

Many also an aath-years at subtlety, government service, but Mrs. Grossavy said this was an unacceptable excuse. "It doesn't mean that a person can't speak officially."

She said FRIDAY, Baffin is one of the world's most heavily peopled areas and still has no a permanent policy in the matter of bilingual services in northern Canada.

The newspaper, which is the only tongue of 60 per cent of the Eskimo population, is published in both Eskimo and English.

The policy more than doubles the cost of publishing the edition, the editor said. Besides twice-double staff to cover events, the paper maintains translators for Eskimo.

Furthermore, many residents are limited in their ability to read either English or Inuktitut, so stories must be written as simply as possible. One of the paper's features is a weekly lesson in Inuktitut for English-speaking readers.

Gathering news in the Arctic had been made somewhat less difficult with introduction of the Anik satellite last November, she said, but many Baffin settlements are just now being visited for the new system and must be visited by the regular jet-plane helicopter.

Mrs. Grossavy devotes up to five pages of each issue to interviews in the Eskimo, which is quite likely because "people perceive it more as a way things in their own way."

While the paper has been just limping along on great money since its beginning, she said, it now gets a per cent of its own costs.

One of her problems is to convince southern advertisers and government departments that bulk material should appear both in English and Eskimo.

But Mrs. Grossavy sees Eskimo news reporting as the main challenge. Until recently, all of it had to be translated from English.

"The whole concept of Eskimo news is different," she said. "We need more freedom for the staff in order to have a uniquely Eskimo style of news-gathering.

Nedra Grossavy, editor of Baffin Island's largest newspaper, has problems shared by editors every where. She says the weekly Iqaluit, which is distributed all over Canada's North and in many other parts of the world, has trouble with government secrecy. Some local officials are approachable, she said, but others refuse to go beyond the traditional "no comment." (CP Photo)

Painter Started When 45

TORONTO (CP) — "I didn't paint until I was 45 years old, and then I painted rather vigorously late in."

The speaker is Rafael Fabley, 57-year-old graduate conservator of German literature at University of Toronto and internationally-known scholar and author of perhaps the finest English translation of Goethe's Faust.

Fabley and his friend Robert Finch gave Mr. Fabley the push into the world of painting, prescribing him his original career.

The new-productive painter, who has many oil-cum thrown and watercolors and landscapes, said when Robert Finch took him out "catching" that was it.

"My style became established immediately," he said.

The color which boys and contrast rules of the painter's creations is raw umber, an earthy yellow-brown.

"I went to buy a tube for the first time and that's the same raw umber, so I keep on again," Fabr Fabley said. "I can't paint without it now."

'Adult' Magazines Irk Milk Store Manager

EDMONTON (CP) — There's more than a loaf of bread and a quart of milk available at the store.

Adult magazines, some more explicit than the glossy American variety, are gracing the shelves of many 24-milk outlets and late-night convenience stores.

"It's getting to the stage where they are becoming shamed-obnoxious that the average individual could be offended by them," said convenience store manager Don Ames.

"I sent one back last week," Mr. Ames said there seem to be more adult magazines than ever before coming into grocery stores, including "a lot from France." He had received few complaints from customers, but acknowledged that he keeps an eye out for children looking at the adult publications.

"There are some that might look at a magazine that they shouldn't, but most kids seem more interested in comics."

Emil Gorod, a corner-store operator, said:

"As soon as I get some complaints, I send back the less-revealing magazines. What really hurts is the person who doesn't complain, but just don't come back. I'd rather they spoke up."

The police morality division has received a few complaints about sex-oriented magazines said in neighborhood stores.

"Sometimes they're anonymous calls saying what are you going to do anything about it," said S.Sgt. Ken Andrews.

Provincial News, which supplies magazines to retail outlets in and north of Red Deer, said about 250,000 copies a month of adult magazines are sent to stores. Steve Sztuki, sales manager for the firm, said certain stores and chain stores are "trying a lot more than in the past because society has been accepting the fact a thing more and more in the last few years."
